PREFATORY NOTE

It is the purpose of this official publication to make available to the public, in an orderly and accessible form, decisions issued under regulatory laws administered by the Department of Agriculture.

The decisions published herein may be described generally as decisions which are made in proceedings of a quasi-judicial character, and which, under the applicable statutes, can be made by the Secretary of Agriculture, or an officer authorized by law to act in his stead, only after notice and hearing or opportunity for a hearing. These decisions do not include rules and regulations of general applicability which are required to be published in the Federal Register.

The principal statutes concerned are the Agricultural Marketing Act of 1946 (7 U.S.C. 1621 et seq.), the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937 (7 U.S.C. 601 et seq.), the Animal Quarantine and Related Laws (21 U.S.C. 111 et seq.), the Animal Welfare Act (7 U.S.C. 2131 et seq.), the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 601 et seq.), the Grain Standards Act (7 U.S.C. 1821 et seq.), the Horse Protection Act (15 U.S.C. 1821 et seq.), the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921 (7 U.S.C. 181 et seq.), the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930 (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.), the Plant Quarantine Act (7 U.S.C. 151 et seq.), the Poultry Products Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 451 et seq.), and the Virus-Serum-Toxin Act of 1913 (21 U.S.C. 151–158).

The decisions published herein are arranged alphabetically by statute and within the statute section by date of issue or date the decision became final after expiration of the appeal period. They may be cited by giving the volume and page, for illustration, 1 A.D. 472 (1942). It is unnecessary to cite the docket or decision number. Prior to 1942 the Secretary's decisions were identified by docket and decision numbers, for example, D–578; S. 1150. Such citation of a case in these volumes generally indicates that the decision is not published in Agriculture Decisions.

Current court decisions involving the regulatory laws administered by the Department of Agriculture are published herein.

In re: SEQUOIA ORANGE CO. INC., AMA Docket No. F&V 908-2. Decided January 15, 1986.

Decision by Donald A. Campbell, Judicial Officer.

REMAND ORDER

On January 7, 1986, Administrative Law Judge Victor W. Palmer certified to the Judicial Officer the question as to whether petitioner's counsel should not be permitted to participate in this proceeding because of his prior work and responsibilities as Assistant General Counsel in the Marketing Division, Office of the General Counsel, United States Department of Agriculture. Petitioner's counsel has this day withdrawn from the proceeding and, therefore, that issue is now moot. Accordingly, the case is remanded to the Administrative Law Judge for further proceedings.

In re: SEQUOIA ORANGE CO. INC., AMA Docket No. F&V 910-7. Decided February 13, 1986.

Gregory Cooper, for complainant.
James Moody, Capital Legal Foundation, Washington, D.C., for respondent.

Decision by William J. Weber, Administrative Law Judge.

ORDER GRANTING MOTION TO DISMISS

The marketing of lemons grown in central and southern California, and Arizona, is controlled by a marketing order.[1]

The purpose of a marketing agreement (or order) is to "establish and maintain such orderly marketing conditions as will establish and maintain parity prices for growers, while at the same time protecting the interests of consumers (7 USC § 602)." In re Sequoia Orange Co., Inc., and Exeter Orange Co., Inc., 41 Agric. Dec. 1511, 1511-12 (1982).

The marketing order limits the quantity of lemons grown in the regulated area that may be "handled." [2]

The marketing order provides for a Committee (Lemon Administrative Committee) consisting of growers, handlers and a nonin-

[1] Lemons Grown in California and Arizona, 7 CFR 910; Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, 7 USC 601.

[2] Simplistically, for purposes here, "handle" means to buy and/or ship regulated lemons for fresh market use in Canada or the United States. (7 CFR 910.6, 910.7)

Generally, lemons, grown in the regulated area, used by charitable institutions, relief agencies or processing manufacturers to make juice or some by-product are excluded from regulation (7 CFR 910.80).

dustry member to administer, implement, oversee, report and recommend to the Secretary on matters pertinent to the marketing of lemons from the regulated area (7 CFR 910.30, 910.31, 910.32, 910.33).

The Committee is a creature of, and for, the marketing order. It uses its collective expertise to carry out its duties and make recommendations to the Secretary. Its composition and structure is controlled by detailed provisions in the marketing order (7 CFR 910.20–910.33).

One of its functions is to annually compile a Marketing Policy covering pertinent information and recommendations for the following marketing year, including its recommendation concerning the quantity of lemons which the Committee deems advisable to be handled weekly during the following year (7 CFR 910.50, 910.51).

The Secretary may, based on that recommendation and the supporting data and rationale, and "from other available information," determine that limiting the quantity of lemons to be handled during any week will tend to carry out the declared policy of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937 (7 USC 601; "Act").

The Marketing Policy submitted by the Committee each year to the Secretary provides information concerning: (1) the supply, quality and sizes of lemons available in each district (within the marketing order), (2) estimates concerning the domestic, export, by-product and other uses of lemons, (3) a proposed schedule for weekly shipments to the fresh market in the United States and Canada, (4) the level and trend of consumer income, (5) estimates concerning competitive citrus commodities, and (6) any other pertinent information. Any revisions must cover similar updated information (7 CFR 910.50).

In making its decision to regulate lemons, the Committee must consider income trends, weather conditions, prices and other relevant factors. Changes may be recommended from time to time, as may be warranted (7 CFR 910.51).

Based upon this and any "other available information" (7 CFR 910.52), the Secretary may limit the quantity of lemons to be handled during any particular week(s).

The Petitioner is a handler regulated by this Lemon Marketing Order. Petitioner seeks an "order (a) declaring that the 1984–85 [Marketing] Policy and weekly prorate [base] are not in accordance with law, and (b) exempting [Petitioner] Sequoia from the obligations imposed by the [Marketing] Policy and weekly prorate." (Page 36 of the Petition).

In simplified terms, for purposes here, the weekly prorate base is the ratio between the lemons that a handler has (qualifying to be "handled" by a handler that week) and the total of all such lemons all handlers have had that time.[3]

The handler is then authorized to handle the percentage of the total quantity of lemons fixed by the Secretary to be handled that week. Thus, the weekly prorate base is a key figure in the computation of the handlers' weekly allotments [4] for shipment of lemons for fresh use in the United States or Canada. In re Sequoia Orange, supra, at page 1513.

Petitioner challenges the 1984-85 Marketing Policy filed by the Lemon Adminstrative Committee and the weekly proration system from a variety of angles and levels:

- Inability to participate in the formulation of the Marketing Policy (as prepared by the Committee) and the establishment of weekly prorate allotments.[5]
- Arbitrary and capricious "rubber stamping" of the Marketing Policy by the Secretary, without independent scrutiny or consideration of alternatives or other evidence, etc., constitutes an abuse of discretion.
- Conflicts between the Marketing Policy and USDA guidelines.
- Failure of the Secretary to consider alternatives to the weekly proration system, to comply with requirements of the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 USC § 601), Executive Order 12291 and the Secretary's Memorandum 1512-1 (issued June 11 1981 to implement Executive Order (12291).
- Because supply controls violate due process, equal protection and the requirement for just compensation for deprivation of property rights, all as protected by the Fifth Amendment.

[3] The weekly prorate base is "the ratio expressed in percentage terms, between the average weekly pick for each applicant handler and the total of such average weekly picks for all applicant handlers (7 CFR § 910.53(d), .153(c)(2))." In re Sequoia Orange, et al, supra, at page 1513.

[4] This allotment may be temporarily increased in several specified manners. In re Sequoia Orange, supra, at page 1513-14.

[5] Essentially these are division titles paraphrased to make the apparent point to which the supporting material seems directed.

- Because the Market Policy and the weekly proration system are contrary to the historical purpose(s) of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act, and violate it in five respects, and frustrate the Congressional intent.
- Because the Market Policy impedes achievement of orderly marketing.
- Because the Market Policy and the weekly proration system cause disorderly marketing.
- Because the Market Policy fails to establish parity prices.
- Because the Market Policy and weekly proration system are inequitable and discriminate against Petitioner.
- Because the Market Policy creates/uses an illegal and unauthorized classified pricing scheme.
- Because the weekly proration system fails to achieve parity prices, depresses grower income, is wasteful, distorts the marketing season, implements an illegal classified pricing scheme, contributes to inequities in grower income, fuels chronic overproduction, suppresses commercial initiatives, destroys the balance between supply and demand, fails to achieve the objectives of and frustrates the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act, the Secretary has a mandatory duty to terminate the use of the weekly proration system and set aside the Market Policy.
- Because the Market Policy and the weekly proration system take Petitioner's property without compensation and violate its substantive and procedural due process rights, and deny it equal protection, all as protected by the Fifth Amendment, the relief sought should be granted.

Each of these divisions is supported by a brief argument of a legal, economic, historical or philosophical character.

It is not feasible to require Respondent to answer these arguments as if they were pleadings of a factual nature or character.

Essentially, as illustrated by Petitioner's response to the Motion to Dismiss, Petitioner seems to be inviting counter-argument from Respondent.

An adversarial hearing is predicated on an ability to formulate a set of issues with certain dimensions and limits, so that rulings may properly be made on relevancy and materiality of proffered evidence.

With such broad ranging assertions which make up the Petition, there could not reasonably be effective control of the proceedings on questions of relevancy and materiality.

Somewhere, Petitioner could find and point to some word, phrase, sentence or paragraph, and argue with some merit that the evidence they wish to present, directly or indirectly, relates to an issue based on or related to that "allegation."

Blending generalized and vague contentions with a short generalized and conclusory argument, as done here, is a pandora's box.

Petitioner's Response to the Motion to Dismiss, is mainly directed to the merits of their position, rather than the pleadings that set forth their position.

A threshold issue here is the character of the Petition as a pleading, not the merit of Petitioner's position.

Respondent cannot be compelled to answer this Petition selectively admitting or denying "allegations." The risk is that Respondent would take a safe position, denying everything, and further frustrate formulation of an issue-structure on which to proceed.

Control of the proceedings cannot/should not be relinquished to Petitioner through the vague generalized contentions and arguments which constitute the Petition.

Further, "Petitioner cannot place upon others the responsibility to sort through [this 37 page] Petition to determine whether or not a set of allegations may be patched together . . ." In re Sequoia Orange, supra, at page 1518.

The Petitioner does not comply with 7 CFR 900.52(b) which requires a Petition to contain a:

> "(2) Reference to the specific terms or provisions of the order, or the interpretation or application thereof, which are complained of;
> (3) A full statement of the facts (avoiding a mere repetition of detailed evidence) upon which the petition is based, and which it is desired that the Secretary consider, setting forth clearly and concisely . . . the manner in which petitioner claims to be affected by the terms or provisions of the order, or the interpretation or application thereof, which are complained of;

(4) A statement of the grounds on which the terms or provisions of the order, or the interpretation or application thereof, which are complained of, are challenged as not in accordance with law . . ."

In addition to the pleading difficulties, the Petition has other deficiencies of a legal character. Petitioner has distorted concepts of the law, procedure and facts, which cause confusion and ambiguity.

Respondent persuasively and ably covered them in the following extracts from its Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support of Respondent's Motion to Dismiss:

"II. The Petition Fails To State A Sufficient Claim

In order to conform with the AMAA as required by the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 900.52(c)), it is endemic that a petition must state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Aside from the obvious facial infirmity of the petition, an analysis of the true nature of the petition and the relief sought reveals its substantive failure to state such a claim.

The petition claims to seek relief from the 1984–85 marketing policy (7 CFR 910.50) and the weekly prorate regulations issued pursuant to 7 CFR 910.52. The marketing policy, which was issued July 10, 1984 (see, Exhibit to petition), and the prorate regulations apply to a fiscal year which began on August 1, 1984, and will end on July 31, 1985 (7 CFR 910.10). Yet, petitioner did not file its overly long petition until the end of April 1985. The petitioner, and its attorney, should be extremely familiar with the Department's applicable rules of practice from their numerous other petitions. It is inconceivable that petitioner could have anticipated relief before the end of the fiscal year to which the complained of documents are applicable. If this were truly the case, the Administrative Law Judge might just as well dismiss the petition at this point for mootness.

The petition, however, is really not attacking this marketing policy document or these particular weekly prorate regulations. Indeed, throughout its 37 pages it fails to object to any facts and figures of these specific documents. Rather, the petition is a backdoor approach to attacking the Lemon Order provisions that authorize these documents. The objections would be just as applicable to next year's or last year's marketing policy and prorate regulations as they would be to this year's. The method of petitioner's attack is to allege that a conglomeration of statutes, orders, guidelines, etc. cause the Lemon Order provisions to be unlawful. As will be demonstrated below, each of these grounds is legally defective and, thus, the petition fails to state a claim upon which relief could be granted under 7 U.S.C. 608c(15)(A) and the petition should be dismissed.

Before considering the specific allegations, one must differentiate between the marketing policy and the weekly prorate regulations. Under section 910.50 of the Lemon Order, near the beginning of the fiscal year the Lemon Administrative Committee (hereinafter LAC) meets and prepares a marketing policy containing various information specified in said section. If substantial modifications become advisable during the fiscal year, the LAC may meet and prepare a revised marketing policy. The marketing policy is derived from these LAC meetings and is submitted to the Secretary. The marketing policy is a document which contains a compilation of factual data concerning lemons and the collective expertise of the industry as to the current economic situation, the forecast for the coming year, the recommended actions to be taken during the year, and a general schedule as to when particular actions should be taken. Under the Lemon Order, the marketing policy imposes no restrictions, limitations or obligations on anybody. In the hands of the Secrtary, it is an evidentiary document of information and advice which can be weighed and considered along with all other available information and advice in reaching any determinations the Secretary might make. Since the marketing policy cannot affect or impose an obligation on petitioner under the Lemon Order it is not a proper subject of a petition under 7 U.S.C. 608c(15)(A) or section 900.52(b)(3) of the Rules of Practice and, thus, any allegations in the petition concerning the marketing policy must ultimately be unavailing of relief and should be dismissed.

The weekly prorate regulations, on the other hand, do impose obligations on the petitioner and all other handlers in the industry. During the year, the LAC investigates the supply and demand conditions on a weekly basis and considers certain specified factors (7 CFR 910.51). If the LAC believes handling restrictions are advisable for any week, it makes certain recommendations to the Secretary (7 CFR 910.51). Based on the LAC information and recommendations and all other available information, the Secretary determines whether a limitation is necessary and the amount of such limitation (7 CFR 910.52). It is this determination by the Secretary, effectuated through informal rulemaking in the Federal Register, that imposes legally enforceable obligations on the handlers. The subdivision of this industry-wide limitation to each particular handler is a ministerial act done by the LAC on the basis of formula contained in the Lemon Order, and subject to certain flexibility options which may be exercised by each handler (7 CFR 910.53-910.63). Therefore, the weekly prorate regulations promulgated in the Federal Register by the Secretary are the proper subject of a 7 U.S.C. 608c(15)(A) proceeding. The grounds alleged by petitioner in this proceeding, however, fail to comply with the AMAA in that they fail to state a claim upon which the prorate regulations could be invalidated and the relief requested could be granted.

The remainder of this memorandum will discuss the infirmity of each of the particular grounds alleged by petitioner.

A. The Administrative Procedure Act

The AMAA specifically authorizes volume control provisions for marketing orders such as are incorporated in the lemon order. (7 U.S.C. § 608c(6)). A marketing order containing such provisions must be promulgated after notice and public hearing when the Secretary finds "upon the evidence introduced at such hearing" that the issuance of such an order will tend to effectuate the declared policy of the Act. (7 U.S.C. §§ 602, 608c(3), (4), (6)). The lemon order, containing a provision for the imposition of weekly controls on the quantity of lemons which may be handled, was promulgated in 1941 after notice and hearing. 6 Fed. Reg. 1833 (1941). The order including its weekly volume control provision has undergone numerous amendment proceedings since 1941, all of which were effectuated upon notice and hearing on the record as required by the Act. 7 U.S.C. § 608c(17); See, e.g., 12 Fed. Reg. 6620 (1947), 12 Fed. Reg. 7904 (1947), 13 Fed. Reg. 766 (1948); 19 Fed. Reg. 5319 (1954), 19 Fed. Reg. 5969 (1954), 19 Fed. Reg. 7175 (1954); 20 Fed. Reg. 6191 (1955), 20 Fed. Reg. 7137 (1955), 20 Fed. Reg. 8451; 27 Fed. Reg. 4994 (1962), 27 Fed. Reg. 6629 (1962), 27 Fed. Reg. 8346 (1962); 35 Fed. Reg. 16,850 (1970), 36 Fed. Reg. 5609 (1971); 36 Fed. Reg. 9061 (1971).

Petitioner's repeated complaints about "the marketing policy" and "weekly prorate", when viewed as a whole, comprise a complaint about any use of volume controls on the lemon market by the government as authorized by the AMAA and the Lemon Order. However, to the extent that petitioner's allegations concerning the "marketing policy" and "weekly prorate" attack the procedural validity of the means used to implement the market volume control provisions of the lemon order, such allegations are without merit.

Petitioner's allegations that the LAC's annual marketing policy formulated pursuant to the lemon order, 7 CFR § 910.50, is in violation of the APA should be dismissed, because the LAC's marketing policy is not subject to APA rulemaking or review provisions. The APA provisions on publication in the Federal Register and on an opportunity for public comment only apply to rulemaking. (5 U.S.C. § 553). A rule is defined in pertinent part as "an agency statement of general or particular applicability and future effect designed to implement, interpret or prescribe law or policy . . . ." (5 U.S.C. § 551(4)). Certain rulemaking is specifically exempted from the notice and comment requirements of the APA. Among such exempt actions are "general statements of policy." (5 U.S.C. § 553(b)(A)).

The LAC's marketing policy is merely a collection of data and recommendations by an industry panel acting in this respect as an advisor to the agency, which latter body alone retains the power to impose any market volume controls under the lemon order. (7 CFR § 910.52). The LAC's marketing policy is not agency policy and has absolutely no effect on anyone without the crucial later event of agency action which is taken upon consideration of the LAC policy as well as other available information and advice from the LAC and other sources. The LAC's marketing policy statement does not impose market volume controls and has no direct impact whatsoever on the industry.

The merely advisory, non-binding nature of the LAC's marketing policy differentiates it from an agency statement implementing law with particular future effect as a rule is defined in the APA. However, even if the LAC's advisory marketing policy is seen as agency action within the meaning of the APA definition of a rule, the policy surely comes within the realm of a general statement of policy exempt from the notice and comment provision of the APA. (5 U.S.C. § 533(b)(A)). A general statement of policy is defined by the fact that it does not fix rights or impose obligations and does not have a substantial, direct impact on those regulated. Aiken v. Obledo, 442 F. Supp. 628, 653 (E.D. Ca. 1977). A general statement of policy does not establish a binding norm and is not finally determinative of the issues or rights to which it is addressed, because it leaves the agency still free to exercise informed discretion. Guardian Federal S & L v. Federal S & L Ins. Corp., 589 F. 2d 658, 666 (D.C. Cir. 1978). The LAC marketing policy clearly fits this definition.

Moreover, the APA only subjects final agency action to judicial review. (5 U.S.C. § 704). Even if the LAC marketing policy is agency action, which is dubitable as discussed above, it is certainly not final agency action within the meaning of the APA. (5 U.S.C. § 704). Agency actions are not final and reviewable " 'unless and until they impose an obligation, deny a right, or fix some legal relationship' . . . . Chicago & Southern Air Lines Inc. v. Waterman Steamship Corp., 333 U.S. 103, 112-113 . . . (1948); Nevada Airlines Inc. v. Bond, 622 F. 2d 1017, 1020 n. 5 (9th Cir. 1980)." Air California v. United States Dept. of Transp., 654 F.2d 616, 621 (9th Cir. 1981). Where an agency pronouncement does not have the status of law but requires some intervening action before the complaining party feels any effect, the action is not final for purposes of review. Air California, supra. As the United States Supreme Court noted in FTC v. Standard Oil Co. of Cal., 449 U.S. 232, 242 (1980), a critical factor in determining whether an action is final is whether it has legal force, as, for instance, does a regulation with which parties are expected to comply immediately or risk penalties of law. In the present case the LAC's marketing policy has no force of law whatsoever, has no direct impact on the industry as it is merely an intermediate, informational and advisory step in the regulatory process, no one is expected to comply with it and it fixes no obligation on anyone. The policy is, therefore, not final agency action subject to judicial review under the APA.

With respect to the Secretary's actual exercise of his discretion and power to impose market volume controls under the lemon order, 7 CFR § 910.52, petitioner alleges that the weekly volume control regulations have been issued without public notice and comment procedures in contravention of the requirements of the APA. The weekly volume limitation regulations do not, in fact, provide for public comment on where the volume level is set for any week, because fluctuating weekly regulation does not allow time for a comment period or for thirty day advance publication before the effective date. This is in accordance with the APA's specific exceptions to the usual public comment and advance publication procedures. (5 U.S.C. § 553(b)(B), (d)). When volume controls are to be effected under the lemon order, the order itself requires that such controls be implemented on a weekly basis. (7 CFR § 910.52). The requirement of weekly volume regulations was included in the lemon order only after notice to the public, a hearing and other public participation procedures were afforded. 6 Fed. Reg. 1833 (1941). The lemon order has also been amended over ten times since it was promulgated, and each time the public was afforded a hearing and the opportunity to participte in the formal rulemaking process as required by the APA. Despite the fact that weekly volume regulation necessarily prevents public participation in where the level is set each week, the public has had the opportunity and is currently being afforded the opportunity to be heard on the issue of the lemon order's provision for volume regulation and its requirement of weekly regulations when volume controls are put into effect.

The lemon order requires that limits on the handling of lemons be evaluated and effected on a weekly basis, because the supply and demand conditions of the lemon market are variable. The long period during which lemons can be harvested throughout the year subjects the supply to unpredictable variations due to weather and other variables which can only be monitored and accurately predicted a relatively short time in advance of the actual harvesting. See, e.g., 35 Fed. Reg. 16,850; 16,853; 16,855; 16,856 (1970). Data on supply and demand are compiled and considered by the LAC at a public meeting prior to the particular week under consideration. The LAC's data and recommendations which are then sent to the Secretary are, thus, received by the Secretary shortly before the period during which any regulation would take effect. Public comment and 30 day advance publication under APA procedures are totally impracticable at that time and would be contrary to the economic interest of the public in an orderly, regulated flow of commodities to market. See, e.g., 48 Fed. Reg. 19,356-57 (1983). Reacting to variable, constantly fluctuating market conditions in a timely manner to effect orderly marketing of lemons necessarily prevents the Secretary from giving the public advance notice and an opportunity to comment before the week during which any particular limit is to be in effect. The APA recognizes this type of situation in section 553 where it exempts from notice and comment requirements those actions where "the agency for good cause finds (and incorporates the finding and a brief statement of reasons therefore in the rules issued) that notice and public procedure thereon are impracticable, unnecessary, or contrary to the public interest". (5 U.S.C. § 553(b)(B)). The APA also allows less than thirty days advance publication of a rule before its effective date for good cause found and published with the rule. (5 U.S.C. § 553(d)(3)).

Weekly regulation implementing the existing market volume control provision of the lemon order serves a valid economic regulatory purpose. It is not merely an excuse to avoid public participation in the regulatory process. Weekly implementation of market volume controls is clearly a situation where advance notice, public comment and 30 day advance publication are totally impracticable and contrary to the public interest in the orderly marketing of lemons throughout its year long harvest season. This case is a valid use of the APA exemption quite unlike those situations in which courts have found use of the exemption to be improper. This is not a case where no reasons for claiming the exemption were published with the rule as in Buschmann v. Schweiker, 676 F. 2d 356, 357 (9th Cir. 1982), or Kelly v. United States Department of Interior, 339 F. Supp. 1095, 1101 (E.D. Ca. 1972). Nor is this a case where unexplained delay existed prior to the agency claiming that there was no time to follow APA notice and comment procedures as in Kelly v. United States Department of Interior, supra. Nor is this a case where a statutory deadline for regulation was used as an excuse for avoiding public procedures when the agency could have met the deadline even providing for notice and comment as in Western Oil & Gas v. United States E.P.A., 633 F.2d 803 (9th Cir. 1980).

Most importantly this case is not a case like most situations in which courts have narrowly construed section 553(b)(B) where notice and opportunity for comment is the only possible opportunity for public participation in the governmental process before the public is subject to a regulation. Unlike such cases the use of the section 553(b)(B) exemption here does not run counter to the purpose of the APA which is to give the public the chance to exercise a right to air their views to the government to insure better government decision making and greater governmental responsiveness to the needs of the public. Buschmann v. Schweiker, supra at 357; Kelly v. United States Department of Interior, supra, at 1102. In the present case the use of the section 553(b)(B) exemption for the weekly regulations implementing the volume control provisions of the lemon order has not eliminated the opportunity to the public to be heard in a meaningful exchange of views with the government on the subject of whether the lemon market should be subject to weekly volume controls. The formal rulemaking procedures used in initiating and amending the lemon order have assured the public of numerous opportunities to be heard on the issue over the years. In fact, such an opportunity is currently being afforded in the pending rulemaking proceeding. This fact is important in any evaluation of petitioner's claims that weekly regulations are improperly issued under the APA, because nowhere in the petition is it claimed that a particular weekly limit was incorrect or set at an inappropriate level and that petitioner was deprived of the opportunity to so inform the agency. Petitioner's real complaint is not where the level of the control is set but rather on the use of any controls at all. However, the use of the section 553(b)(B) exemption for weekly regulations has not deprived them of an opportunity to be heard on this issue. Therefore, the use of the section 553(b)(B) and (d) exemptions both fulfills the requirements for those exemptions for impracticability, the public interest and good cause as defined in the APA and also has not vitiated the spirit and purpose of the public participation provisions of the APA, because the public has participated in the formulation of order provisions for weekly regulation of the market volume of lemons.

Finally, it is important to recognize that Congress has already decided in the Act that the Secretary should control the market in lemons and other enumerated agricultural commodities by establishing and maintaining such orderly marketing conditions as will avoid unreasonable fluctuations in supplies and prices. (7 U.S.C.

§§ 601, 602(4)). Petitioner disagrees with this Congressional policy and advocate a free market economy. Petitioner is attempting to interfere in this legislative policy question of the advisability of a free market when Congress has long since decided that a free market is not advisable for certain segments of the agricultural economy. Petitioner's attempt to undercut this legislative policy decision is disguised as an attack on the use of the section 553(b)(B) and (d) exemptions of the APA. However, such weekly procedures are peripheral to petitioner's major complaint that the lemon order allows for market volume to be controlled at all. This disguised attempt at judicial legislation through a request for review of agency use of APA exemptions should be recognized and rejected. The United States Supreme Court has looked very unfavorably upon this type of picayune attack on substantive administrative decisions and had said that "[a]dministrative decisions should be set aside . . . only for substantial procedural . . . reasons . . ." Vermont Yankee Nuclear Power Corp. v. NRDC, 435 U.S. 519, 558 (1978).

In the present case the public has been given the opportunity to be heard and, indeed, is currently being heard on the issue of whether market volume controls for lemons are appropriate under existing market conditions to fulfill the purposes of the Act. The administrative decision to control the market was incorporated in the order only after public hearing and full public participation. Furthermore, full public participation is allowed at the weekly LAC meeting where the weekly volume recommendations to the Secretary are determined. Weekly implementation of this order provision is in accordance with the APA, because it would be impracticable and contrary to the economic interest of the public to achieve the necessary short term regulation of the market with the use of notice and comment and 30 day advance publication procedures. Therefore, the market volume control provisions of the lemon order have been properly implemented, and the petition fails to state a cause of action upon which relief can be granted.

B. USDA Guidelines

Petitioner alleges that the marketing policy and prorate regulations do not conform to the Guidelines For Fruit, Vegetable and Specialty Crop Marketing Orders of January 25, 1982 (attachment 1 to this Memorandum) and the Secretary's letter of May 10, 1983 (attachment 2 to this Memorandum). While respondent certainly denies these allegations, conformity or nonconformity to these documents does not give rise to a cause of action upon which relief can be granted in this proceeding.

The Guidelines and letter are clearly general policy documents outlining the direction the Secretary would like to follow in the future. Unlike the AMAA or the Lemon Order they are not in any sense a law with which informal rulemaking actions must conform. Under 7 U.S.C. 608c(15)(A) relief may be granted only if the Secretary's actions are found to be "not in accordance with law." Such a finding regarding the marketing policy and prorate regulations cannot be made, therefore, on the basis of adherence or non-adherence to the Guidelines or the letter of May 10, 1983.

C. The Regulatory Flexibility Act

Section 605(b) of the Regulatory Flexibility Act, 5 U.S.C. §§ 601-612 (hereinafter RFA) provides that sections 603 and 604 of the RFA, which mandate initial and final regulatory flexibility analyses during certain rulemaking actions, shall not apply to any rule for which the agency certifies that it will not have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities. (5 U.S.C. § 605(b)). Such certifications were made in the present case with respect to the imposition of weekly volume controls on the handling of lemons under the lemon order. Nevertheless, petitioner alleges that the certifications under section 605(b) were improper and that under sections 603 and 604 regulatory flexibility analyses should have been prepared. However, under the RFA when a section 605 certification is made it automatically bypasses sections 603 and 604 and obviates any need for any regulatory flexibility analyses to be prepared or published. (5 U.S.C. § 605(b)). Petitioner's allegations that such regulatory flexibility analyses were required must fail in light of the certifications which were duly made.

There is also no jurisdiction to review the Secretary's decision that section 605(b), rather than sections 603 and 604, of the RFA is applicable to the imposition of volume controls on the handling of lemons under the lemon order. On the matter of judicial review Congress declared unequivocally in the RFA that:

> (a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b), any determination by an agency concerning the applicability of any of the provisions of this chapter to any action of the agency shall not be subject to judicial review.
> (b) Any regulatory flexibility analysis prepared under sections 603 and 604 of this title and the compliance or noncompliance of the agency with the provisions of this chapter shall not be subject to judicial review. When an action for judicial review of a rule is instituted, any regulatory flexibility analysis for such rule shall constitute part of > the whole record of agency action in connection with the review.

5 U.S.C. § 611. Clearly, the plain language of the RFA indicates that the respondent's compliance or noncompliance with sections 603–605 is not a proper subject for review in this forum.

In addition to the plain meaning of section 611 of the RFA barring judicial review, there is ample evidence in the legislative history of the RFA which manifests a Congressional intent to foreclose completely any judicial review of matters related to agency compliance with the RFA. The following explanation appears in the section-by-section analysis of the bill which later became the RFA:

> Section 611(a) provides that there is no judicial review of any determination by an agency regarding the applicability of any provision of this subchapter except at provided in section 611(b). This means, for example, that the decision by an agency with respect to what proposed rules would have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities pursuant to section 605(b) shall not be subject to judicial review. Thus, the decision regarding when the agency shall conduct a regulatory flexibility analysis remains in the sole discretion of the agency. Also not subject to judicial review are agency determinations regarding the agenda (section 602), the procedures for gathering comments (section 609), the periodic review of rules (section 610) and any other administrative determination under this act.
> Section 611(b) provides that a regulatory flexibility analysis is a management tool and administrative procedure to effect improved rulemaking. Neither the manner of conducting regulatory flexibility analyses nor the content of the analyses should be subject to judicial review either pursuant to this act or pursuant to section 706(2)(D) of title 5, United States Code, or pursuant to any other provision of law. But once a regulatory analysis has been prepared, its contents may, if relevant, be considered by the reviewing court along with other relevant material in determining the validity of the rule which is the subject of the analysis.
> The court will look to the statement of the basis and purpose published by the agency along with its final rule to determine whether the rule is valid. In making that deter> mination, the court may consider the contents of the regulatory flexibility analysis along with any other relevant material.

126 Cong. Rec. 21460–21461 (1980). Thus, in an instance such as this one where the agency has certified that no regulatory flexibility analysis is required, section 611 does not allow a court to review that decision.

Since the propriety of the agency's RFA certification is not reviewable, it cannot be the basis for a finding that the prorate regulations are "not in accordance with law." Hence, these allegations in the petition fail to state a claim upon which relief can be granted by this forum or any reviewing district court under section 8c(15) of the AMAA.

D. Executive Order 12,291

Executive Order 12,291 is a presidential directive to agency rulemakers to conduct cost-benefit, regulatory impact, and regulatory review analyses in the process of making rules likely to have significant impact on the economy as defined in the executive order. The goal of Executive Order 12,291 is "to reduce the burdens of existing and future regulations, increase agency accountability for regulatory actions, provide for presidential oversight of the regulatory process, minimize duplication and conflict of regulations and insure well-reasoned regulations." Exec. Order No. 12,291, 46 Fed. Reg. 13,193 (1981), reprinted in 5 U.S.C. § 601 app. Executive Order 12,291 does not apply to rulemaking under the hearing procedures of section 556 of the APA. Exec. Order No. 12,291, 46 Fed. Reg. 13,193 (1981), reprinted in 5 U.S.C. § 601 app. It does apply to other types of promulgation of "major rules", i.e. those with significant economic impact as defined by the executive order. Id. Petitioner contests the respondent's determination that Executive Order 12,291 did not apply to the imposition of volume controls on the handling of lemons under the lemon order. There is no jurisdiction to review this matter.

Executive Order No. 12,291, 46 Fed. Reg. 13,193, 13,198 (1981), reprinted in 5 U.S.C. § 601 app. provides the following with respect to judicial review: "This Order is intended only to improve the internal management of the Federal government, and it is not intended to create any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law by a party against the United States, its agencies, its officers or any person." With such language in the executive order, it is evident that the President intended to preclude suits instituted to enforce agency compliance with Executive Order No. 12,291.

Executive Order No. 12,291 is, thus, an administrative document within the executive branch of government rather than a delegated legislative action by the President. Therefore, it does not have the force and effect of law. As the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit has noted: "Congress has given the District Court many important functions to perform, but they do not include policing the faithful execution of Presidential policies by Presidential appointees." Manhattan-Bronx Postal Union v. Gronouski, 350 F. 2d 451, 457 (D.C. Cir. 1965), cert. denied, 382 U.S. 978 (1966).

Since failure to comply with Executive Order No. 12,291 cannot be the basis for a finding that the prorate regulations are "not in accordance with law", these allegations in the petition fail to state a claim upon which relief can be granted by this forum or any reviewing district court under section 8c(15) of the AMAA.

E. Secretary's Memorandum 1512-1

Secretary's Memorandum 1512-1 is merely this Department's internal administrative document for implementing Executive Order No. 12,291. Just as the President by his Executive Order did not create a law which could invalidate the marketing policy and prorate regulations, so too the Secretary's implementing memorandum did not have such an effect. Thus, these allegations also fail to state a cause of action upon which relief can be granted.

F. The Philosophical Issues

The petition in this proceeding contains a rambling discourse of approximately ten pages that appears to be more related to second rate philosophy than any intelligible legal argument. Basically words and phrases are extracted out of context from those portions of the AMAA that state its general purposes (7 U.S.C. 601 and 602). These in turn are followed by attacks generally aimed at any type of volume regulations and by assertions of one or two alleged facts that intrinsically "prove" that volume regulations are the sole cause that the general purpose has not been totally achieved.

In the AMAA Congress stated certain general purposes and goals and gave the Secretary authority to promulgate marketing orders with specified provisions. On numerous occasions, as was noted above, the Secretary conducted formal rulemaking hearings to gather the best evidence on whether a marketing order was required and which of the specified provisions should be in such an order. If the industry concurred with the Secretary's evaluation, the marketing order took effect. The provisions in 7 U.S.C. 608c(15)(A) were created so handlers could voice objections that the marketing order provisions did not conform to the evidence at the rulemaking hearing, violated the specific authorities in the AMAA or violated some other statute, or that regulations or obligations under the marketing order were similarly violative.

In this portion of the petition, the attack is not on any specific prorate regulation or portion of the current marketing policy. Rather it is on the marketing order provisions that authorize these documents. These attacks are not based on allegations that the lemon order provisions aren't specifically authorized under 7 U.S.C. 608c(6) or (7), or that they violate some other statute. Petitioner doesn't even claim the marketing order provisions aren't based on the rulemaking records that created them. Rather these attacks are an infantile plaint that the marketing order hasn't fully achieved all the goals and purposes of Congress and made Sequoia's world a happy place. Such attacks have no bearing on whether the marketing order provisions are "in accordance with law" and, hence, are not a cause of action upon which relief can be granted in a proceeding under 7 U.S.C 608c(15)(A).

Such attacks are also misleading in that they fail to note that a formal rulemaking proceeding is in progress and that petitioner has fully participated at every step of the proceeding in presenting its economic and philosophic views as to the future of the lemon order.

G. Classified Pricing

The portion of the petition dealing with classified pricing contains the same fallacious reasoning evident in the immediately preceeding sections. Petitioner correctly states that the Lemon Order limits the quantity of lemons that may be handled for fresh use and does not limit the number of lemons that may be handled for by-product use. If lemon production is far in excess of all the needs of the market, one would logically expect such Lemon Order limitations would cause the marketplace to attach a higher price to lemons for fresh use than to lemons for byproduct use. Petitioner next asserts that such a price differential has occurred. Under the petition's twisted logic, the fact that this end has occurred (i.e.: a price differential) means that the Lemon Order has fixed prices and, hence, is illegal since the AMAA only allows price fixing for milk.

There are only three legitimate questions to be asked in a proceeding under 7 U.S.C. 608c(15). The first is whether the AMAA provides authority for a marketing order limiting the handling of lemons for fresh use. Under 7 U.S.C. 608c(2) and (6) such a marketing order is clearly authorized. The second question is whether the marketing order was promulgated in a procedurally correct manner and was supported by substantial evidence in the formal rulemaking record. Petitioner does not even allege any deficiencies in this regard. The final question is whether the weekly limitation on the handling of fresh lemons is being accomplished in a procedurally correct manner and in accord with the relevant provision of the marketing order. Again, petitioner cannot make any legitimate objections. Hence, the Lemon Order limitation on the handling of fresh lemons is "in accordance with law" and the petitioner's challenge must fail.

Whether the limitation of the handling of fresh lemons promotes a societal goal and whether that goal could better be accomplished through free enterprise or through the use of some other AMAA authorized provisions are all questions that may be explored in a formal rulemaking hearing under 7 U.S.C. 608c(3), (4), and (17). However, the fact that such economic and philosophic questions may exist does not render the current lemon order and its provisions "not in accordance with law" and subject to relief in this forum. Hence, petitioner has again failed to state a cause of action upon which relief can be granted.

H. Termination

Petitioner correctly states that 7 U.S.C. 608c(16)(A) provides that the Secretary shall terminate an order (or a provision of an order) when he finds it does not effectuate the purposes of the AMAA. However, the Secretary has made no such finding and the petitioner has not even alleged that such a finding has been made. Hence, the Lemon Order is not susceptible to attack in this forum as "not in accordance with law."

It might be noted that the question of termination or continuance or modification of prorate is presently before the Secretary in the above-cited formal rulemaking proceeding. If prorate is continued or modified, then petitioner can file a petition under 7 U.S.C. 608c(15)(A) to challenge such a conclusion if petitioner does not believe it to be supported by substantial evidence in the rulemaking record.

I. Constitutional Issues

Petitioner claims that the use of market volume controls in the lemon order deprives it of liberty and property without due process of law, takes its property without just compensation, and denies it equal protection vis a vis other lemon handlers, all in alleged violation of the fifth amendment to the Constitution; and denies it freedom of association in violation of the first amendment to the Constitution. Courts have long since held, however, that the AMAA and resultant marketing orders are constitutional.

1. The Use Of Market Volume Controls Through The Lemon Order Is Within The Constitutional Power Of Congress To Regulate Commerce.

Well over forty years ago the Supreme Court held that it is within the power of Congress under the commerce clause of the Constitution to prohibit absolutely all interstate commerce. Mulford v. Smith, 307 U.S. 38,48 (1939), citing Currin v. Wallace, 306 U.S. 1 (1939). Therefore, the Court held in Mulford v. Smith that Congress could limit the amount of a given commodity which may be transported in such commerce and that Congress' motive in exerting that power was irrelevant to its legitimacy. Consequently, the Court upheld the Secretary's issuance of a marketing quota on tobacco under the authority of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, a precursor of the Act under consideration herein, as both a legitimate exercise of the commerce power and a constitutional delegation of such power to the Secretary. Mulford v. Smith, supra.

In United States v. Rock Royal Co-op, 307 U.S. 533, 569–76 (1939) and H.P. Hood & Sons v. United States, 307 U.S. 588, 594–95 (1939) the Supreme Court rejected arguments that the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, was an invalid exercise of Congress' power to regulate commerce and that the Act involved unconstitutional delegations of legislative power to the Secretary. The Court noted in Rock Royal Co-op, 307 U.S. at 569, that Congress' "power over commerce where it exists is complete and perfect." The Court also later found that by the Act Congress intended to exercise the full reach of that power, that the power to regulate interstate commerce implied every other power necessary to make such regulation effective, and reaffirmed the Act's constitutionality. United States v. Wrightwood Dairy Co., 315 U.S. 110, 118–19, 123–25 (1942).

Even before the Supreme Court had reached its conclusions that the Act was constitutional, the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit had so concluded. In Edwards v. United States, 91 F.2d 767, 780–83 (9th Cir. 1937), the court found that a marketing order which provided for weekly limitations on the quantity of California and Arizona oranges which could be shipped in commerce and which allowed an industry advisory committee to allot such limitation among handlers was a constitutional exercise of the commerce power. Accord, Wallace v. Hudson-Duncan & Co., 98 F. 2d (9th Cir. 1938).

2. The Imposition Of Market Volume Controls Does Not Deprive Petitioner Of Liberty Or Property Without Due Process Within The Meaning Of The Fifth Amendment To The Constitution.

Petitioner alleges that it has been deprived of liberty and property without due process, because the imposition of controls on the number of lemons which may be marketed interferes with, inter alia, its right to contract freely and to receive the maximum possible compensation for the sale of lemons. These arguments have also been rejected by courts long ago. Interference with the liberty and property rights inherent in the ability to contract freely was rejected by the Supreme Court in Rock Royal Co-op, supra at 569, 572, as a basis for finding a milk marketing order in violation of the Constitution. The Court found that the provisions of the marketing order were nonetheless reasonably related to the power to regulate commerce which the Court had found "complete and perfect." Id., see also, H.P. Hood & Sons v. United States, supra at 594–95 (a milk marketing order provision requiring handler payments for milk to be channeled through a regulatory equalization fund did not violate the due process clause of the fifth amendment to the Constitution).

With respect to a marketing order for oranges which set up volume controls and handler allotments in a manner virtually identical to the lemon order at issue herein, the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit in 1937 rejected contentions that such volume controls were contrary to the fifth amendment's provisions for liberty of contract. Edwards v. United States, supra at 783–85. That court later elaborated on its reasoning in another case in which it upheld the constitutionality of a walnut marketing order despite the fact that it might be said to have destroyed property rights or the liberty to contract or engage in business freely. Wallace v. Hudson-Duncan & Co., supra 991–93. In Wallace v. Hudson-Duncan & Co. the court found that the marketing order did not violate the fifth amendment, because the means adopted by the Secretary, i.e., the marketing order, were reasonably related to the declared object of the Act. Id. at 992. In judging that relationship the court noted that such a rational relationship would be presumed unless there were evidence to the contrary. Id. In Whittenburg v. United States, 100 F. 2d 520 (5th Cir. 1938), the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit upheld the constitutionality of a grapefruit marketing order which limited the volume through weekly limits and handler allotments and prorations just as the lemon order does herein. In Whittenburg the Court noted that "collisions between private right [liberty of contract] and exertions of police power for the public good result generally in the prevalence of the public good." Id. at 523.

The court therein also pointed out that before any interference in property rights occurred through the imposition of volume controls under a marketing order, the Act required notice and a hearing for those to be affected and provided for judicial review of the Secretary's order promulgating a volume control regulation in a marketing order. Id. As proper hearing procedures had been accorded, the court found that liberty and property had not been taken without due process of law.

Petitioner in the present proceeding claims that the lemon order causes it to incur financial losses which it would not incur were such regulation absent, and that the lemon order does not meet the rational relationship test of constitutionality because it does not fulfill the purposes of the AMAA. Petitioner claims that it is respondent's burden to demonstrate the rational relationship. However, as the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit noted in Wallace v. Hudson-Duncan & Co., supra at 992, it is petitioner's burden to overcome a presumption of a rational basis for the marketing order. The AMAA allows the Secretary to impose market volume controls for lemons when he finds from evidence introduced at the required hearing that such regulation will fulfill the purposes of the Act. 7 U.S.C. § 608c(3), (4), (6). That is precisely what happened here. 6 Fed. Reg. 1833 (1941). Judicial review of whether such regulation does tend to fulfill the purposes of the Act and as such is reasonably related to achieving legitimate goals is limited to a determination of whether the Secretary's decision that the regulation would promote the purposes of the Act was supported by substantial evidence introduced at the rulemaking hearing required by the Act prior to the issuance of a marketing order. 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(E); see Chiglades Farm Ltd. v. Butz, 485 F. 2d 1125, 1129 (5th Cir. 1973). Petitioner has failed to allege that the regulation is not supported by substantial evidence introduced at the rulemaking hearing. Thus, it can not possibly overcome the presumption that the regulation is rationally related to the goals of the Act, and this forum must dismiss the allegations that the lemon order is unconstitutional because it does not effectuate the goals of the Act. As there is not even a single allegation that the Secretary did not follow procedures prescribed under the Act in enacting the lemon order or that the Secretary's initial decision that the lemon order's volume control provisions would effectuate the Act is not supported by substantial evidence, the petition fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Furthermore, the issue of whether the volume control provisions are still effectuating the AMAA is being reviewed by the Secretary in the current rulemaking proceeding. That issue may only be reviewed, if the Secretary's decision is unfavorable to petitioner, on the basis of evidence of record in that proceeding.

3. The Imposition Of Market Volume Controls Do Not Constitute A Taking Of Private Property Within The Meaning Of The Fifth Amendment To The Contitution.

Petitioner maintains that economic losses which it allegedly suffers as a result of the imposition of volume controls under the lemon order constitute the taking of private property in violation of the fifth amendment. This issue was considered by courts long ago and such contentions were rejected. In 1939 in Mulford v. Smith, supra at 49–51, the Supreme Court held that despite cash investments by tobacco growers in crops they could not market that year due to the imposition of tobacco allotments among farmers, the financial losses did not constitute a taking of such farmers' property in violation of the fifth amendment. The Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit held in 1938 that even if a marketing order materially reduced a person's property rights or destroyed a person's property in the exercise of the commerce power, there is no "taking" within the meaning of the fifth amendment, because there is no direct appropriation of property from such person by the government. Wallace v. Hudson-Duncan & Co, supra at 989–91, citing Omnia Commercial Co. v. United States, 261 U.S. 502 (1923). In pertinent dictum the court of appeals also noted that even if the economic losses were a "taking" it would be justified by a public purpose with compensatory benefits to farmers of higher prices for their products. 98 F. 2d at 991. A recent marketing order case dealing with the issue of whether a taking was presented by government price regulation under a marketing order followed the precedent and reasoning of Wallace v. Hudson-Duncan & Co., supra. Prune Bargaining Ass'n v. Butz, 444 F. Supp. 785, 793 (N.D.Ca 1975)

In light of the above decisions, petitioner's alleged economic losses from the operation of the lemon order do not constitute a taking of its property without just compensation within the meaning of the fifth amendment.

4. The Lemon Marketing Order Does Not Discriminate Against Any Group Of Handlers In Violation Of The Due Process Clause Of The Fifth Amendment To The Constitution.

Petitioner alleges that under the lemon marketing order, it is allowed to ship fewer lemons than handlers with growers in other geographic districts under the order and handlers with growers in entirely unregulated areas and that volume controls discriminate among handlers in different production districts on the basis of sales opportunities, income, and prorate limitations. Petitioner alleges by implication that the lemon marketing order dictates different prices for handlers with growers in different geographic districts. Petitioner claims that these discriminations among some handlers violate its rights under the fifth amendment to the Constitution.

The fifth amendment's guarantee of due process includes the concept of equal justice under law. Hampton v. Mow Sun Wong, 426 U.S. 88, 100 (1976). Equal protection analysis under the fifth amendment is the same type as has been developed under the equal protection clause of the fourteenth amendment. Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 93 (1976). This analysis only entails a limited judicial review of legislative classifications of persons for different treatment under the law to determine if such classifications are rationally related to a legitimate governmental objective. Schweiker v. Wilson, 450 U.S. 221, 230 (1981). The rational relationship analysis has been used previously by the Supreme Court to uphold distinctions made between handlers under the Act. United States v. Rock Royal Co-op., 307 U.S. 533, 564–65 (1939).

The AMAA provides for the method incorporated in the lemon marketing order of limiting the quantity of a commodity handled and apportioning that quantity equitably among all handlers. 7 U.S.C. § 608c(6). Such commodity volume regulation as will further the interests of farmers and consumers and will provide for orderly marketing has been found to be a valid governmental goal within the power of Congress under the commerce clause of the Constitution. Under the lemon marketing order the equitable apportionment among all handlers of the total quantity of lemons which may be allowed to be handled during any week is achieved through the prorate base system. The differentiation in calculating the prorate base among different geographic areas is based on the differences among these areas in production and marketing conditions. 7 CFR § 910.53(e). The lemon marketing order also allows for exceptions to this geographic area classification of handlers for the purpose of calculating prorate base if a handler can show that the production or marketing conditions in his area differ substantially from general conditions otherwise prevailing in that district. 7 CFR § 910.53(g).

This prorate base system of apportionment among handlers as provided for in the Act was adopted and has been amended several times after notice, a public hearing, and subsequent formal rulemaking procedures. Recognition of geographic distinctions in production and marketing factors to achieve the equitable handler allotments provided for by the Act irrespective of geographic area has been reflected in various agency decisions regarding such classifications. See, e.g., 35 Fed. Reg. 16,850, 16,853 (1970). This system, including its geographic distinctions, can only be judged on the basis of the record evidence compiled during such rulemaking processes. Petitioner has not claimed that this apportionment system is not supported by substantial record evidence. Therefore, this forum must uphold the lemon order provisions which define this system. Furthermore, the issue of the delineation of geographic districts for apportionment purposes is currently before the Secretary in the pending rulemaking proceeding. Review of the Secretary's decision to see if it is supported by the evidence in the record now being made will only be appropriate after the rulemaking process is finished.

With respect to the claim that the order discriminates against handlers of lemons grown in California and Arizona as opposed to other handlers who are not subject to regulation, this classification stems directly from the AMAA. The Act requires that marketing orders be limited in their application to the smallest region practicable consistent with effectuating the purposes of the Act and that marketing orders applicable to the same commodity in different regions shall contain different terms necessary to reflect the differences in the production and marketing of that commodity in such different areas. 7 U.S.C. § 608c(11)(B), (C). Regional differences in commodity marketing are rationally related to regional differences in marketing regulation. While this regional approach to commodity regulations may seem unfair to petitioner as a handler competing with handlers in unregulated areas, this does not invalidate the classification under the fifth amendment.

> In the area of economics and social welfare, a State does not violate the Equal Protection Clause [and correspondingly the Federal Government does not violate the equal protection component of the Fifth Amendment] merely because the classifications made by its laws are imperfect. If the classification has some 'reasonable basis,' it does not offend the Constitution simply because the classification 'is not made with mathematical nicety or because in practice it results in some inequity.' Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co., 220 U.S. 61,78. Dandridge v. Williams 397 U.S., at 485. . . . As long as the classificatory scheme chosen by Congress rationally advances a reasonable and identifiable governmental objective, we must disregard the existence of other methods of allocation that we, as individuals, perhaps would have preferred.

Schweiker v. Wilson, 450 U.S. 221, 234–35 (1981). Therefore, the petition also fails to state a cause of action in this regard.

5. The Establishment Of The LAC To Recommend Market Volume Controls To The Secretary Is Not An Unconstitutional Delegation Of Legislative Authority To Private Persons.

Petitioner alleges that USDA has deprived petitioner of its fifth amendment procedural due process rights by unconstitutionally delegating authority to limit the quantity of lemons which may be handled to the LAC. The LAC, however, which is established pursuant to the lemon marketing order and in accordance with the Act, does not have or exercise any authority to limit the quantity of lemons which may be handled. The AMAA provides that all marketing orders shall include terms:

> (C) Providing for the selection by the Secretary of Agriculture, or a method for the selection, of an agency or agencies and defining their powers and duties, which shall include only the powers:
> (i) To administer such order in accordance with its terms and provisions;
>
> (ii) To make rules and regulations to effectuate the terms and provisions of such order;
>
> (iii) To receive, investigate, and report to the Secretary of Agriculture complaints of violations of such order; and
>
> (iv) To recommend to the Secretary of Agriculture amendments to such order.
> No person acting as a member of an agency established pursuant to this paragraph shall be deemed to be acting in an official capacity, within the meaning of section 610(g) of this title, unless such person receives compensation for his personal services from funds of the United States. . . . .

7 U.S.C. § 608c(7)(C). The lemon marketing order, which provides for the establishment of a thirteen member LAC, consisting of eight growers, four handlers and one nonindustry member, limits the duties of the LAC to those specified by the Act as set forth above. 7 CFR § 910.20, .30. Among the duties of the LAC are the duties to investigate the growing, shipping and marketing conditions with respect to lemons, to assemble data on such conditions, to furnish the Secretary such available information as he may request, to formulate an annual marketing policy which contains information on supply and demand conditions, any other pertinent factors bearing on the marketing of lemons and a schedule of estimated weekly shipments to be recommended to the Secretary during the fiscal year, and, finally, when its investigations of supply and demand make handling limitations advisable, to recommend to the Secretary the quantity of lemons which it deems advisable to be handled during a week. 7 CFR § 910.31(c), (d), .50, .51(a). In recommending weekly limitations the LAC must consider specified factors. 7 CFR § 910.51(b). Under the lemon marketing order the LAC may only investigate economic conditions and recommend market volume controls. Under the order only the Secretary has the power to limit the quantity of lemons which may be handled during a specific week. The Secretary may impose and determine the amount of such a limitation whenever any information, including LAC recommendations and reports, indicate to the Secretary that a limitation will tend to effectuate the Act. 7 CFR § 910.52. Once the Secretary fixes such a weekly limit, the LAC carries it into effect by following order provisions for determining handler allotments.

In the present case the LAC clearly acts in an administrative advisory capacity to assist the Secretary to carry out the terms of the order which the Secretary has enacted. While the LAC's expert recommendations made in accordance with the terms of the order assist the Secretary in carrying out his functions, only the Secretary has any power to impose limitations on the number of lemons which may be handled. The Secretary has not delegated his power to impose marketing volume controls, and the functions given to the LAC do not constitute a de facto delegation of such power. The Secretary alone exercises his discretion to impose controls, and the marketing order sets out the criterion for its exercise, i.e. whether weekly limits will "tend to effectuate the declared policy of the [A]ct." 7 CFR § 910.52. The fact that the LAC recommendations made pursuant to the order and in accordance with the Act may become the basis for action by the Secretary does not mean that the LAC is the one exercising the authority to impose volume controls.

Regulatory schemes such as this which incorporate industry committees to assist the government in carrying out regulations have long been upheld. In Edwards v. United States, supra at 767, the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit found that the marketing order provisions of the precursor to the present Act did not delegate legislative authority to private individuals even though the orange marketing order contained provisions for a grower committee to administer the order. In Mulford v. Smith, supra at 44, the United States Supreme court upheld the constitutionality of a tobacco allotment program which included provisions for apportionment of the tobacco quota among individual farms by local committees of farmers according to standards "prescribed in the Act, amplified by regulations and instructions issued by the Secretary."

The two cases which dealt directly with the issue of delegation to industry committees under the AMAA arose in the Fifth Circuit. In Whittenburg v. United States, 100 F.2d 520 (5th Cir. 1938), the court was faced with a challenge to the delegation of the authority to a growers committee and to a shippers committee under a citrus fruit marketing order which allowed such committees to investigate conditions and make recommendations to the Secretary on weekly shipping limits and allotments. The court upheld the constitutionality of the regulatory scheme on the ground that the committees who recommend regulations are not given any legislative power or any power to force the Secretary to regulate. Id. at 522. "Action taken is always that of the Secretary. These others gather and present information to give him a broader view of the situation. Their concurrence gives his action support and tends to assure its enforcement. But they have no actual power." Id. at 523.

The Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit recently affirmed the Whittenburg holding in a case involving a celery marketing order under which an industry committee was given authority to recommend handling limits on celery. Chiglades Farm, Ltd. v. Butz, 485 F.2d 1125 (5th Cir. 1973). The court noted that Congress had "approved the use of such producer-controlled committees on the theory that the most sound decisions will result from permitting those in the area with the greatest knowledge of the industry's needs to make recommendations to the Secretary. See, e.g., Sen. Rep. No. 566, 87th Cong., 1st Sess. p. 39." Id. at 1134. The court relied upon the sole power to act resting with the Secretary as noted in Whittenburg, Id. The Court rejected plaintiffs' arguments that the committee vested control of the industry in a group of self-interested producers, thereby depriving plaintiffs of due process, and that despite the Secretary's ultimate authority he exercised no independent judgement. In rejecting such arguments the court relied on the effective checks on committee power contained in the order including, inter alia, the fact that the Secretary selected committee members, received all recommendations and actually acted to limit the handling of the commodity. Id.

The reasons which prompted the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to reject claims of unconstitutional delegation of authority to industry committees are equally applicable in the present case. Further, the principles upon which the court acted in those two marketing order cases have been relied upon by other courts of appeals in deciding delegation issues in other contexts. The Court of Appeals for the Second and Third Circuits have found that a statute providing for self-regulation of over-the-counter securities dealers by a private dealers association is not an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power to a private institution, on the grounds that the Securities and Exchange Commission has the power to approve or disapprove the association's rules and to make an independent review of disciplinary actions taken by the association. First Jersey Securities, Inc. v. Bergen, 605 F. 2d 690, 697 (3rd Cir. 1979); Todd & Co., Inc. v. Securities & Exchange Com'n, 557 F. 2d 1008, 1012-13 (3rd Cir. 1977); R. H. Johnson & Co. v. Securities & Exchange Com'n., 198 F. 2d 690, 695 (2d Cir. 1952) cert. denied, 344 U.S. 855 (1952).

In the present case although the LAC assists the Secretary in informing him of industry conditions and giving him their regulatory recommendations, the Secretary retains the power actually to regulate based upon committee recommendation or other available information. For the reasons discussed in the above cases such industry assistance does not rise to the level of an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority which deprives petitioner of its procedural due process rights.

6. The Lemon Marketing Order Does Not Deprive Petitioner Of Its Rights Under The First Amendment To The Constitution.

Petitioner alleges that the imposition of market volume controls infringes upon its freedom of association under the first amendment in that it limits its association with customers of its own choosing by limiting the number of lemons it may sell and, thus, the number of customers to whom it may sell them, and it forces petitioner to associate with an economic idea repugnant to petitioner. Neither of petitioner's claims comes within the type of freedom of association protected by the first amendment.

The freedom of association protected by the first amendment is a penumbral right not explicitly set out in the amendment itself. "[T]he right of individuals to associate to further their personal beliefs . . . has long been held to be implicit in the freedoms of speech, assembly, and petition." Healy v. James, 408 U.S. 169, 181 (1972). This freedom to associate with others "stemmed from the [Supreme] Court's recognition [in NAACP v. Alabama, 357 U.S. 449, 460 (1958)] that '[e]ffective advocacy of both public and private points of view, particularly controversial ones, is undeniably enhanced by group association.' " Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 15 (1976). The orderly group activity of advancing common beliefs and ideas is the freedom of association protected by the first amendment. Elrod v. Burns, 427, U.S. 347, 357 (1976). Most commonly this freedom protects association for political expression. See, e.g., Buckley v. Valeo and Elrod v. Burns, supra. However, it is immaterial what the group beliefs being advanced are, be they political, economic, religious or cultural. N.A.A.C.P. v. Alabama, 357 U.S. 449, 460 (1958). The key element, nevertheless, is that people associate in a group for the purpose of advancing their common beliefs of whatever ilk. Id., see also, N.A.A.C.P. v. Button, 371 U.S. 415, 430 (1963). Thus, the freedom of association which protects group activities and group membership has been found to prohibit the following: the conditioning of public employment on political party affiliation, Elrod v. Burns, supra; the nonrecognition of radical student political organizations by colleges, Healy v. James, supra; the requirement that teachers list all the organizations they have belonged to during the past five years as a condition of employment, Shelton v. Tucker, 364 U.S. 479 (1960); the requirement that an organization give the state a list of all its members as a condition of "doing business" in that state, N.A.A.C.P. v. Alabama, supra; the proscription of association for litigation purposes, N.A.A.C.P. v. Button, supra; and the refusal to license a qualified lawyer for belonging to a political organization or for refusing to answer questions about such an association, Baird v. State Bar of Arizona, 401 U.S. 1 (1971).

Nowhere in the petition has petitioner alleged that it has been prevented or restrained from joining with other people to further its political or economic views or that it has been forced to join an organization which holds views repugnant to it. Associating with an unlimited number of customers to sell them lemons does not rise to the level of the cherished freedom to associate with others to advocate or express one's belief that is protected by our Constitution. Similarly, economic regulation of the number of lemons a handler may buy or sell can not reasonably be said to force petitioner to join with others in a group to espouse views which are opposed to petitioner's free market beliefs. As this critical element of group association for the purpose of expression is missing from this petition, petitioner's first amendment allegations must fail. These allegations are merely a strained attempt to characterize the mundane as the significant, by clothing petitioner's dissatisfaction with the lack of a free market for lemon handlers in borrowed, ill fitting, and totally inappropriate constitutional garb."

Thus, the Petition should be dismissed. 7 CFR 900.52(c).

ORDER

The Petition is dismissed. The Order Granting Motion to Dismiss became final February 13, 1986.

In re: ECHO SPRING DAIRY, INC., AMA Docket No. M124-2. Decided February 25, 1986.

Petitioner does not qualify as a "producer-handler".
The Judicial Officer affirmed Judge Palmer's order sustaining the determination by the Market Administrator of Order No. 124 that petitioner did not qualify as a "producer-handler" under the Order, and that petitioner is obligated to pay $432,973.06 to the Market Administrator because petitioner's operation of a leased dairy farm was not the personal enterprise and the personal risk of petitioner. Petitioner had a joint checking account with the lessor of the dairy farm under which petitioner was able to utilize the financial resources of the lessor and other entities participating in the joint bank account. The producer-handler exemption must be strictly construed. Petitioner has the burden of proving that the Market Administrator's determinations are "not in accordance with law." Great weight is given to the Market Administrator's interpretation of the order.

Mary Kyle Hobbie, for respondent.

DECISION AND ORDER

This is an appeal to the Judicial Officer from an initial Decision and Order filed by Administrative Law Judge Victor W. case was referred to the Judicial Officer for decision on December 27, 1985.

The ALJ sustained the determination by the Market Administrator of Federal Milk Order No. 124 that petitioner did not qualify as a "producer-handler" under the Order from November 1983 through December 1984. As a result, petitioner is obligated to pay a total of $432,973.06 to the Market Administrator.

Based upon a careful consideration of the entire record in this case, the initial Decision and Order is adopted as the final Decision and Order (with a few trivial changes). Additional conclusions by the Judicial Officer follow the ALJ's decision.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE'S INITIAL DECISION

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This proceeding was initiated under section 15(A) of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, as amended (7 U.S.C. 608c(15)(A); "the Act"), by a petition filed by a milk handler regulated by Federal Milk Order No. 124 (7 CFR 1124 et seq.; "Order 124"). Petitioner, Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. (Echo Spring), alleges that Order 124's Market Administrator incorrectly determined that petitioner did not qualify as a "producer-handler" under Order 124 from November 1983 through December 1984. Petitioner seeks reversal of this adverse determination which disqualified Echo Spring from exemption from monetary assessments under the terms of Order 124, and the vacating of the resulting producer-settlement fund and administrative fund assessments levied by the Market Administrator.

An oral hearing was held before me in Portland, Oregon, on June 18, 1985, at which petitioner and respondent were represented by their attorneys, Michael J. Gentry and Mary Kyle Hobbie, respectively. Briefing was completed on September 3, 1985.

Upon consideration of the record evidence and the written and oral arguments by the parties, the attached order is being entered this day dismissing the petition, and denying the remedy therein requested.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Echo Spring is an Oregon corporation which, prior to July 1, 1983, operated as a fully regulated pool plant under Order 124, and was fully subject to the Order's terms, provisions, and assessments cer; and 8 years as administrator of the Packers and Stockyards Act regulatory program).

payable to the producer-settlement fund and the administrative fund.

2. On July 1, 1983, Echo Spring leased from Maddox Dairy, Ltd., the Maddox Dairy, located in Burrel, California.

3. On July 1, 1983, Maddox Dairy, Inc., became a 20% shareholder in Echo Spring, and one of its officers, Mr. Steve Maddox, was hired and paid by Echo Spring to run its new dairy division in Burrel, California.

4. Approximately half of the milk produced at the dairy farm in Burrel actually goes to Echo Spring's creamery in Eugene, Oregon. The rest is sold to Danish Cooperative Creamery in Fresno, California.

5. By letter of June 30, 1983, the Market Administrator gave tentative approval to a request by Echo Spring to thereafter be designated as a producer-handler pursuant to section 1124.12 of Order 124.

6. Since July 1, 1983, Echo Spring has been operated as a corporation having two separate divisions—its processing and distribution plant, located in Eugene, Oregon, known as the Creamery Division, and the dairy farm in Burrel, California, known as Maddox Dairy-Division of Echo Spring Dairy.

7. In November 1983, Maddox Dairy-Division of Echo Spring entered into a bank accounting system, a concentration account, in company with several of the Maddox entities. The account was based on a zero base accounting method whereby the money in eleven individual checking accounts was pooled in one common account and the balance of each individual account was zero at the end of each business day.

8. The books and records regarding the participation of Maddox Dairy-Division of Echo Spring in the concentration account were not maintained with Echo Spring's other books and records in Eugene, Oregon, but were maintained instead in the Maddox offices located in Riverdale, California. The accounting procedures for Maddox Dairy-Division of Echo Spring were handled by Mr. Rick Stacy who, although an independent accountant, spends 100% of his working hours on the accounts of Maddox entities and, as part of those duties, handled the accounting procedures of Maddox Dairy-Division of Echo Spring.

9. The parties have stipulated to:

a. the existence of the bank account numbers representing the concentration account at the Crocker National Bank in which Echo Spring began participation in November 1983;

b. the authenticity of the bank account records and statements of the concentration account, known as the Ru-Ann-Maddox account;

c. the authenticity of the bank account statements for Maddox Dairy-Division of Echo Spring, Inc.;

d. the authenticity of the documents identified as "Danish Creamery to Maddox, Ltd., producer or patron statements"; and

e. the authenticity and correctness of all of the mathematical calculations and figures representing the amounts claimed to be due by the Market Administrator (but not that the amounts are due).

10. As a result of the implementation of the concentration account, Echo Spring was able to deposit money in and draw money from the common account. In the months of November 1983 through December 1984, a total of 14 months, Echo Spring drew more money from the concentration account than it had deposited in the account in at least seven months.

11. Echo Spring maintained a close financial relationship with the Maddox entities through the concentration account which diluted the risk to Echo Spring in conducting business.

12. Order No. 124 requires monthly reports and accounting from producer-handlers.

13. The Market Administrator conducted an audit of the books and records of the Dairy Division in Riverdale in early July 1984. This was the first audit of the Riverdale location since the implementation of the concentration account.

14. As a result of that audit, the Market Administrator determined that Echo Spring was not a producer-handler as defined by section 12 of Order 124 (7 CFR 1124.12), in that Echo Spring had not offered proof satisfactory to the Market Administrator that the care and management of all dairy animals and other resources necessary to produce the entire volume of fluid milk was the personal enterprise of and at the personal risk of Echo Spring.

15. The Market Administrator met with officials of Echo Spring in August and September of 1984 and told them that, in his opinion, they had lost producer-handler status by their use of the concentration account.

16. By letter dated September 28, 1984, the Market Administrator sent Echo Spring his written determination that Echo Spring was not a producer-handler and stated the basis of his determination as follows:

> "The basis of this decision is that the leased dairy farm operation of Maddox Dairy, Ltd. located at Burrel, California is not the personal enterprise and the personal risk of Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. Specifically, the monies of Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. are combined with monies of various business enterprises of Maddox Dairy, including two other dairy farms which are not controlled by Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. Money deposited in an account of Maddox Dairy-Division of Echo Spring is transferred to the Ru-Ann-Maddox Dairy Concentration Account in the Crocker National Bank where it is combined with income from several other Maddox Dairy enterprises, including Maddox Dairy-Division of Echo Spring. The control of the Ru-Ann-Maddox Concentration Account is by Maddox Dairy and not by Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. Therefore, the personal risk required by § 1124.12(b) is not being entirely borne by Echo Spring Dairy, Inc."

17. In response to my request, the Market Administrator, by letter of March 11, 1985, further explained the basis of his determination that Echo Spring Dairy was not a producer-handler pursuant to § 1124.12 of Federal Milk Order No. 124 for the period of November 1983 through December 1984. He stated, and I find on the basis of the substantial evidence of record, the following bases for his determination:

1. Echo Spring Dairy Inc.'s monies were being combined with monies from Ru-Ann Dairy, Maddox Dairy, Ltd. and Burrel Farms, Inc. in the Ru-Ann-Maddox Concentration Account #032-316336 in the Crocker National Bank, Fresno, California. The entities other than Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. which participated in the Concentration Account were not controlled by Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. The Concentration Account was a system in which funds from all the various bank accounts of Ru-Ann Dairy, Maddox Dairy, Ltd., Burrel Farms, Inc. and their subsidiaries as well as funds of Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. were deposited in a central account. When any of the above business enterprises needed funds to pay their obligations, the bank would transfer from the Concentration Account the amount of funds needed to cover the checks of the various individual accounts. Funds needed by Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. to pay obligations of their dairy farm operation were handled in this way. If the monies Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. deposited in the Concentration Account were not sufficient to cover their obligations, monies deposited by the other entities party to the Concentration Account were used to pay the obligations of Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. The general ledger and the balance sheet of the Echo Spring dairy farm operation did not carry such deficiencies in deposits to the Ru-Ann-Maddox Concentration Account as a liability nor did the general ledger and balance sheet account for any excess in deposits as a receivable. Therefore, Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. was not bearing the personal risk of all the obligations of the dairy farm operation. Although there was a schedule prepared which showed the debits and credits by Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. to the Ru-Ann-Maddox Concentration Account, the only general ledger entries made are those that normally affect the Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. cash account and the offsetting entries to the general ledger. General ledger entries are not made showing the transactions between the Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. cash account and the Ru-Ann-Maddox Concentration Account.

2. The Creamery Division of Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. paid the Dairy Division of Echo Spring for milk received at its plant in Eugene, Oregon. The amount of payment was based on the classified use value of the milk at the Eugene plant using the class prices and the use classifications as established under the Oregon-Washington order with a minor adjustment for Class II milk. The payments were made on dates approximating the producer payment dates in the Oregon-Washington order. Payments were either wire-transferred to the Crocker National Bank or mailed to the offices maintained by Ru-Ann Dairy and Maddox Dairy, Ltd. in Riverdale, California. If there were any changes made in the use classification at the Eugene plant of Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. as a result of the Market Administrator's audit, no adjustments were made in payments to the Dairy Division of Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. No other payments were made to the Dairy Division by the Creamery Division.

3. Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. maintains two completely independent sets of books and records and bank accounts for their two divisions. The one for the Creamery Division is located at Eugene, Oregon. This set of books and records is maintained and controlled by employees of Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. They include all records pertaining to the operation of the processing plant as well as the sales journal, cash disbursement journal, general ledger and payroll records. The statements for the bank account maintained at Centennial Bank, Eugene, Oregon and all records pertaining to this bank account are also kept in Eugene, Oregon. This bank account is used to pay the obligations of the Creamery Division of Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. The Dairy Division records of Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. are maintained at Riverdale, California and kept separate from the records of the Eugene operation. The records maintained at Riverdale are those pertaining to the operation of the leased dairy farm located at Burrel, California, the sale and payments of milk to Danish Cooperative Creamery, the hauling records on milk delivered to the Eugene, Oregon plant, cash disbursements, purchase journals, payroll records and general ledger. The employees who maintain and control the books and records of Ru-Ann Dairy, Maddox Dairy, Ltd., Burrel Farms, Inc. and their subsidiaries are the same persons who maintain and control the books and records of the Dairy Division of Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. There is no reimbursement for the services of these employees by Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. The Creamery Division of Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. furnishes to the Riverdale office a summary of their general ledger each month in order that a statement of operations and balance sheet can be made for each division along with a consolidated balance sheet and statement of operation for Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. Other than the money paid to the Dairy Division for milk delivered to the Eugene plant, there are no other payments made by the Creamery Division to the Dairy Division. The only adjustments made in the preparation of the consolidated statement of operation is for the movement of milk between the two divisions.

4. The Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. Dairy Division made lease payments for the dairy farm to Maddox Dairy, Ltd. out of all funds deposited in the Ru-Ann-Maddox Concentration Account. The Dairy Division issued a check to Maddox Dairy, Ltd. and that check was deposited into their account in the Crocker National Bank and on the same day was transferred to the Ru-Ann-Maddox Concentration Account. All transactions between the Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. Dairy Division and Ru-Ann Dairy and Burrel Farms, Inc. were handled in a similar manner.

5. In addition to the milk delivered to the Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. Creamery Division, the Echo Spring Dairy, Inc.

Dairy Division sold milk to the Danish Cooperative Creamery, Fresno, California, through Ed and Steve Maddox. During the course of the Market Administrator's audit, the auditors were told that Ed and Steve Maddox would deduct five cents a hundredweight from the proceeds of the milk sold to Danish Cooperative Creamery for marketing the milk; the remainder would be passed over to Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. However, an audit of the account failed to indicate that the amount due Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. from Danish Cooperative Creamery, less the five cents a hundredweight, was deposited in the Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. account. The amounts entered into the Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. account often varied considerably from the amounts paid by Danish Cooperative Creamery for the milk. Although there were some adjustments made in various months, the amount of the adjustments for these discrepancies cannot be reconciled to the amounts Danish Cooperative Creamery paid for the milk. The payment of $750,732.99 for milk delivered to Danish Cooperative Creamery for the months of January, February and March 1984 was not paid to Echo Spring Dairy, Inc. until May 7, 1984. In the absence of the money due from Danish Cooperative Creamery, the Dairy Division of Echo Spring relied on funds that were deposited in the Ru-Ann-Maddox Concentration account to pay their obligations.

16. Echo Spring continued to participate in the concentration account until mid-December of 1984, at which time it withdrew.

PERTINENT STATUTORY PROVISIONS

7 U.S.C. § 608c

(1) The Secretary of Agriculture shall, subject to the provisions of this section, issue, and from time to time amend, orders applicable to processors, associations of producers, and others engaged in the handling of any agricultural commodity or product thereof specified in subsection (2) of this section. Such persons are referred to in this chapter as 'handlers.' Such orders shall regulate, in the manner hereinafter in this section provided, only such handling of such agricultural commodity, or product thereof, as is in the current of interstate or foreign commerce, or which directly burdens, obstructs, or affects, interstate or foreign commerce in such commodity or product thereof.

(2) Orders issued pursuant to this section shall be applicable to (A) the following agricultural commodities . . . : Milk . . . .

(5) In the case of milk and its products, orders issued pursuant to this section shall contain one or more of the following terms and conditions, and . . . no others:

(A) Classifying milk in accordance with the form in which or the purpose for which it is used, and fixing, or providing a method for fixing, minimum prices for each such use classification which all handlers shall pay, and the time when payments shall be made, for milk purchased from producers or associations of producers. Such prices shall be uniform as to all handlers, subject only to adjustments for (1) volume, market, and production differentials customarily applied by the handlers subject to such order, (2) the grade or quality of the milk purchased, and (3) the locations at which delivery of such milk, or any use classification thereof, is made to such handlers:

(B) Providing:

(ii) for the payment to all producers and associations of producers delivering milk to all handlers of uniform prices for all milk so delivered, irrespective of the uses made of such milk by the individual handler to whom it is delivered;

* * * * * * *

(C) In order to accomplish the purposes set forth in paragraphs (A) and (B) of this subsection, providing a method for making adjustments in payments, as among handlers (including producers who are also handlers), to the end that the total sums paid by each handler shall equal the value of the milk purchased by him at the prices fixed in accordance with paragraph (A) of this subsection.

(13)(B) No order issued under this chapter shall be applicable to any producer in his capacity as a producer.

* * * * * * *

(15)(A) Any handler subject to an order may file a written petition with the Secretary of Agriculture, stating that any such order or any provision of any such order or any obligation imposed in connection therewith is not in accordance with law and praying for a modification thereof or to be exempted therefrom. He shall thereupon be given an opportunity for a hearing upon such petition, in accordance with regulations made by the Secretary of Agriculture, with the approval of the President. After such hearing, the Secretary shall make a ruling upon the prayer of such petition which shall be final, if in accordance with law.

PERTINENT ORDER PROVISIONS

Pursuant to statutory powers, the Secretary of Agriculture has issued Milk Marketing Order No. 124 (7 CFR Part 1124) to regulate the handling of milk in the Oregon-Washington marketing area. The Order requires handlers to file monthly reports of receipts and utilization, and pay assessments to the producer-settlement fund, as well as assessments for the cost of the Order's administration (7 CFR §§ 1124.30, 1124.80, and 1124.87). However, a qualifying "producer-handler" is exempt from such obligations and is required to file only those reports that the Market Administrator may prescribe as necessary (7 CFR § 1124.32). Order 124 specifically defines a producer-handler:

§ 1124.12 Producer-Handler.

(a) "Producer-handler" means any person who operates a dairy farm and a milk processing plant from which there is route disposition in the marketing area during the month, and who receives no skim milk (including nonfat dry milk or condensed skim milk or skim milk recombined from nonfat dry milk or condensed skim milk) or butterfat from any source, other than his own production, for use in fluid milk products during the month: Except that such person may purchase from other pool plants packaged fluid milk products, other than whole milk, in an amount not in excess of an average of 100 pounds per day during the month; and

(b) Such person must provide proof satisfactory to the market administrator that the care and management of all the dairy animals and other resources necessary to produce the entire volume of fluid milk products (excluding receipts from pool plants) and the operation of the processing and distribution business is the personal enterprise of and at the personal risk of such person.

CONCLUSIONS

1. The Market Administrator of Order 124 correctly determined that Echo Spring was not a producer-handler for the period of November 1983 through December 1984 because the care and management of all the dairy animals and other resources necessary to produce the entire volume of fluid milk was not the personal enterprise of and at the personal risk of Echo Spring.

2. The Market Administrator of Order 124 correctly determined that, from November 1983 through December 1984, Echo Spring was subject to full regulation under Order 124 as a pool plant; thereby owing the producer-settlement fund $415,948.28 inclusive of late charges, and the administrative fund $17,024.78, inclusive of late charges.

DISCUSSION

Until July 1, 1983, Echo Spring was fully regulated under Order 124 as the operator of the Eugene, Oregon, creamery which had the status of a "pool distributing plant." On July 1, 1983, in order to obtain "competitively-priced milk" (Pet. brief, at 2), Echo Spring leased from Maddox Dairy, Ltd., its dairy operation and herd in Burrel, California. Since then, Echo Spring has been an Oregon corporation consisting of two divisions, a creamery division located in Eugene, Oregon, and a dairy division located in Burrel, California. (Pet. brief, at 2).

Upon completion of the lease transaction in mid-1983, Maddox Dairy, Inc., became a 20% shareholder in Echo Spring, and Steve Maddox was hired and paid by Echo Spring to run its dairy division in Burrel, California. The books and records of the dairy division are kept in Riverdale, California, where its accounting procedures are handled by Mr. Rick Stacy who, although an independent accountant, spends 100% of his working hours on the accounts of Maddox entities and, as part of those duties, handles the accounting procedures for Maddox Dairy-Division of Echo Spring. Approximately half of the milk produced at the dairy farm in Burrel goes to Echo Spring's creamery in Eugene, Oregon; the rest is sold, through Maddox, to Danish Cooperative Creamery in Fresno, California.

Mr. James Burger, Market Administrator of Order No. 124, was advised by Echo Spring of these arrangements and, by letter dated June 30, 1983, gave tentative approval to Echo Spring's request for designation as a producer-handler. In so doing, he was applying Order 124's very liberally written producer-handler provisions which provide a broad-based exemption from the Order's monetary obligations not typically available under other federal milk orders. It is axiomatic, however, that whenever a milk order's exemptive producer-handler provisions are applied, they are to be strictly construed. See Andrew W. Leonberg, 32 Agric. Dec. 763, 801 (1973). Therefore, when later apprised by his auditors that Maddox Dairy-Division of Echo Spring was participating with various Maddox entities in a concentration account form of banking which made the deposits of each participant available to fund the others and resulted in Maddox Dairy-Division of Echo Spring using money above its own generated income, the Market Administrator properly concluded that Echo Spring was not entitled to exemption as a producer-handler. Petitioner has argued that the Market Administrator's computations, showing Maddox Dairy-Division of Echo Spring to have used more money than it generated, fail to take into account various offsetting debits for obligations owed it by Maddox entities that participated in the concentration account. This argument, however, only confirms the fact that Echo Spring did not have control over the bank account of the dairy farm operation. Maddox employees had the power to dictate transfers among the eleven participating entities, and during the months studied by the Market Administrator and his auditors, unassigned funds of the ten participating Maddox entities were applied to service the banking needs of the Maddox Dairy-Division of Echo Spring, demonstrating that its operation was not at the personal risk of Echo Spring.

Order 124 specifically restricts producer-handler status to those who:

> ". . . provide proof satisfactory to the market administrator that the care and management of all the dairy animals and other resources necessary to produce the entire volume of fluid milk products (excluding receipts from pool plants) and the operation of the processing and distribution business is the personal enterprise of and at the personal risk of such person." (7 CFR 1124.12(b); underscoring supplied).

Echo Spring complains that the Market Administrator's reading of this Order provision is far too literal and unduly restrictive. In point of fact, only a very expansive reading of the Order's language enabled the Market Administrator to initially determine that Echo Spring's operations met producer-handler standards. Nor is petitioner helped when all of the facts of its operations (see finding of fact 17) are examined in terms of the Act's objectives and those of Milk Order 124.

In authorizing the marketwide pooling of all proceeds on milk sales subject to a federal milk order's regulation, the Act seeks to establish the return of uniform weighted average prices to the producers who serve the regulated market's need for a stable supply of milk. Additionally, it seeks to maintain competitive equity among the market's milk handlers by requiring each to pay for milk at its value as used by each handler. These objectives of the Act are effectuated by requiring all regulated handlers, other than those qualifying under the producer-handler exemption, to make monthly payments into Order 124's producer-settlement fund. Handlers are further required to make monthly payments to the Order's administrative fund to equitably spread the cost of the Order's operations among them all.

Any handler selling milk to the market who is exempted from these payments gains advantage over his fully regulated competitors. Furthermore, producers lose the benefit of the exempted producer-handler's fluid milk sales in the calculation of monthly uniform and weighted average prices for their milk.

For these reasons, Order provisions exempting producer-handlers are, necessarily, narrowly construed. See Leonberg, supra. Whenever such an exemption is claimed in circumstances where it appears that more than one entity is involved in the movement of milk from cow to consumer, convincing proof is needed to negative the normal inference that a sale has taken place. Otherwise, those producers who faithfully serve the regulated market may be improperly deprived from sharing, as is their right, in the proceeds of all sales in the market, and competing handlers may suffer competitive disadvantage. Such proof has not been provided in this case.

Review of earlier cases interpreting producer-handler order provisions indicates that even if Echo Spring had not participated in a concentration account form of banking, it would be hard pressed to prove its entitlement to producer-handler exemption. See Elm Spring Farm Inc. v. United States, 127 F.2d 920 (1st Cir. 1942); Cosgrove v. Wickard, 49 F.Supp. 232 (D.Mass. 1943); Andrew W. Leonberg, supra; Sherman Fitzgerald, a/b/a Sher-Von Dairy, 31 Agric. Dec. 593 (1972); Clyde Lisonbee, d/b/a Temple-View Diary, 31 Agric. Dec. 952 (1972); Willow Crossing Dairy Farm, Inc., 29 Agric. Dec. 1007 (1970); Fred B. Brown and Jennie Brown, d/b/a Gem Dairy, 23 Agric. Dec. 18 (1964); Eugene M. Olson, 22 Agric. Dec. 877 (1963); Independent Milk Producer-Distributors Associates, 20 Agric. Dec. 1 (1961).

Under these circumstances, it cannot be said that the Market Administrator was arbitrary in concluding that the proof provided him was unsatisfactory and did not establish that the dairy farm operation in Burrel, California, was the personal enterprise of and at the personal risk of Echo Spring.

Petitioner has further argued that any monetary obligations that are imposed against it should be limited to those occurring after the Market Administrator issued his letter of September 28, 1984, in which he advised petitioner of its disqualification. However, the record shows that petitioner's participation in the concentration account, and the manner of its participation, was not brought to the Market Administrator's attention until an audit conducted in July 1984. He then properly studied the matter and after orally advising the petitioner of his concerns in August, he issued a timely written decision. To limit the assessments to the three months of October, November, and December of 1984, when the petitioner continued its practices in spite of the adverse determination by the Market Administrator, would stand justice on its head.

The following Order is therefore being entered.

ADDITIONAL CONCLUSIONS BY THE JUDICIAL OFFICER

Petitioner contends that the ALJ's findings are not supported by substantial evidence. But the record contains abundant evidence to support his findings. In addition, it is well settled that in a proceeding such as this, under § 8c(15)(A) of the Act, the burden of proof rests with petitioner. Petitioner has the burden of proving that the challenged obligations are "not in accordance with law" (7 U.S.C. § 608c(15)(A)).[3]

Petitioner contends on appeal that the Market Administrator disavowed reliance on any circumstance other than the concentration account, in reaching his decision that petitioner did not qualify as a producer-handler under the Order. However, although the circumstances involving the concentration account were the strongest circumstances relied on by the Market Administrator, his decision was also based on other circumstances referred to by the ALJ (see, e.g., Tr. 348–55, 382–403).

Petitioner argues that the ALJ was biased against the producer-handler exemption. But there is nothing in the record to support that view. The ALJ merely followed the Department's well settled principle that the producer-handler exemption should be strictly construed.

For example, in In re Leonberg, 32 Agric. Dec. 763, 799–801 (1973), it is stated:

> A producer-handler is exempt from payments into the producer-settlement fund on milk handled by him which payments represent, as indicated above, the amount by which the value of his milk at the class prices exceeds its value at the blend price. Obviously, a distinct economic benefit inures to a producer-handler under the Order, and the other dairy farmers who receive the uniform blended price do not share in the benefits from the producer-handler's Class I milk utilizations.[10]

[10] The producer-handler exemption was sharply criticized in the Report to the Secretary of Agriculture by the Federal Milk Order Study Committee, p. 57 (1962), which states:

Historically, exemption from regulation has been given to certain handlers, particularly public-owned processors and producer distributors. Little justification exists today for exemption from regulation and only under the most unusual circumstances should such exemptions be granted.

If handlers were able to circumvent the requirements of the Order by employing spurious schemes to claim producer-handler status, it would bring chaos to the milk industry. As stated in Elm Spring Farm v. United States, 127 F.2d 920, 927 (C.A. 1):

Cir. 1966); United States v. Mills, 315 F.2d 828, 836, 838 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 374 U.S. 832, 375 U.S. 819 (1963); Windham Creamery, Inc. v. Freeman, 230 F. Supp. 632, 635–36 (D.N.J. 1964), aff'd, 350 F.2d 978 (3d Cir. 1965), cert. denied, 382 U.S. 979 (1966); Bailey Farm Dairy Co. v. Jones, 61 F. Supp. 209, 217 (E.D. Mo. 1945), aff'd, 157 F.2d 87 (8th Cir.), cert. denied, 329 U.S. 788 (1946); Wawa Dairy Farms, Inc. v. Wickard, 56 F. Supp. 67, 70 (E.D. Pa. 1944), aff'd, 149 F.2d 860, 862–63 (3d Cir. 1945).

> The result inevitably would be that the whole regulatory scheme would break down. The maintenance of the uniform blended price to each producer, whether or not his milk goes predominantly into the fluid milk market, is impossible unless handlers who have more than the market average of fluid milk sales make the prescribed equalization payments into the pool. The Act and the Order seek to achieve a fair division of the more profitable fluid milk market among all producers, thereby eliminating the disorganizing effects which had theretofore been a consequence of cutthroat competition among producers striving for the fluid milk market. This is clearly set forth in the opinion in United States v. Rock Royal Co-operative, Inc., 1939, 307 U.S. 533, 548, 550, 59 S. Ct. 993, 83 L. Ed. 1446.

While the Secretary could have elected to fully regulate producer-handlers (Freeman v. Vance, 319 F.2d 841, 842 (C.A. 5), certiorari denied, 377 U.S. 930; Ideal Farms, Inc. v. Benson, 288 F.2d 608, 618 (C.A. 3), certiorari denied, 372 U.S. 965), he has not done so in this Order. But producer-handler status is an exception to the general regulatory scheme of the Act, and as such it must be strictly construed, and must be established by a handler seeking the exception. See Trade Comm'n v. Morton Salt Co., 334 U.S. 37, 44-45; Phillips Co. v. Walling, 324 U.S. 490, 493; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, Rochester &c. Ry., 205 U.S. 1, 10; Detroit Edison Co. v. Securities & Exchange Commission, 119 F.2d 730, 739 (C.A. 6), certiorari denied, 314 U.S. 618; Shilkret v. Musicraft Records, 131 F.2d 929, 931 (C.A. 2), certiorari denied, 319 U.S. 742. The burden of proof is upon the petitioner to show that the Market Administrator's determination that it is not entitled to the producer-handler exemption is not in accordance with law (see citations immediately above; and Lewes Dairy, Inc. v. Freeman, 401 F.2d 308, 316-317 (C.A. 3), certiorari denied, 394 U.S. 929; Boonville Farms Cooperative, Inc. v. Freeman, 358 F.2d 681, 682 (C.A. 2); Windham Creamery, Inc. v. Freeman, 230 F. Supp. 632, 635-636 (D.N.J.), affirmed, 350 F.2d 978 (C.A. 3), certiorari denied, 382 U.S. 979; Bailey Farm Dairy Co. v. Jones, 61 F. Supp. 209, 217 (E.D. Mo.), affirmed, 157 F.2d 87 (C.A. 8), certiorari denied, 329 U.S. 788; Wawa Dairy Farms v. Wickard, 56 F. Supp. 67, 70 (E.D. Pa.), affirmed, 149 F.2d 860, 863 (C.A. 3)).

Claims to producer-handler status have been frequently litigated because of the economic benefits resulting therefrom and because of the variety of schemes and devices handlers have employed to claim producer-handler status. As was stated in In re Independent Milk Producer-Distributors Association, 20 Agriculture Decisions 1, 28 (1961):

> The regulatory scheme set forth in such section is merely an attempt to prevent the evasion or circumvention of the distinction established in the order between producer-handlers and handlers by methods employed in the past or those that could be reasonably anticipated. In the past, elaborate and ingenious schemes have been employed to achieve apparent producer-handler status and thus to circumvent regulation. See, e.g., Elm Spring Farm, Inc. v. United States, 127 F.2d 920 (1st Cir. 1942); In re Martin & Costa, 4 A.D. 636 (1945); In re John Velozo, 5 A.D. 739 (1946), and cases cited therein.[11]

[11] See, also, Brown v. United States, 367 F.2d 907, 910-911 (C.A. 10), certiorari denied, 387 U.S. 917; Cosgrove v. Wickard, 49 F. Supp. 232, 233-238 (D. Mass.).

> For this reason, and by virtue of the fact that producer-handler status represents a defined and circumscribed exemption from or exception to regulation, the producer-handler definition of Order No. 36 (7 CFR 1036.14) should be strictly construed and strictly complied with to achieve such exemption.

The same principle was applied in In re Associated Milk Producers, Inc., 33 Agric. Dec. 976, 982-98 (1974), in affirming a decision by a Market Administrator that a dairy lost its producer-handler status for a month in which it gratuitously stored one tanker of milk for another milk company as a "courtesy." In affirming the Market Administrator's determination, the Judicial Officer stated (33 Agric. Dec. at 985-86):

> The loss of the petitioner's "producer-handler" exemption for the month of July 1972 in the circumstances of this case is a very harsh and unfortunate result. Although the petitioner was contractually obligated to supply milk to Flagstaff Milk Company, and petitioner stored the milk for Flagstaff when it could not fulfill its contractual obligation, there is no evidence that Flagstaff would have sought damages from petitioner for its failure to meet its contractual obligation. Moreover, petitioner saved Flagstaff only $200 or $300 by storing the milk. On the other hand, petitioner lost its "producer-handler" status for the month, which cost it about $7,500. Obviously, neither the petitioner nor Flagstaff contemplated the effect of the storage on petitioner's "producer-handler" status.

The storage occurred when the petitioner's President was out of town. As stated by the Administrative Law Judge (Initial Decision, p. 6):

> The simple fact is, Petitioner is a relatively inexperienced producer-handler whose operating personnel entered into this arrangement to assist one of their customers with no realization of the possible legal consequences that might flow from it. It was a mistake.

However, the Market Administrator has no authority to amend the Order to protect a handler from the consequences of unwise or mistaken action. It is the duty of the Market Administrator to "[a]dminister the order in accordance with its terms and provisions" (7 CFR 1000.3(b)(1)). Any amendments must come from the Secretary of Agriculture—not the Market Administrator. 7 U.S.C. 608c(1). See, also, Foster v. Freeman, 271 F. Supp. 33, 38–39 (S.D.N.Y.); In re Heber Valley Milk Company, 31 Agriculture Decisions 1319, 1332 (1973), affirmed, Heber Valley Milk Co. v. Butz, 32 Agriculture Decisions 1630 (D. Utah), reversed and remanded because of inadequate District Court findings, No. 73-1725 (C.A. 10), decided June 26, 1974 [, aff'd, No. C-354-72 (D. Utah Dec. 9, 1974) (decision on remand), printed in 34 Agric. Dec. 45 (1975)]. If the Order produces inequitable or harsh results, the remedy is by means of an amendment to the Order by the Secretary. Until the Order is amended, the plain terms of the Order must be followed.[3]

[3] An amendment to permit petitioner to retain "producer-handler" status for July 1972 in the circumstances of this case would not appear administratively desirable, see, infra.

If the Market Administrators of approximately 60 milk Orders, regulating over $4 billion worth of milk annually, had the power to alter the terms of the Orders to effectuate what they regarded as equity in each case, the entire regulatory program would break down. Also, suspicions would arise that their views were influenced by extraneous factors such as friendship, political affiliation, campaign contributions, etc.

In the Associated Milk case, just discussed, the great weight to be given to the Market Administrator's interpretation of the Order is stated as follows (33 Agric. Dec. at 982-83):

> The Market Administrator charged with the responsibility of enforcing the Order interpreted the word "[r]eceives" in accordance with its normal, dictionary definition. His interpretation is entitled to great weight. Lawson Milk Company v. Freeman, 358 F.2d 647, 650 (C.A. 6); Allen M. Campbell Co. Gen. Con., Inc. v. Lloyd Wood Const. Co., Inc., 446 F.2d 261, 265 (C.A. 5). See, also, Udall v. Tallman, 380 U.S. 1, 16-17; Bowles v. Seminole Rock Co., 325 U.S. 410, 413-414; Federal Comm'n v. Broadcasting Company, 309 U.S. 134, 143, fn. 6; Norwegian Nitrogen Co. v. United States, 288 U.S. 294, 335; United Truck Lines v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 189 F.2d 816, 817 (C.A. 9), certiorari denied, 342 U.S. 830; L. Gillarde Co. v. Joseph Martinelli & Co., Inc., 169 F.2d 60, 60-61 (C.A. 1), certiorari denied, 335 U.S. 885; Armstrong Co. v. Walling, 161 F.2d 515, 517 (C.A. 1); Superior Packing Co. v. Porter, 156 F.2d 193, 195 (C.A. 8), certiorari denied, 329 U.S. 788; Bowles v. Mannie & Co., 155 F.2d 129, 133 (C.A. 7), certiorari denied, 329 U.S. 736; Bowles v. Cudahy Packing Company, 154 F.2d 891, 892 (C.A. 3); In re Yasgur Farms, Inc., 33 Agriculture Decisions 389, 417-418 (1974); In re Weissglass Dairy Corporation, 32 Agriculture Decisions 1004, 1055 (1973), affirmed, Weissglass Gold Seal Dairy Corporation v. Butz, 369 F. Supp. 632 (S.D.N.Y.).

The doctrine of affording considerable weight to the Administrator's interpretation is particularly applicable in the field of milk. As stated by the Court in Queensboro Farms Products v. Wickard, 137 F.2d 969, 980 (C.A. 2):

> The Supreme Court has admonished us that interpretations of a statute by officers who, under the statute, act in administering it as specialists advised by experts must be accorded considerable weight by the courts. If ever there was a place for that doctrine, it is, as to milk, in connection with the administration of this Act because of its background and legislative history. The Supreme Court has, at least inferentially, so recognized.

For the foregoing reasons, the Market Administrator's determination should be upheld, and the petition should be dismissed.

ORDER

The petition is hereby dismissed and the relief requested therein is denied.

DEFAULT DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This proceeding was instituted under the Act of February 2, 1903, as amended, (Act) (21 U.S.C. §§ 111 and 120) by a complaint filed March 15, 1985, by the Administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, United States Department of Agriculture. The complaint alleged that the respondent violated sections 78.8(a)(2), 78.8(a)(3) and 71.18(a)(1)(ii) of the regulations promulgated thereunder (9 CFR §§ 78.8(a)(2), 78.8(a)(3) and 71.18(a)(1)(ii)). Copies of the complaint and the Rules of Practice Governing Proceedings Under the Act were attempted to be served by the Hearing Clerk, by certified mail, upon respondent but were returned "unclaimed", and were subsequently served by regular mail.

Pursuant to section 1.136 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.136) applicable to this proceeding, respondent was informed in the complaint and the letter of service that an answer should be filed with the Hearing Clerk within twenty (20) days after service of the complaint, and that failure to file an answer to, or plead specifically to, any allegation in the complaint would constitute an admission of such allegation pursuant to section 1.141 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.141), and a waiver of such hearing. The letter also advised the respondent that failure to request an oral hearing within the time for filing an answer would constitute a waiver, on his part, of oral hearing. Respondent has failed to respond in any manner to allegations in the complaint and respondent has not requested an oral hearing. There is some indication in the file that, before the General Counsel, the Respondent was represented by an Attorney. However, no written entry of appearance has been made herein.

Respondent's failure to deny or otherwise respond to the allegations in the complaint constitutes an admission of such allegations, pursuant to section 1.136(c) of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.136(c)). Respondent's failure to request a hearing constitutes a waiver of such hearing. There being no basis for a hearing, the material allegations of fact in the complaint are adopted and set forth as the Findings of Fact.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. John A. Eastwood, herein referred to as the respondent, is an individual whose mailing address is Box 141, Boswell, Oklahoma 74727.

2. On or about June 29, 1983, the respondent moves interstate 39 head of brucellosis exposed cattle from Boswell, Oklahoma, to Texarkana, Texas, in violation of section 78.8(a)(2) of the regulations (9 CFR § 78.8(a)(2)) in that the cattle were not accompanied by a VS Form 1-27 permit or an "S" brand permit, as required.

3. On or about June 29, 1983, the respondent moved interstate 39 head of brucellosis exposed cattle from Boswell, Oklahoma, to Texarkana, Texas, in violation of section 78.8(a)(3) of the regulations (9 CFR § 78.8(a)(3)) in that the cattle were not "S" branded, as required.

4. On or about June 29, 1983, the respondent moved interstate 39 head of brucellosis exposed cattle from Boswell, Oklahoma, to Texarkana, Texas, in violation of section 71.18(a)(1)(ii) of the regulations (9 CFR § 71.18(a)(1)(ii)) in that the cattle were not accompanied by an owner's or shipper's statement or other document, as required.

CONCLUSION

Respondent has failed to respond in any manner to the allegations of the complaint. By reason of the Findings of Fact set forth above the respondent has violated the Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder. Therefore, the following order is issued.

ORDER

Respondent John A. Eastwood is hereby assessed a civil penalty of three thousand dollars ($3,000). The respondent shall send, payable to the "Treasury of the United States" a certified check or money order, to Mark D. Dopp, Office of the General Counsel, Room 2422, South Building, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. 20250-1400, not later than thirty (30) days from the effective date of this order. This order shall have the same force and effect as if entered after full hearing and shall be final and effective 35 days after service of this Decision and Order upon respondent, unless there is an appeal to the Judicial Officer pursuant to section 1.145 of the Rules of Practice applicable to this proceeding (7 CFR § 1.145).

DEFAULT DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This proceeding was instituted under the Act of February 2, 1903, as amended, (Act) (21 U.S.C. §§ 111 and 120) by a complaint filed by the Administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, United States Department of Agriculture. The complaint alleged that the respondent Edgar Holcomb violated sections 78.3(b) and 78.8(a)(2) of the regulations promulgated thereunder (9 CFR §§ 78.3(b) and 78.8(a)(2)). Copies of the complaint and the Rules of Practice Governing Proceedings Under the Act were served by the Hearing Clerk, by certified mail, upon respondent Edgar Holcomb.

Pursuant to section 1.136 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.136) applicable to this proceeding, respondent Edgar Holcomb was informed in the complaint and the letter of service that an answer should be filed with the Hearing Clerk within twenty (20) days after service of the complaint, and that failure to file an answer to, or plead specifically to, any allegation in the complaint would constitute an admission of such allegation pursuant to section 1.141 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.141), and a waiver of such hearing. The letter also advised the respondent Edgar Holcomb that failure to request an oral hearing within the time for filing an answer would constitute a waiver, on his part, of oral hearing. Respondent Edgar Holcomb has failed to respond in any manner to allegations in the complaint and respondent Edgar Holcomb has not requested an oral hearing.

Respondent Edgar Holcomb's failure to deny or otherwise respond to the allegations in the complaint constitutes an admission of such allegations, pursuant to section 1.136(c) of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.136(c)). Respondent Edgar Holcomb's failure to request a hearing constitutes a waiver of such hearing. There being no basis for a hearing, the material allegations of fact in the complaint are adopted and set forth as the Findings of Fact.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Edgar L. Holcomb, herein referred to as a respondent, is an individual whose mailing address is General Delivery, Ft. Deposit, Alabama.

2. On or about September 27, 1984, the respondent Edgar L. Holcomb moved one (1) bull from Montgomery, Alabama, to Brookville, Indiana, in violation of section 78.8(a)(2) of the regulations (9 CFR § 78.8(a)(2)) in that the bull was not accompanied by a VS Form 1-27 permit or an "S" brand permit, as required.

3. On or about September 27, 1984, the respondents moved one (1) bull from Montgomery, Alabama, to Brookville, Indiana, in violation of section 78.3(b) of the regulations (9 CFR § 78.3(b)) in that the bull was not accompanied by a permit, as required.

CONCLUSION

Respondent Edgar L. Holcomb has failed to respond in any manner to the allegations of the complaint. By reason of the Findings of Fact set forth above the respondent Edgar L. Holcomb has violated the Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder. Therefore, the following order is issued.

ORDER

Respondent Edgar L. Holcomb is hereby assessed a civil penalty of one thousand dollars ($1000). The respondent Edgar L. Holcomb shall send, payable to the "Treasury of the United States" a certified check or money order, to Mark D. Dopp, Office of the General Counsel, Room 2422, South Building, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. 20250, not later than thirty (30) days from the effective date of this order. This order shall have the same force and effect as if entered after full hearing and shall be final and effective 35 days after service of this Decision and Order upon respondent Edgar Holcomb, unless there is an appeal to the Judicial Officer pursuant to section 1.145 of the Rules of Practice applicable to this proceeding (7 CFR § 1.145).

[The Default Decision and Order became final on January 28, 1986.—Ed.]

In re: JAMES GRADY, PATRICK J. GRADY and ROSEMARY GRADY. A.Q. Docket No. 54. Decided January 31, 1986.

Violation of regulations governing interstate cattle movement.

The Judicial Officer affirmed Judge McGrail's order assessing civil penalties totalling $29,000 for violating the regulations governing the interstate movement of cattle to prevent the spread of brucellosis. Respondents failed to have a statement or other document showing prescribed information accompanying their cattle moved interstate, failed to have a health certificate, and failed to have cattle identified by a backtag or other approved identification. Intrastate health certificates lack the detail required for interstate movement. Respondents' failure to testify gives rise to the inference that their testimony would have been adverse. Even if respondents could have shown that the regulations were not scrupulously followed in other cases, that would not be a defense here.

Warren L. Bush, for respondents.

Decision by Donald A. Campbell, Judicial Officer.

DECISION AND ORDER

This is an administrative proceeding for the assessment of civil penalties for violations of the regulations governing the interstate movement of cattle to prevent the spread of brucellosis (9 CFR §§ 71.18, 78.9). An initial Decision and Order was issued on September 26, 1985, by Administrative Law Judge Edward H. McGrail (ALJ) assessing civil penalties totalling $29,000.

On October 28, 1985, respondent appealed to the Judicial Officer, to whom final administrative authority to decide the Department's cases subject to 5 U.S.C. §§ 556 and 557 has been delegated (7 CFR § 2.35).[1] The case was referred to the Judicial Officer for decision on November 29, 1985.

Based upon a careful consideration of the record, the initial Decision and Order is adopted as the final Decision and Order in this case (with a few changes too trivial to be itemized), except that the effective date of the order is changed in view of the appeal. Additional conclusions by the Judicial Officer follow the ALJ's conclusions.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE'S INITIAL DECISION

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is an administrative proceeding instituted by a complaint filed on March 15, 1984, by the Administrator, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, United States Department of Agriculture, seeking assessment of civil penalties against respondents under the Act of February 2, 1903, as amended, 21 U.S.C. §§ 111 and 120, and the regulations promulgated thereunder (9 CFR §§ 71.18 and 78.9). An amended complaint was filed on October 2, 1984, pursuant to the Rules of Practice, 7 CFR § 1.130 et seq.

The amended complaint alleges thirty-one (31) violations involving interstate movement of cattle during the period March 11, 1983, through December 4, 1983. All violations involved interstate movement of cattle to or from the State of Iowa, a Class A State, without being accompanied by a certificate or other document showing prescribed information as required by the pertinent regulations, specifically 9 CFR §§ 71.18, 78.9(b)(3)(ii) and 79.9(c)(3)(ii). Respondent James Grady is cited for twenty (20) violations; respondent Patrick J. Grady is cited for six (6) violations; respondent Rose Mary Grady is cited for two (2) violations; and respondents James Grady and Patrick J. Grady are jointly cited for three (3) violations.

Answer to the original complaint was filed by respondents on March 15, 1984, denying all material allegations. In answer to the amended complaint, filed by respondents on October 21, 1984, all allegations were again denied, as well as paragraph I(c) citing Rose

Reg. 3219 (1953), reprinted in 5 U.S.C. app. at 1068 (1982). The Department's present Judicial Officer was appointed in January 1971, having been involved with the Department's regulatory programs since 1949 (including 3 years' trial litigation; 10 years' appellate litigation relating to appeals from the decisions of the prior Judicial Officer; and 8 years as administrator of the Packers and Stockyards Act regulatory program).

Mary Grady as a respondent. However, whereas counsel for respondents filed the original answer as a representative for James Grady, Patrick J. Grady and Rose Mary Grady, the answer to the amended complaint was filed as representative of James Grady, Patrick J. Grady and Rose Mary Kryeakakis.

Oral hearing was held before the undersigned Administrative Law Judge on May 7–9, 1985, at Sioux City, Iowa. Complainant was represented by Thomas E. Bundy, Esq., and Kevin Thiemann, Esq., Office of General Counsel, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. Respondents were represented by Warren L. Bush, Esq., Wall Lake, Iowa. Simultaneous briefs were requested to be filed on or before July 10, 1985 and reply brief on or before July 30, 1985. Complainant's brief was filed on July 10, 1985. Respondent's brief was not filed until July 16, 1985. A reply brief was filed on or before July 30, 1985, by complainant. However, no reply brief was filed on behalf of respondents.

STATEMENT OF LAW

Generally, Title 21 of the United States Code, § 122, provides for the assessment of civil penalties for the violation of regulations issued pursuant to authority invested in the Secretary of Agriculture in Sections 111 and 120 of Title 21 of the United States Code. Sections 111 and 120 of Title 21, United States Code, authorize the Secretary to promulgate such regulations as to prevent the introduction, dissemination, or spread of contagious animal diseases through interstate movements of cattle.

Sections 71.18, 78.9(b)(3)(ii) and 78.9(c)(3)(ii) of the regulations promulgated by the Secretary pursuant to the above authority require that cows over twenty-four months of age or parturient or postparturient from herds not known to be affected by brucellosis, and moved other than directly to slaughter or to a quarantined feedlot, must be accompanied on an interstate movement by a statement or other document showing prescribed information and a health certificate, and be individually identified with a U.S. Department of Agriculture prescribed backtag or other approved identification. For ready reference the specific sections of these regulations, as well as Sections 111, 120, and 122 of Title 21, United States Code, are set forth in Appendix A hereto.

The States of Iowa, South Dakota and Nebraska are Class A states, as designated by 9 CFR 78.20(b). The area of Montana which includes Valley County (Hinsdale) was a Class A area at the time of the movement in question, as designated by 9 CFR 78.20(b).

The State of Oklahoma is a Class B state, as designated by 9 CFR 78.20(c).

FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS

General Findings

So that repetition may not burden the length of these findings, certain General Findings pertaining to two or more of the allegations of the amended complaint are set forth as follows:

1. The record does not clearly show whether each of the respondents own or operate individual farms at Dunlap, Iowa. It is therefore assumed that there is one "Grady" farm at Dunlap, Iowa, which was used by all respondents for the interstate movement of the cattle involved herein.

2. The records of the South Dakota Livestock Sanitary Board, Pierre, South Dakota (Board) were searched for the period March to September 1983 by experienced personnel of the Board and by Mr. George Crowell, Compliance Officer, U.S. Department of Agriculture, to determine whether any health certificates consigning cattle owned by James Grady, Patrick Grady or Rose Mary Grady from any point in Iowa to any point in South Dakota had been received by the Board. A negative reply, dated January 11, 1984, was received from Dr. D. E. Hughes, State Veterinarian and Executive Secretary of the Board. The search by Mr. Crowell also proved negative. These records were not searched for the name Rose Mary Kryeakakis (CX-91; Tr. 373-375).[1]

3. The records of the Iowa Department of Agriculture, Division of Animal Industry, Des Moines, Iowa (Department) were caused to be searched by experienced personnel of that Department to determine if any health certificate had been issued to James Grady, Patrick Grady, Wendell Grady or Rose Mary Grady for the importation of cattle into the State of Iowa, or the export of cattle from Iowa to the States of Minnesota, South Dakota and Nebraska during the year 1983. This Division is the repository for copies of health certificates issued by accredited veterinarians for the interstate movement of cattle. When cattle are moved from Iowa, a copy of the health certificate is forwarded to the destination state. In turn, Iowa receives a copy of any health certificate from the origin state when Iowa is the destination state. These searches failed to show any health certificates issued in any of these names for the interstate movement of cattle in the year 1983. The name Rose Mary Kryeakakis was not searched through these records (CX-60-61; Tr. 303-308, 309-313).

4. Brucellosis is an infectious, contagious, communicative disease of livestock which can also infect humans. In livestock it is considered a reproductive disease which causes abortions, weak and still born calves, and a decrease in milk production of the cows. Additionally, it can cause undulant fever in humans who come in contact with infected livestock. Nationwide, production losses to the livestock industry due to brucellosis infected cattle has been estimated as approximately $30 million per year (Tr. 10–11, 17).

5. The overall aim of regulations governing the interstate movement of cattle is to eradicate such animal diseases as brucellosis and tuberculosis in order to reduce and prevent losses to the livestock industry. They also provide protection to the receiving state and to a buyer of livestok against the introduction of such infectious diseases into the herds of the state and the individual. Specifically, the prescribed metal eartag enables authorities to trace the animal back to its source and identify other animals that have been associated with that animal in its travel (Tr. 9, 431–432).

6. Test eligible animals, subject to the regulations and moving from a Class A or B state, are designated by age or as parturient or postparturient. A parturient cow refers to one showing visible signs of approaching parturation, or calving, or within two weeks of calving. Postparturient refers to a cow that has given birth to a calf. The usage of the term "cow/calf pairs" implies in the language of the industry, a cow and a calf born of that same cow. They are in fact a pair (Tr. 16–18, 429).

One method of determining the age of a cow is by a mouth inspection of its teeth. However, an experienced person may also determine the age of a cow from physical changes which take place in a cow in proceeding through the various stages of growth. Such changes include the addition or loss of teeth, the widening of the mouth as additional teeth are formed, the formation of a longer head, bone structure changes in the body, development of the udder after calving and weight (Tr. 67–68; 103–104; 115–116; 180–182).

7. In 1983, there were some Simmental cattle at the Grady farm; however, it was unknown as to whether or not they were registered. The only testimony or documents of record relating to purebred cattle is that relating to the Limousin breed (RX–9, Tr. 465, 500, 514–515). There is no evidence of record which shows that the requirements for classifying Simmental cattle are the same as those required for classifying Limousin cattle. Generally, a tattoo in a cow's ear is not recognized by a purebred association unless a certificate has been issued by that association. The registered certificate should accompany these cattle. Without the registration certificate, the tattoo would not be recognized as anyone with a tattoo iron could tattoo any cow.

The record fails to show that any of the cattle shipped by respondents were accompanied by a purebred association certificate. To the contrary, it has been shown that the cattle shipped were crossbred cows (CX-13, 18, 31, 68, 74; Tr. 40-42; 93-94; 124-129; 219; 229-230; 240-244; 321; 354; 384-385).

Specific Findings

As with the counts of the complaint the below listed findings will be treated seriatim.

I

(a) Respondent Patrick J. Grady is an individual whose mailing address is Dunlap, Iowa 51529.

(b) Respondent James Grady is an individual whose mailing address is Dunlap, Iowa 51529.

(c) Respondent Rose Mary Grady is an individual whose mailing address is 7703 Cedarwood Circle, Boca Raton, Florida 33432. She is the same individual identified in the record as Rose Mary Kryeakakis.

II-III

Mr. Leslie Pedersen, Denison, Iowa, provided an affidavit showing that on March 11, 1983, while an employee of Les Brown Trucking, he loaded 54 cows at the Wendell Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, transported them to a weighing station at Dunlap, Iowa, then transported them to Donald Vogt's farm near Blair, Nebraska. He could not recall having been provided any certificates by the Gradys to accompany the cattle. The only document he was provided was an invoice for the price of the cattle which he gave to Mr. Donald Vogt upon delivery. Mr. Vogt gave him a check made out to Pat Grady for the cost of the cattle which he gave to Pat Grady. Mr. Vogt paid for the cost of transportation of the cattle from Dunlap, Iowa, to Blair, Nebraska (CX-50; Tr. 267).

An affidavit of Mr. Donald J. Vogt, a farmer and cattle feeder, Rte. 1, Blair, Nebraska, obtained by a compliance officer, Agriculture Veterinary Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), stated that on or about March 11, 1983, he received a shipment of 54 cows, all over two years of age, at his farm in Blair, Nebraska, from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa. He had previously examined these cows at the Grady farm and was told they had been pregnancy tested and were all open. Almost all of the cows had had at least one calf, and four or five of the cows had calves soon after he received them.

This shipment of cows was first taken to Dunlap, Iowa, for weighing after which Mr. Vogt agreed to purchase the cows. The Gradys made the arrangements for the Les Brown Trucking Company to transport these cows to Dunlap, Iowa, and later to Mr. Vogt's farm in Blair, Nebraska. The Gradys paid for the trucking into Dunlap, Iowa and Mr. Vogt paid for the trucking from Dunlap, Iowa to his farm in Blair, Nebraska. The check for the cows was either sent back with the truck or it was mailed. Mr. Vogt did not receive a health certificate when the cows were delivered. The only document he received was an invoice showing the number of cows delivered, the price per hundredweight and the total dollar amount due (CX-27; Tr. 163).

Mr. Maurice Partridge, former compliance officer, Agriculture Veterinary Service, USDA, new retired, while on active duty obtained a copy of the invoice from Mr. Vogt which showed that the 54 cattle weighed a total of 41,935 pounds and, at $52.50 per hundredweight, Mr. Vogt paid a total of $22,015.88. From this amount, $72.00 was deducted for the cost of transportation from Dunlap, Iowa, to Blair, Nebraska, leaving a total of $21,943.88 as the amount to be paid to Pat Grady for these cattle (CX-25; Tr. 162).

Mr. Partridge also obtained from Mr. Vogt a copy of a sight draft dated March 11, 1983, paid to the order of Pat Grady in the amount of $21,943.88 for 54 heifers at $52.50 per hundredweight. The buyer was listed at Donald H. Vogt. The sight draft was drawn on the Washington County Bank of Air, Nebraska, endorsed by, and deposited in the account of Pat Grady (CX-26; Tr. 162).

The above facts are not rebutted in this record. The 54 parturient/postparturient cows were moved from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, to Mr. Vogt's farm at Blair, Nebraska, an interstate movement. Mr. Pedersen, the truck driver who delivered the cattle, was not provided an owner's statement nor a health certificate to accompany the cattle. He was only given an invoice listing the amount of money to be paid for the cattle. Such invoice does not comply with the requirements of § 71.18. Documents of record show that the invoice was issued by Pat Grady, and that payment for the cattle was made to, and acknowledged by check endorsement by Pat Grady. See also General Findings 2 and 3, supra.

Nor can respondent Patrick Grady claim that this movement, without the required certificate, comes within the exceptions set forth in § 78.9(b)(3)(iii) or 78.9(b)(3)(iv) since the Grady farm cannot be considered a "Farm of Origin", as defined in § 78.1(dd). The record shows that it was a place where purchased cattle were assembled for sale. Moreover, § 79.9(b)(3)(iv) provides the exception only when there is an interstate movement of cattle without change of ownership to another premise belonging to the same owner. The latter was not the situation here since the cattle were moved to Mr. Vogt's farm.

Therefore, it must be found that Patrick Grady moved, or caused to be moved interstate, 54 parturient/postparturient cows over 2 years of age, from Dunlap, Iowa, to Blair, Nebraska, without being accompanied by an owner's statement or other document in violation of § 71.18, and without a certificate, as defined in § 78.1(n), in violation of § 78.9(b)(3)(ii).

IV

Mr. Dan Snyder, Sr., Atkinson, Nebraska, is a livestock trucker in partnership with his sons, Melvin, Danny and Clifton, and his son-in-law, Les Nelson, operating under the name Snyder Trucking. During 1983, he received a number of calls from Pat Grady for need of a truck to transport cattle. Upon receipt of such a call he would contact one of his sons, or son-in-law, whoever was available, to respond to Pat Grady's request. The information concerning the dates of trips and who transported a specific load was provided him by his sons and son-in-law (CX-4; Tr. 46-47).

Mr. Danny D. Snyder, Jr., Atkinson, Nebraska, is the son of Dan Snyder, Sr., and is a driver for Snyder Trucking. On May 23, 1983, Pat Grady helped him load 43 cows, 4 bulls, and 34 calves from the Grady farm in Dunlap, Iowa to be delivered to the Kehn Ranch, St. Charles, South Dakota. Pat Grady, who was the owner of the cattle, gave him a sealed envelope which he assumed contained the health papers to accompany the cattle. Mr. Snyder delivered the cattle to a pasture location at the Kehn Ranch, Inc., St. Charles, South Dakota (Tr. 56-60; CX-5, 7).

Mr. Edwin C. Kehn is a rancher, who operates Kehn Ranch, Inc., St. Charles, South Dakota. Kehn Ranch grazes livestock in its pastures for a fee. Mr. Kehn has had conversations with Jim Grady but the bulk of his business has been with Pat Grady. On May 23, 1983, he received a shipment of cattle from Pat Grady, Dunlap, Iowa, consisting of 34 cow/calf pairs, 9 heifers and 4 bulls, a total of 81 cattle to be let out in his pasture for the grazing season. The cattle were delivered by Danny D. Snyder of Snyder Trucking who acknowledged on a Kehn Ranch "Cattle Kit" form that he had deliverd a total of 81 cattle consisting of the 34 cow/calf pairs, 9 heifers and 4 bulls. Mr. Kehn was only given a bill of lading by Danny Snyder, whereas he also expected to receive the necessary health papers for these cattle. When Mr. Kehn contacted Pat Grady about health papers, Pat Grady advised that they would be forthcoming but Mr. Kehn never received them (CX-8).

On May 24, 1983, Pat Grady and Mr. Kehn signed an agreement whereby Mr. Kehn agreed to pasture at his ranch the above 34 cow/calf pairs, 4 bulls and 9 yearling heifers owned by Pat Grady. At the same time, Pat Grady issued a check to Mr. Kehn in the amount of $1,150.00 for the services provided by Mr. Kehn. The cattle were placed in a separate pasture on Mr. Kehn's ranch, and remained there throughout the grazing period.

While the cattle were still in pasture at the Kehn Ranch, an agent from the South Dakota State Livestock Sanitary Board (Sanitary Board) contacted Mr. Kehn regarding health papers on the cattle shipped by Pat Grady to the Kehn ranch. The agent was advised by Mr. Kehn that no health papers for the cattle were provided by Pat Grady. Later, Mr. Kehn was visited by another agent from the Sanitary Board inquiring about the health papers for the Pat Grady cattle. Since none were provided by Pat Grady, the agent issued a citation, dated October 17, 1983, in the name of Patrick J. Grady, notifying him that his cattle were quarantined for lack of a health certificate. These were the same Pat Grady cattle Mr. Kehn received on May 23, 1983 (CX-5, 40-42; Tr. 227-237).

Mr. Kehn believed that possibly one of the cows could be a purebred cow but that the others were crossbreeds. However, he believed if any of the cattle were purebred, Pat Grady would have identified them. Mr. Kehn would also want to know about them for purposes of insurance (CX-43-46; Tr. 239-251).

His opinion as to what type of cows they were was based on their appearance, and the fact that if they were purebred such would certainly show up in the calves. Such purebred characteristics and markings did not show in the calves involved. Additionally, the calves would be more valuable, have been registered, and have been accompanied by the necessary purebred papers. Further, it has been his experience that a purebred calf not only bears an ear tattoo but also a metal tag for identification to match up with the mother cow. None of the calves had metal eartags, nor did several of the calves he examined have ear tattoos.

From the record, it is readily apparent that 34 cow/calf pairs were moved from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, to the Kehn Ranch, St. Charles, South Dakota, an interstate movement. It is equally apparent that the 34 cow/calf pairs were owned by Patrick Grady, and were moved by him interstate for the purpose of grazing them on land owned by the Kehn Ranch. The signed agreement shows that the fee paid by Patrick Grady was for grazing and other services to be provided and was not a lease for the grazing land. That the required certificate for the interstate transportation of these cattle was never obtained, or provided, is attested to by the citation issued by the Sanitary Board of the State of South Dakota. See General Findings 2 and 3, supra. Nor is the exception of § 78.9(b)(3)(iv) available to respondent. Although ownership was retained by Patrick Grady, the cattle were not moved to another premises owned by him.

Therefore, it must be found that Patrick Grady moved, or caused to be moved interstate, 34 postparturient cows from Dunlap, Iowa, to St. Charles, South Dakota, in violation of § 78.9(b)(3)(ii) of Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, because the cows were not accompanied by a certificate, as required.

Clifton J. ("Tip") Snyder, O'Neill, Nebraska, is the son of Dan Snyder, Sr., identified in Finding IV, and is a driver for Snyder Trucking. On June 8, 1983, in response to a call from his father, he picked up 45 cow/calf pairs and 2 bulls from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, for delivery to Vance M. Feyereisen, Iona, South Dakota. His "Permit for Live Stock Transportation," No. 1711, dated June 8, 1983, showed the name of John Kryeakakis, Dunlap, Iowa, as the owner. Jim Grady signed as the authorized agent for the owner. He listed only the total number of cow/calf pairs and the two bulls on this Permit. As a transporter of cattle, he is required to fill out this Permit by the State of Nebraska for every load of cattle he hauls. He was given the name of the owner and the fact that he was from Florida by Mr. Feyereisen. He only received a sealed envelope from Jim Grady to accompany the cattle and turned it over to the consignee upon delivery of the cattle. Mr. Snyder did not know what was in this envelope (CX-49, 11; Tr. 71-75).

Mr. Vance M. Feyereisen, Gregory, South Dakota, provided an affidavit stating that in June and July, 1983, Pat and Rose Mary Grady boarded cattle in his pastures. He was present each time when the cattle were unloaded, but the truck driver did not provide him with any official health papers on either load when the cattle were delivered, nor did he have any record of eartags being on the cattle. By a written agreement, dated June 8, 1983, between "John Grady," cattle owner, and Mr. Feyereisen, the latter agreed to provide grazing in Lyman County, South Dakota, and other services for 45 cow/calf pairs and two bulls for the 1983 season of no less than five (5) months, at the rate of $14.00 per month per cow/calf pair, and $14.00 per month for each bull. Mr. Feyereisen signed the agreement before a notary public on June 8, 1983. Although the name "John Grady" is the name listed in the body of the agreement, it was deleted as the owner on the signatory line and the name Rose Mary Grady was inserted as cattle owner. Rose Mary Grady signed the agreement before a notary public in Broward County, Florida, on June 21, 1983. John Grady was inserted in this agreement because Mr. Feyereisen assumed the "John" who was at his ranch was John Grady. However, he was in error and this was the reason for the signature change in the agreement. The "John" was believed to be John Kryeakakis (CX-65, 66).

The evidence of record shows that Rose Mary Grady was the owner of the 45 cow/calf pairs and two bulls involved here, that James Grady was her authorized agent, and that the cattle were moved interstate for her benefit and at her behest from Dunlap, Iowa to grazing land owned by Mr. Feyereisen in Lyman County, South Dakota. These facts are not rebutted in this record. See also General Findings 2 and 3.

As with Finding IV, the signed agreement shows that the fee charged Rose Mary Grady was for grazing and other services to be provided and not for lease of grazing land. Further, since James Grady was designated as her duly authorized agent she, as principal and owner of the cattle, is responsible for his action in moving the cattle interstate without a certificate as required. Further, the action of James Grady was acknowledged and approved by Rose Mary Grady in signing the grazing agreement approximately two weeks after the interstate movement of the cattle. Again, as with Finding IV, the exemption of Section 78.9(b)(3)(iv) is not available since the cattle were moved to a premise not owned by Rose Mary Grady.

Therefore, it is found that Rose Mary Grady moved, or caused to be moved, 45 postparturient cows interstate in violation of Section 78.9(b)(3)(ii) of Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, as they were not accompanied by a certificate, as required.

VI

Mr. Clifton J. ("Tip") Snyder is the same person identified in Finding V, supra. In response to a call from his father on June 21, 1983, he transported a load of cow/calf pairs, some loaded at the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, and some loaded at the Moorehead Livestock Market, Moorehead, Iowa. He delivered some of these cattle to a farm near Moville, Iowa, and the remainder to a sale barn in Huron, South Dakota. As with the previous load in June, 1983, he received a sealed envelope from one of the Gradys and was told it contained the health papers covering the cattle. Upon arrival at this destination, this sealed envelope was delivered to the consignee. Jim Grady paid for the transportation of these cattle. The Nebraska "Permit for Live Stock Transportation," No. 1714, dated June 21, 1983, which Mr. Snyder filled out, shows Jerry Bales, Huron, South Dakota, as owner, and that 23 cow/calf pairs were transported from Dunlap, Iowa, to Huron, South Dakota on that date. Total transportation charges were $393.90 toward which Jim Grady paid $100. The authorized owner's agent was shown as (sic) Alan Bales (CX-4, 11, 70; Tr. 79-80, 84-85).

At a meeting between Mr. George Crowell, Compliance Officer, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, USDA, Jerry, Kent and Allen Bales, records of the Bales Continental Commission Company (BCCC), Huron, South Dakota, were provided which showed that this company purchased 23 mixed cow/calf pairs at $525.00 per pair, a total of $12,075.00, from Jim Grady, Route 2, Dunlap, Iowa, and that $150.00 was added for charges by Snyder Trucking. The company records also showed that it issued a check to Jim Grady, dated August 22, 1983, in the amount of $12,075.00.

It was explained by Jerry Bales in an interview with Mr. Crowell that Jim Grady had contacted that company to have them sell some of his cattle at their auction barn. When the cattle first arrived, Jim Grady was advised they were too thin and would not sell for the price Jim Grady desired. It was recommended before any sale that they be placed in pasture, and they were. A month or two later, Jim Grady called Jerry Bales advising him of his need for money. At that time, the above check was issued to Jim Grady (CX-68-69; Tr. 341-347).

Documents and testimony of record show that 23 cow/calf pairs were transported from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, to the BCCC, Huron, South Dakota, an interstate movement requiring the necessary certificate. Although Mr. Snyder, the truck driver for this movement, listed Mr. Jerry Bales as the owner of these cattle on his permit, it is clear from other testimony and documents of record relating to the transaction that James Grady was the owner of the 23 cow/calf pairs and shipped them to BCCC for sale at auction.

The above evidence is not rebutted in this record. See General Findings 2 and 3, supra. As stated in Findings II-III, the exceptions set forth in § 78.9(b)(3)(iii) and § 78.9(b)(3)(iv) are not available here for the reasons stated in that Finding. It must therefore be found that James Grady moved, or caused to be moved interstate the postparturient cattle involved here in violation of Section 78.9(b)(3)(ii) of Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, as they were not accompanied by a certificate, as required.

Mr. Leslie Dean Brown, Denison, Iowa, has been transporting livestock approximately six years under the name Les Brown Trucking Company. He stated in his affidavit that during the period July to October, 1983, nine loads of cattle were moved by his trucking company from the Grady farm at Dunlap, Iowa, to various locations in South Dakota. His company records show that on July 12, 1983, he transported 96 cattle from the Grady farm at Dunlap, Iowa, and delivered them to "Armstrong, Flandreau, South Dakota." These cattle were mostly cow/calf pairs. The movement of these cattle was ordered by Jim Grady. However, the only papers provided to accompany the cattle was a sealed envelope which was turned over to the consignee upon delivery (CX-22; Tr. 264-266).

Mr. Douglas A. Armstrong, Flandreau, South Dakota, has been a farmer for eight years. In his affidavit, he stated that in the summer of 1983, he saw an ad in the Sioux Falls Argus Leader advertising cows for sale in Iowa. Initially, Mr. Douglas asked his brother-in-law, Sam Flinders, Sutherland, Iowa, to examine some of the cow/calf pairs advertised. Later, Mr. Douglas went to Dunlap, Iowa, where he contracted with Jim Grady to purchase 48 cow/calf pairs. Mr. Flinders was not with him at the time of the purchase, nor did he have any financial interest in the transaction. Mr. Armstrong paid Jim Grady $1,000.00 as a down payment on the purchase price of the cattle. It was understood that Jim Grady was to deliver these cattle to him at Flandreau, South Dakota, and that Jim Grady was to take care of the necessary papers and health certificate.

Upon delivery at his farm, the only papers provided Mr. Armstrong by the truck driver was an intrastate health certificate. This was made out to Sam Flinders, his brother-in-law, who had no interest in the cattle, and was made out for intrastate shipment to Sutherland, Iowa. The "Intrastate Health Certificate" was issued on July 11, 1983, by the Iowa Deparment of Agriculture, Division of Animal Industry, and contained the caution "Not Valid for Interstate Shipment." It showed that on the date issued, the seller, James Grady, had 48 cattle tested (No. 42CND2101 through No. 42CND2148) for brucellosis. Their backtags were listed as Nos. 3550-3598, with No. 3567 being voided. The purchaser was listed as Sam Flinders, Sutherland, Iowa. Mr. Armstrong gave the truck driver a certified check, made out to Jim Grady, for the balance due on the purchase price of the cattle, and also gave the truck driver a personal check for the transportation charges due.

Mr. Armstrong provided a copy of a certified cashier's check, No. 46504, dated July 11, 1983, "Payable to James Grady for deposit only at the Dunlap Savings Bank." The check was issued in the amount of $26,120.00 which reflected the purchase price agreed upon, $27,120.00, less the $1,000.00 Mr. Armstrong had previously given James Grady as a down payment on the cattle. This check was given to the truck driver to be delivered to James Grady (CX-71, 72, 73; Tr. 348-350, 388-389).

Affidavits on record reflect that 48 cow/calf pairs were transported from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, to the farm of Mr. Armstrong at Flandreau, South Dakota, an interstate movement. The record also reflects that negotiations for the purchase of the 48 cow/calf pairs were carried out between James Grady as owner and Mr. Armstrong as purchaser. That the latter was the true purchaser is evidenced by the fact that he paid $1,000.00 down as part of the purchase price and the remainder of the purchase price by a certified check obtained by Mr. Armstrong the day prior to delivery of the cattle. There is no indication in the record to show that Mr. Les Brown, the truck driver, ever stopped in Sutherland, Iowa. Rather, the record shows that it was a straight haul to Flandreau, South Dakota.

Additionally, the health certificate issued by the Iowa Department of Agriculture, Division of Animal Industry, clearly carried the caution that the certificate was not valid for interstate shipment. As has been noted in the record, the information required by an interstate certificate is more detailed than that required on the Iowa Intrastate Health Certificate (Tr. 13). These facts are not rebutted in this record. See General Findings 2 and 3, supra.

Although the documents and testimony pertaining to this count, as also in other counts, were objected to on the basis of hearsay, the Rules of Practice applicable to this proceeding permit reception into the record of relevant and material evidence, § 1.141(g)(iv). Further, responsible and probative hearsay evidence is admissable in administrative proceedings. Such proceedings are not bound by the procedural and evidentiary rules in effect in court proceedings. See 1 Davidson, Agricultural Law, § 3.22 and cases cited therein at fn. 113.

Therefore, it must be found that James Grady moved, or caused to be moved, 48 postparturient cows from Dunlap, Iowa, to Flandreau, South Dakota, in violation of Section 78.9(b)(3)(ii) of Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, as the cows were not accompanied by an interstate health certificate, as required.

VIII

Mr. Clifton J. ("Tip") Snyder is the same person identified in Finding V, supra. In response to a call from his father, Dan Snyder, Sr., on July 19, 1983, he picked up 45 cow/calf pairs at the Grady's farm, Dunlap, Iowa, and delivered them to Mr. Vance Feyereisen, Iona, South Dakota. The name he placed on his Nebraska "Permit for Live Stock Transportation," No. 1718, dated July 19, 1983, as owner was "Sam B. in care of Pat Grady." Mr. Snyder believed that Pat Grady may have been acting for someone else. As with the previous loads of cattle in June, 1983, Mr. Snyder was only given a sealed envelope to accompany the cattle and told that the envelope contained the necessary health papers for the cattle. On each trip he delivered the sealed envelope to the consignee. Pat Grady paid for the transportation of these cattle (CX-4, 10, 11; Tr. 75-79, 82-84).

Mr. Vance M. Feyereisen, Gregory, South Dakota, is the same person identified in Finding V, supra. As with the delivery in June, the truck driver that delivered the July load of cattle did not leave any official health certificate, nor does Mr. Feyereisen have records which show the cattle had eartags. Mr. Feyereisen was present when these cattle were unloaded. An agreement, dated July 19, 1983, between Mr. Feyereisen and Rose Mary Grady, cattle owner, provided that the former would provide grazing land in Lyman County, South Dakota for 45 cow/calf pairs and 2 bulls for approximately 4 months at a price of $14.00 per month, per cow/calf pair, and $14.00 per month per bull. It also included other services to be provided by Mr. Feyereisen, and obligated Rose Mary Grady to pay the sum of $1,316.00, for grazing and services. The agreement was signed by Mr. Feyereisen on July 26, 1983, and by Rose Mary Grady as cattle owner on August 4, 1983, before a notary public in Broward County, Florida (CX-65, 67; Tr. 340-341).

The record is clear that 45 cow/calf pairs and two bulls were owned by Rose Mary Grady and were moved for her benefit and at her behest from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa to grazing land owned by Mr. Feyereisen in Lyman County, South Dakota, an interstate movement. As with the previous shipment of cattle in June 1983, Rose Mary Grady acknowledged and approved this movement by signing the grazing agreement approximately one week following their delivery to South Dakota. This agreement was for use of grazing land and other services and was not a lease for the land. As found in Findings IV and V, the exemption found in § 78.9(b)(3)(iv) is not available to Respondent since the premises were not owned by Rose Mary Grady. See General Findings 2 and 3, supra.

Therefore, it is found that Rose Mary Grady moved, or caused to be moved, 45 postparturient cows interstate in violation of § 78.9(b)(3)(ii) of Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, as the cows were not accompanied by a certificate, as required.

IX

The records of Mr. Leslie Dean Brown, who is identified in Finding VII, show that 90 head of cattle were transported on July 31, 1983, from the Grady farm at Dunlap, Iowa, by one of his drivers, Jim Comstock. Jim Grady ordered the movement of these cattle. As with other shipments transported from the Grady farm, the only papers that accompanied the load was a sealed envelope (CX-22, Tr. 265-266).

Mr. Jim Comstock, Denison, Iowa, has on occasion driven a livestock truck for Leslie Brown, supra. On or about July 31, 1983, he loaded approximately 90 head of cattle at the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa. This load consisted of approximately 45 cows and 45 calves. At the time of loading, one of the Grady brothers, an older man, and Leslie Brown were present. Mr. Comstock delivered these cattle to two different farms, one in Trent, South Dakota, and the other in Dell Rapids, South Dakota. As far as he knew there were no health papers given him to accompany the cattle. However, he was given a sealed envelope to leave with the consignees and health papers may have been in this sealed envelope (CX-51; Tr. 269-270).

Mr. Gary Williams farms and raises cattle at Trent, South Dakota. He purchased 30 cow/calf pairs and 1 Limousin yearling bull from Jim Grady which were delivered to his farm at Trent, South Dakota on July 31, 1983. When Mr. Williams and Jim Grady arrived at an agreement on the purchase of these cattle, Mr. Williams understood that the necessary health papers would accompany the shipment of cattle. Jim Grady arranged for the transportation of the cattle. The only paper presented to him by the trucker upon delivery of the cattle was a handwritten invoice addressed to him showing the price per cow/calf pair ($537.50), the total price for the 30 cow/calf pairs ($16,125), the price for the Limousin bull ($600), and the total price for the shipment ($16,725). A notation on the invoice stated "make check to Jim Grady." Mr. Williams indicated on this invoice that check no. 1062, dated July 31, 1983, was issued at 10:00 p.m. that evening. A copy of the check indicates that it was issued to Jim Grady on July 31, 1983, in the amount of $16,725, and that it was endorsed by Jim Grady.

Mr. Williams did not check the cattle for identification at the time of delivery because of the darkness. However, a few days later, he brought the cattle out of pasture and ran them through a restraining chute to put his own eartags and pasture identification numbers on them. Upon examination, none of the cattle had metal eartags or other identification. He did not check for ear tattoos (CX-18, 19, 20; Tr. 122-130).

Affidavits of record show that 45 cow/calf pairs and one bull were transported from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, to two separate locations in South Dakota, an interstate movement. As pertinent to this finding, 30 cow/calf pairs and 1 bull were delivered to Mr. Williams' farm at Trent, South Dakota. As will be shown in Findings X-XI, infra, the remaining 15 cow/calf pairs were delivered to Mr. Mark Crisp, Dell Rapids, South Dakota.

The transaction here involved Jim Grady as the seller and Mr. Williams as the purchaser. Transportation was arranged by Jim Grady and a check was issued to him by Mr. Williams in payment of the purchse of 30 cow/calf pairs. Additionally, it is apparent that the only document accompanying the shipment was an invoice for the price of the cattle. A health certificate, as described in § 78.1(n) was not provided Mr. Williams by Jim Grady. See General Findings 2 and 3, supra. The affidavits here provide substantial evidence to prove the violation alleged and, although they may be considered hearsay evidence, they are admissible in an administrative hearing, as noted in Finding VII.

Therefore, it must be found that James Grady moved, or caused to be moved, 30 postparturient cows from Dunlap, Iowa to Trent, South Dakota in violation of § 78.9(b)(3)(ii) of Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, as the cows were not accompanied by a certificate, as required.

The records of Mr. Leslie Dean Brown, identified in Finding IX, show that on July 31, 1983, one of his drivers, Jim Comstock, transported 90 head of cattle from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, to Trent, South Dakota.

Mr. Jim Comstock, also identified in Finding IX, on or about July 31, 1983, loaded 90 head of cattle at the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, under the same set of circumstances as set forth in Finding IX. He delivered these cattle to two different farms in South Dakota. As pertinent to this Finding, these cattle were delivered to a farm approximately 1 mile southeast of Dell Rapids, South Dakota. As far as Mr. Comstock knew, there were no health papers given him to accompany the cattle. However, he was given a sealed envelope to leave with the consignee and health papers may have been contained in this sealed envelope (CX-51; Tr. 269-270).

Mr. Mark Crisp is a farmer who resides in Dell Rapids, South Dakota. In two affidavits he stated that in response to an ad he had seen in the Sioux Falls Argus Leader, he called Mr. Grady and told him that he was interested in crossbred cows. Several weeks later, Pat Grady called Mr. Crisp and told him that such cows were available and that they were vaccinated and tested. Mr. Crisp bought 15 cow/calf pairs which were delivered to him on the night of July 31, 1983. However, the trucker did not deliver any health certificates for the cattle to him. The cows delivered to him did not have any metal eartags, plastic tags or paper backtags, nor did Mr. Crisp receive a brand certificate, or breed association certificate for any of the cattle.

Mr. Crisp contacted Pat Grady who told Mr. Crisp that he could not provide a health certificate for the cattle he had purchased. When asked about eartags, Pat Grady told him that any eartags the cows may have had were removed because he did not sell cattle with eartags. Check No. 2462, dated July 31, 1983, in the amount of $8,250.00 was issued by Mr. Crisp to Pat Grady in payment for the 15 cow/calf pairs delivered to him. The check shows that it was endorsed by Pat Grady (CX-74, 75, 76; Tr. 251-254).

The affidavits of record clearly show the transportation of 15 cow/calf pairs from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, to the farm of Mr. Crisp at Dell Rapids, South Dakota, an interstate movement. That these 15 cow/calf pairs were owned by Pat Grady, as distinguished from those delivered to Mr. Williams, Trent, South Dakota, which were owned by Jim Grady (Finding IX), is shown by the fact that Mr. Crisp conducted this purchase with Pat Grady and held him responsible not only for the necessary health certificate and identification papers, but also issued the check in payment for the 15 cow/calf pairs to Pat Grady. In negotiations, Mr. Crisp requested crossbred cows. Pat Grady represented and sold these cows to Mr. Crisp as crossbred cows. Thus, although Jim Grady arranged for the transportation of these cattle, as well as those in Finding IX, it is readily apparent that the 15 cow/calf pairs involved here were owned by Pat Grady. See General Findings 2 and 3, supra.

Again, as with findings VII and IX, the affidavits here are substantial evidence upon which to find the violations as alleged. Although they may be considered hearsay evidence, they are admissible as relevant and material in an administrative proceeding, as noted in Finding VII.

Therefore, it must be found that Patrick Grady moved, or caused to be moved, 15 postparturient cows from Dunlap, Iowa to Dell Rapids, South Dakota, in violation of §§ 71.18 and 78.9(b)(3)(ii) of Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, in that the cows were not identified with U.S. Department of Agriculture backtags or other approved identification, and were not accompanied by a certificate, as required.

XII-XIII

The records of Mr. Leslie Dean Brown, identified in Finding VII, show that on August 2, 1983, his driver, Harold Wulf, transported 65 head of cattle from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, to Egan, South Dakota and that on August 16, 1983, he himself transported a load of 63 head of cattle from the same origin to the same destination. These loads were mostly cow/calf pairs, and the movements were ordered by Jim Grady. The only documents accompanying these loads were invoices for the cost of the cattle. No health certificates or other documents were provided to accompany these shipments of cattle. Mr. Brown had never been told to pick up any health certificate or any other document at any point in the movement of cattle for Jim Grady to places in South Dakota or Minnesota (CX-22, 57; Tr. 265-266).

Mr. Harold Wulf, Denison, Iowa, is a truck driver and has on occasion driven a livestock truck for Mr. Leslie Brown, supra. On or about August 2, 1983, Jim and Pat Grady helped him load 65 head of cattle at the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa. Mr. Leslie Brown was also present at the time of loading. Mr. Wulf delivered some calves and yearlings to the Sheldon Sale Co., Sheldon, Iowa, and the remainder, 23 cow/calf pairs, to a farm approximately 8 miles north of Egan, South Dakota. The consignee was Mr. Hugh Hagel, Flandreau, South Dakota. Mr. Wulf testified that he was only given a sealed envelope to accompany the cattle which he gave to Mr. Hugh Hagel. Mr. Wulf was present when Mr. Hagel opened the envelope. The only document in the envelope was a note listing the price of the cattle and a request to make out the check for the cattle to Jim Grady. No health papers or other identifying papers for the cattle were included. Mr. Wulf recalled that the cattle were cow/calf pairs and it was his opinion that they were not purebred cows. He knew they were cow/calf pairs because the calves paired up with the respective mother cows when unloaded. He obtained two checks from Mr. Hagel, one made out to Les Brown in the amount of $150.00 for the trucking charges, and one made out to Jim Grady for something over $11,900.00 for the cattle. He brought back both checks and gave them to Leslie Brown (CX-37, 38; Tr. 217-225).

Mr. Hugh R. Hagel, Flandreau, South Dakota, advised in his affidavits that in August 1983 he purchased a total of 48 cow/calf pairs from Jim Grady, Dunlap, Iowa. When those cattle were delivered to his farm, the cows did not have any eartags, backtags or any other means of identification. Likewise, they were not accompanied by an official certificate, brand release, or breed association certificate (CX-77, 78).

Mr. George Crowell, Compliance Officer, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, USDA, obtained copies of four checks from Mr. Hugh Hagel. The first, check no. 9554, dated August 2, 1983, was issued to Jim Grady in the amount of $11,937.00. Mr. Hagel had noted on the copy of the check that it was for 23 pairs at $515.00 per pair plus a charge of $4.00 for worming each pair. The second, check no. 9555, dated August 2, 1983, was issued to Les Brown in the amount of $150.00 in payment of trucking charges for the transportation of these cattle. The third, check no. 9604, dated August 16, 1983, was issued by Jane E. Hagel, Mr. Hagel's wife, to Jim Grady in the amount of $12,850.00. Mr. Hagel's notation on the copy of the check shows that this amount was for 25 cow/calf pairs at $514.00 per pair. The amount of the check also included a $4.00 worming charge per pair. The fourth, check no. 9605, dated August 16, 1983 in the amount of $150.00 was issued to Les Brown in payment of trucking charges for the transportation of these cattle (CX-39; Tr. 356-358).

Testimony and affidavits of record show that on two separate dates, August 2, 1983, and August 16, 1983, a total of 48 cow/calf pairs were transported from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa to the farm of Mr. Hagel, Egan, South Dakota, an interstate movement. On the first date, Mr. Hagel received 23 cow/calf pairs and on the second date he received 25 cow/calf pairs. All 48 cow/calf pairs were purchased from Jim Grady, who was also responsible for their movement on both dates. The only document accompanying each load was an invoice for the cost of these cattle. Testimony of Mr. Wulf, who was present upon the opening of his sealed envelope, and by Mr. Hagel whose affidavit shows that no health papers or other documents listing or identifying the cows were found in the sealed envelopes presented to him by the drivers. The envelopes only contained invoices showing the price of the cattle delivered to him. On each occasion a check was issued to Jim Grady, the owner of the cattle, in payment for the delivered cattle. See General Findings 2 and 3, supra.

The affidavits of Mr. Brown and Mr. Hagel, together with the testimony of Mr. Wulf are substantial evidence upon which to find the violations as alleged. Mr. Hagel's affidavit is further corroborated by the checks issued in payment to Jim Grady for the cattle. As stated in other findings, supra, such affidavits are admissible as relevant and material in this administrative proceeding.

Therefore, it must be found that on August 2, 1983, and August 16, 1983, James Grady moved, or caused to be moved, 23 postparturient cows and 25 postparturient cows, respectively, from Dunlap, Iowa to Flandreau, South Dakota in violation of §§ 71.18 and 78.9(b)(3)(ii) of Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, in that the cows were not individually identified with U.S. Department of Agriculture backtags or other approved identification and were not accompanied by a certificate, as required.

XIV-XV-XVI

In his affidavit, Mr. Jerry Christensen, Secretary/Treasurer and Dispatcher, Speedway Transportation, Inc., Holdredge, Nebraska, stated that his company records show that on August 8, 1983 one of his trucks driven by David Johnson, Holdredge, Nebraska, transported cows and calves from Dunlap, Iowa to St. Paul, Nebraska. His records further show that Jim Grady was the shipper and owner of the cattle and that Mr. Harold Niemoth, Route 2, Grand Island, Nebraska, was the consignee. It is the policy of Mr. Christensen's company to have drivers request health certificates for the cattle they haul. However, he did not know if a health certificate was provided to accompany these cattle (CX-23; Tr. 155-156).

Mr. Daniel L. Johnson, Holdredge, Nebraska, is a truck driver employed by Speedway Transportation, Inc., supra. On August 8, 1983, he loaded about 35 cow/calf pairs at a farm southwest of Dunlap, Iowa. He could not recall the names of the men at the farm. He inquired about the necessary health papers to accompany the cattle, but he could not recall what he was told about them. He does know that he was not given any health papers. He could not recall the name of the consignee; however, he did deliver the cattle to the St. Paul Veterinary Clinic at St. Paul, Nebraska on that same date (CX-1; Tr. 31-33).

Dr. Lyle Rasmussen practices veterinary medicine at the St. Paul Veterinary Clinic, St. Paul, Nebraska (Clinic). He testified his records show that on August 8, 1983, he received a shipment of cattle at his Clinic which were owned by Mr. Harold Niemoth, Grand Island, Nebraska. The cattle, which were unloaded from a Speedway truck, consisted of 39 cows with calves, and were of various mixed breeds. Since he was aware that they had been shipped from another state, he asked the Speedway driver for the health certificate which should accompany such a shipment. He was advised by the driver that he did not have one. Dr. Rasmussen testified that the purpose of the stop-off was to brand, worm, dip and give shots to the cattle. This service was done at the request and expense of Mr. Niemoth. After the process was completed the cattle were shipped to Mr. Niemoth at Grand Island, Nebraska. Dr. Rasmussen's records also show that at a later date, January 24, 1984, he went to the Niemoth farm where he bled and tested these cattle for brucellosis. It was his opinion that these were the same cow/calves he had examined on August 8, 1983, because they were the same breed mixture and of the same age range as those he had previously tested. His records also show that they were beef cattle imported into the State of Nebraska and that they ranged in age from three to twelve years. Metal eartags were also inserted because the cows were not carrying eartags when bled (CX-2, 3; Tr. 35-44).

Mr. Harold Niemoth owns a farm near Grand Island, Nebraska. In his affidavit he stated he purchased 39 cow/calf pairs, all over two years of age, from Jim Grady, Dunlap, Iowa. When they were delivered on August 8, 1983, they were not accompanied by a health certificate, brand certificate or any other document showing individual identification. Further, they had no metal eartags, or USDA backtags. A check obtained from Mr. Niemoth, No. 5883, dated August 7, 1983, shows that he issued it to Jim Grady in the amount of $20,475.00 in payment for 39 cow/calf pairs. This check was endorsed by Jim Grady (CX-28, 29; Tr. 165-166).

The discrepancy, if it can be considered one, between the "about 35 cow/calf pairs" recited by Mr. Johnson, supra, and the 39 cow/calf pairs actually received by Mr. Niemoth is noted and is not pertinent here since Mr. Niemoth has established that 39 cow/calf pairs were purchased and received by him. Dr. Rasmussen stated that he received at his Clinic 39 cow/calf pairs owned by Mr. Niemoth and which were later shipped to him that same date after processing.

Testimony and documents of record show that Jim Grady sold 39 cow/calf pairs to Mr. Niemoth, Grand Island, Nebraska. They were delivered to the St. Paul Veterinary Clinic, St. Paul, Nebraska for treatment, as described above, at the request of Mr. Niemoth. The records of Speedway Transportation, Inc., verify this movement. However, the record, either through testimony or affidavits, fails to show who transported the cattle from the Clinic to Grand Island, Nebraska, or who was responsible for this movement. It has been shown, however, that the delivery to the Clinic was only a stop-off for processing on the way to the Niemoth farm since the cattle were received there on the same day after the processing.

Although the record does not show that James Grady was responsible for the movement from the Clinic to Grand Island, Nebraska, it has been shown that James Grady was the owner and consignor of the cattle and that he shipped the 39 cow/calf pairs from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa to the Clinic in St. Paul, Nebraska, an interstate movement. It has also been shown that the truck driver received no identification papers or health certificate to accompany the shipment, although the cows were described by Mr. Niemoth as being over two years of age, and listed by Dr. Rasmussen as ranging in age from 3 to 12 years, with the majority being 4 years of age and older. I find to be very credible the testimony of Dr. Rasmussen that the cows he processed on August 8, 1983, were the same cows he tested for brucellosis at the Niemoth farm on January 24, 1984. See General Findings 2 and 3, supra.

Thus, whether the cattle were delivered directly to Mr. Niemoth at Grand Island, Nebraska, or to the Clinic at St. Paul, Nebraska, this was still an interstate movement instituted by James Grady, and subject to the regulations. Therefore, it is found that on or about August 8, 1983, James Grady moved, or caused to be moved interstate 39 postparturient cows over two years of age from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa to the St. Paul Veterinary Clinic, St. Paul, Nebraska, in violation of §§ 71.18 and 78.9(b)(3)(ii) of Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, as the cows were not individually identified with U.S. Department of Agriculture backtags or other approved identification; were not accompanied by an owner's statement or other document, as required; and were not accompanied by a certificate, as required.

XVII-XVIII-XIX

The records of Mr. Dan Snyder, Sr., who is identified in Finding IV, show that his company transported 42 cows and 32 calves from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, to Bill Allemang, Clearwater, Nebraska on August 15, 1983 (CX-4).

Mr. Les Nelson is the son-in-law of Dan Snyder, Sr., supra. He stated in his affidavit that on August 15, 1983, Dan Snyder, Sr., sent him to pick up a load of cattle at the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa. He loaded 32 cow/calf pairs at the Grady farm and approximately 4 or 5 cows at a sale barn near Moorehead, Iowa. When he asked for health papers to accompany the cattle, he was given a sealed envelope and told everthing he needed was in the envelope. He delivered the cows to Bill Allemang's farm near Clearwater, Nebraska and gave Mr. Allemang the sealed envelope. When Mr. Allemang opened the envelope in Mr. Nelson's presence, it only contained an invoice covering the cost of the cattle (CX-24).

Mr. William Allemang, Clearwater, Nebraska, is a farmer/rancher. He stated in his affidavit that on or about August 15, 1983 he bought 32 cow/calf pairs from Jim Grady, Dunlap, Iowa. They were mixed colored cows, some spotted, some black and some brown, and the cows ranged in age from 2 to 5 years. On the same date, and on the basis that Jim Grady would pay the transportation costs in shipping these cattle, he purchased an additional 10 cows from Jim Grady. These latter were an average of about 4 years old and they gave birth to calves a few days after he received them.

The cattle were delivered to Mr. Allemang's pasture near Clearwater, Nebraska. The truck driver gave him a sealed envelope which accompanied the cattle. However, when he opened it, it only contained a self-addressed envelope to Jim Grady, an invoice addressed to him showing the purchase of "32 mixed pairs" for $17,600.00, and the purchase of "10 bred cows" for $4,100.00. A notation on the invoice stated "make check to Jim Grady." Jim Grady's telephone numbers were listed as (712) 643-2187 and (712) 643-5495. (These are the same telephone numbers as are listed in CX-32, the advertisement in the Grand Island (Neb.) Daily Independence at page 34. See Findings XX, XXI and XXII). The truck driver was present when he opened the envelope. These cattle were not accompanied by a health certificate, brand certificate, or any other document showing individual identification of the cattle. Mr. Allemang did not examine the cows for ear tattoos.

Mr. Allemang provided a copy of a sight draft, dated August 15, 1983, made out to Jim Grady in the amount of $21,700.00 in payment for the 42 cows and 32 calves. The sight draft was given to the truck driver who then forwarded it to Jim Grady. It was later endorsed by Jim Grady and cleared the Dunlap Savings Bank, Dunlap, Iowa, on August 19, 1983.

Mr. Allemang stated that he later had the Grady cattle, as well as four other cows in the same pasture, examined for brucellosis inasmuch as the Grady cattle had come into the state without proper blood testing (CX-13, 14, 15; Tr. 93-106, 119).

It is noted here that the Amended Complaint cites James Grady as having moved approximately 40 cows on this date, whereas Mr. Allemang acknowledges purchasing 42 cows and 32 calves from Jim Grady. The difference is not pertinent here. Mr. Allemang has acknowledged receiving and paying for the 42 cows and 32 calves in the shipment.

In his affidavit Richard N. Bruce, D.V.M., Orchard, Nebraska, stated that on September 28, 1983, he brucellosis tested 46 head of cattle for Mr. William Allemang, Clearwater, Nebraska. He understood that 42 of the cattle were recently purchased by Mr. Allemang and shipped into Nebraska without tests 3 or 4 weeks before, and the other 4 were cows he had running with them in the pasture. He noted that the majority of the cows were 6-10 years old, and that 4 or 5 of them were 3-4 years old. He further noted that five of the cows had brucellosis vaccination tattoos, that one had an Iowa metal eartag, and that another cow had a Nebraska metal eartag. Some of the other cows had holes in their ears, indicating to him that they had previously been eartagged. He applied metal eartags to the 44 head which did not have them. Although Dr. Bruce did not mouth each cow, he recorded on his test sheet that they were all adult cows (CX-16; Tr. 174).

The documents of record show that 32 cow/calf pairs from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, and 10 cows from a sale barn at Moorehead, Iowa, were transported to the farm of Mr. Allemang, Clearwater, Nebraska, an interstate movement. It is clear that Mr. Allemang paid Jim Grady the amount for all of the cattle he received. It is also clear that only a sealed envelope was provided the truck driver to accompany the shipment and that when this was opened by Mr. Allemang it contained only an invoice listing total numbers of cattle and the price to be paid for each group. Added to the invoice was the notation to pay the purchase price to Jim Grady in the form of a check. No other identifying documents or health certificate accompanied this shipment. The sight draft for the amount due in payment of the cattle was made out to Jim Grady, forwarded to him by the truck driver, and endorsed by Jim Grady. It has also been shown that these cattle were tested by Dr. Bruce because they came into the State of Nebraska without the proper blood testing. The test chart of Dr. Bruce noted that these were the cows that were delivered to Mr. Allemang approximately 3 to 4 weeks previous, that the majority of the cows were of mixed breed and between 6 and 10 years of age, that one had an Iowa metal eartag while another had a Nebraska metal eartag, and that some had holes in their ears indicting that the eartags had been removed. See General Findings 2 and 3, supra. As noted in Finding VII, the affidavits here are relevant and material and are admissible in administrative proceedings.

Therefore, it must be found that James Grady moved, or caused to be moved interstate, forty-two cows either parturient or postparturient and over two years of age, from Dunlap and Moorehead, Iowa to Clearwater, Nebraska in violation of §§ 71.18 and 78.9(b)(3)(ii), Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, because the cows were not individually identified with the U.S. Department of Agriculture backtags or other approved identification, as required; were not accompanied by an owner's statement or other document, as required; and were not accompanied by a certificate, as required.

XX-XXI-XXII

Mr. Dan Snyder, Sr., identified in Finding IV, stated that on September 2, 1983, his son, Danny Snyder, transported 31 cows from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, to the farm of Bob Ondracek, Greeley, Nebraska. On this trip Danny Snyder was checked for a health certificate at the state scales near Freemont, Nebraska. However, the sealed envelope given to his son at the Grady farm only contained a sales invoice and no health certificate. When he discussed this with his other drivers, Mr. Dan Snyder, Sr., was told that they also only received sealed envelopes to accompany any shipment of cattle from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa (CX-4).

Mr. Danny Snyder, Jr., identified in Finding IV, on or about September 2, 1983, transported a load of cows for Pat and Jim Grady, Dunlap, Iowa, to Greeley, Nebraska. In filling out his Nebraska "Permit for Live Stock Transportation," No. 20727C, dated September 2, 1983, he recorded Pat and Jim Grady as the owners and Mr. Bob Ondracek, Greeley, Nebraska, as the consignee. Mr. Snyder listed the load as "31 heifers" because that is what he was told the load contained. However, in his opinion, they were full grown cows. As with other loads from the Grady farm, he received a sealed envelope, which he presumed contained the necessary health papers, to accompany the cattle. While enroute to Greeley, Nebraska, he stopped at the state scales at Freemont, Nebraska, where he was asked for the health papers. When he looked in the envelope, the only document it contained was a sales invoice covering the price of the cows on his truck (CX-6, 7; Tr. 60-68).

Mr. Bob Ondracek is a farmer residing near Greeley, Nebraska. In his affidavit he stated he purchased 31 bred cows from Jim Grady, Dunlap, Nebraska, which were delivered to him on September 2, 1983. These cows were not accompanied by a health certificate, brand certificate, or any other document showing individual cow identification. Nor did any of the cows carry metal eartags or USDA approved backtags. Mr. Ondracek had bangle tags placed on these cows for his own identification purposes. He purchased these cows through an advertisement he had seen in the Grand Island (Neb.) Daily Independent in late August or early September, 1983. He responded to the telephone numbers in the advertisement, (712) 643-2187 and (712) 643-5495, which resulted in his purchase of the 31 cows from Jim Grady. The telephone numbers listed in this newspaper advertisement are the same telephone numbers as are listed for Jim Grady on CX-13, and were later confirmed through the telephone company as being listed for Jim Grady and Pat Grady (See also Findings XVII-XVIII-XIX) (CX-32; Tr. 375).

Mr. Ondracek provided a copy of the invoice which was the only document he received from the truck driver upon delivery of these 31 cows. The invoice was addressed to him and listed the purchase price of "31 mixed bred cows", at $350.00 each for a total cost of $10,850.00. Mr. Ondracek made a notation on the invoice that he had issued check no. 2424 on September 2, 1983, in the amount of $10,850.00. Mr. Ondracek also provided a copy of check no. 2424, dated September 2, 1983, which showed that it was issued to Jim Grady in the amount of $10,850.00 for "31 cows." The check was endorsed by Jim Grady and was cleared through the Dunlap Savings Bank, Dunlap, Iowa (CX-30, 31, 32, 33; Tr. 166-173).

Mr. Maurice Partridge, identified in Findings II-III, was working at the state scales, Fremont, Nebraska, when Mr. Danny Snyder stopped there with the load of 31 cows on September 2, 1983. When Mr. Snyder was called in by the state scale operator all he had was a sealed envelope. When he opened the envelope it only contained an invoice. No health papers or other identifying documents were found in the envelope. Mr. Partridge looked at about two-thirds of the cattle through the slats in the trailer and in his opinion the load consisted of cows at least two years of age, and all of them appeared to have had at least one or more calves. He could not see any metal eartags on the cows. The only identification he could see on the cows were yellow bangle tags with numbers on them (Tr. 174-178).

An affidavit, dated March 6, 1985, provided by Doug Wurster, D.V.M., a partner for the past five years in the Twin Valley Veterinary Clinic, Dunlap, Iowa, stated that the records of the Clinic show no interstate health certificates for movement of cows were issued to Jim, Pat, or Wendell Grady in the 10 months prior to November 17, 1983. However, the Clinic records did show that six intrastate health certificates were issued to the Gradys during this time period. Of the cattle he has tested for the Gradys, none have had any identification and the eartags had obviously been removed from some cows (CX-52; Tr. 270-271).

Dr. Dan Nielsen, practices veterinary medicine at the St. Paul Veterinary Clinic, St. Paul, Nebraska. On September 7, 1983, he blood tested 31 cows recently purchased by Mr. Bob Ondracek. It was his understanding that Mr. Ondracek had purchased the cows in Iowa. When tested, a few of the first cows were mouthed and were found to be anywhere from four to six years of age. All 31 cows seemed to be a fairly uniform age group and he presumed that the cnes not mouthed were also four to six years of age. For this reason, he classified all of the 31 cows on his test sheet as adult cows. All of the cows had yellow plastic eartags which had been previously placed on them by Mr. Ondracek. None had any official metal eartags. However, each of the cows had holes in their ears which were surrounded by scales. This indicated to him that they had had eartags but that they had been removed, possibly within the previous 2 or 3 weeks prior to the testing. It was his opinion that they were not removed by Mr. Ondracek since he did not have a restraining chute to hold a cow steady to remove such tags. Dr. Nielsen did not examine these cows for ear tattoos, nor was he acquainted with registration requirements for any purebred breed associations.

When these 31 cows were blood tested for brucellosis, each was identified by attachment of the approved metal eartag. Dr. Nielsen's records show that these cows were identified with metal eartags, numbers 47AVJ 4748 through 47AJV 4778, that he considered all of them to be adult cows, i.e, all over 2 years of age, and crossbred. All tested negative for brucellosis. Dr. Nielsen's records also show that Jim Grady, Dunlap, Iowa, paid for the 31 cows tested on September 7, 1983, and that he billed Jim Grady because Mr. Ondracek advised him that the owner of the cattle had agreed to pay for the testing. A receipt, no. 36025, acknowledging payment of $77.00, was issued by the Clinic to Jim Grady, owner, Dunlap, Iowa, for the testing of 31 cows for "blood test on Bob Ondracek cows."

Dr. Nielsen acknowledged that it was possible for a female cow to give birth at 16 months of age. However, it was his experience that owners of purebred cows would let them mature to 2 or 3 years before they would breed them. He would consider the general norm to be that a cow would birth a calf at two years of age (CX-62, 63, 64; Tr. 315-334).

The record, through testimony and documents, shows that 31 cows were transported from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa to the farm of Mr. Bob Ondracek near Greeley, Nebraska, an interstate movement. Although the truck driver, Danny Snyder, was told by the Gradys that these cows were "heifers", and listed them as such on his Permit, it was his opinion that they were adult cows. Mr. Maurcie Partridge, Compliance Officer, U.S. Department of Agriculture, viewed about two-thirds of these cows at the Freemont, Nebraska State scales and believed them to be at least two years of age.

Dr. Nielsen blood tested the 31 cows and mouth examined the first few which he found to be 4 to 6 years of age. It was his opinion the others were of the same age group. He also noted that all of the cows had holes in their ears which were scaled, indicating to him that eartags had been removed 2 to 3 weeks before the testing date. His bill for the testing was issued to, and paid by, Jim Grady who was listed as the owner of the cattle and responsible for the testing.

It is also apparent from the record that the only document provided the driver to accompany these cattle was an invoice listing the total number of cattle and the price. No identification papers or health certificate was provided him, nor were they provided Mr. Ondracek. See General Findings 2 and 3, supra. The bangle tags placed on these cows by Mr. Ondracek do not meet the identifying requirements of the regulations. Additionally, the amount due on the cattle was paid to Jim Grady, who acknowledged this payment by endorsement of the check. These facts are not rebutted in this record.

It is noted here, however, that both Patrick and James Grady are cited as dual violators under these counts. The only evidence of record to show that Patrick Grady was involved in this movement is the affidavit and testimony of Danny Snyder, the truck driver, who listed them as owners on his Permit. It is evident from the record that on several occasions both Patrick and James Grady were noted as having aided in loading cattle from the Grady farm. However, here the evidence is clear that James Grady alone negotiated with Mr. Ondracek for the purchase of the cattle, received payment for the cattle involved, and paid for the blood testing of the cattle. Therefore, I find that James Grady alone was responsible for this movement, and dismiss Patrick Grady as a party to these counts.

Therefore, it must be found that James Grady moved or caused to be moved interstate 31 cows, which were over two years of age, from Dunlap, Iowa, to Greeley, Nebraska, in violation of §§ 71.18 and 78.9(b)(3)(ii) of Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, because the cows were not individually identified with the U.S. Department of Agriculture backtags or other approved identification; were not accompanied by an owner's statement or other document listing individual identification; and were not accompanied by a certificate, as required.

XXIII-XXIV

Mr. Leslie Dean Brown, identified in Finding VII, stated in his affidavit that his company records show on September 2, 1983, a load of cattle was picked up by one of his trucks at the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, that 28 head were delivered to Harrisburg, South Dakota and the "rest of load" was delivered to (sic) "Klein, Del Rapids, South Dakota." As with previous loads picked up at the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, the cattle were mostly cow/calf pairs.

Jim Grady ordered the movement of this load, and the only papers provided to accompany the cattle were invoices showing the cost of the cattle. No health certificates, or other identifying documents, were provided him or his drivers to accompany the interstate movement of the cattle (CX-22; Tr. 264-266).

In several affidavits provided by William J. Klein, Dell Rapids, South Dakota, he stated that on or about September 2, 1983, Jim Grady had 35 cow/calf pairs transported from Dunlap, Iowa to his farm in Dell Rapids, South Dakota. Mr. Klein noted that when unloaded, one of the cows was not the mother of the calf at her side. These cows were not accompanied by identification tags, backtags, eartags, breed registration papers, or any official health certificate. Before he had these cows tested, he sold nine of the cows for slaughter. Mr. Klein provided a copy of a check, no. 2830, issued by his wife on September 2, 1983, to Jim Grady in the amount of $16,625, in payment for the purchase of the 35 cow/calf pairs. This check was endorsed by Jim Grady. Mr. Klein provided a copy of a second check, no. 2831, also issued by his wife on September 2, 1983, to Les Brown in the amount of $175.00 in payment for trucking charges (CX-79, 80, 81, 82; Tr. 361-363).

Dr. Don M. Oolman, Jasper, Minnesota, a practicing veterinarian for thirty years, stated in his affidavit that on October 28, 1983, he tested 26 cows for Wiliam Klein, Dell Rapids, South Dakota. It was his professional opinion that all of the cows were over two years old. He further noted that he inserted eartags in each of the cows because they did not have official eartags. He listed all 26 as adult beef cows on his brucellosis test record, a copy of which was subsequently obtained from the South Dakota Livestock Sanitary Board (CX-83, 84; Tr. 361-363).

The documents of record show that 35 cow/calf pairs were transported from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, to the farm of Mr. William Klein, Dell Rapids, South Dakota, an interstate movement. Further, that these cattle were not accompanied by any identifying documents or health certificate. Dr. Oolman noted, after testing the remaining 26 cows and based upon his years of experience in treating and testing cattle, that all of the cows were adult cows over two years of age. See General Findings 2 and 3, supra. Negotiations for the purchase of the cattle were conducted with Jim Grady, and the check for payment of the 35 cow/calf pairs was issued to, and endorsed by, Jim Grady. These facts are not rebutted in this record.

As was noted in Finding VII, the affidavits here comprise relevant and material evidence and are admissible in administrative proceedings. They provide substantial evidence to prove the violations alleged. Therefore, it must be found that James Grady moved or caused to be moved interstate 35 postparturient cows over two years of age from Dunlap, Iowa, to Dell Rapids, South Dakota, in violation of §§ 71.18 and 78.9(b)(3)(ii) of Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, because the cows were not individually identified with U.S. Department of Agriculture backtags or other approved identification; and were not accompanied by a certificate as required.

best copy available

XXV

Mr. Dick Holmes is a truck driver for Sioux City Motor Express, Inc., Sioux City, Iowa. In his affidavit, he stated that on or about September 3, 1983, he was ordered by his dispatcher to pick up a load of cattle for Jim Grady at the Mid-America Stockyards, Bristow, Oklahoma. When he met Jim Grady at the Mid-American Stockyards, he told Mr. Holmes to proceed to a farm near Afton, Oklahoma, which he believed was the Dick Todd farm, and pick up a load of cattle. He believed it was the Todd brothers who helped him load 40 cows and 40 calves at the farm. He asked for the health papers when the loading was completed and was advised by the Todds that he didn't need any. When Mr. Holmes insisted on them they called Jim Grady at the Mid-America Stockyards, Bristow, Oklahoma. Mr. Holmes talked to Jim Grady of the need for health papers or other documents to accompany the cattle to Iowa. After Mr. Holmes again insisted on documents to accompany the cattle, Jim Grady impolitely ordered Mr. Holmes to get in his truck and go. Mr. Holmes then transported the 40 cows and calves to the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, without any health certificate. Jim Grady's brother helped him unload the cattle (CX-53; Tr. 272-273).

Mr. Richard A. Gunderson, Compliance Officer, USDA, obtained a copy of a Sioux City Motor Express, Inc., bill of lading, no. 11781, dated September 3, 1983, from Mr. Holmes which showed that 40 cows and 40 calves were transported from the farm of Richard Todd, Jr., Vinito, Oklahoma to the consignee, Pat Grady, Dunlap, Iowa. Mr. Pat Grady signed the invoice when they were delivered (CX-54; Tr. 274-275).

Ms. Barbara Pearman, Supervisor, Records Section, Oklahoma Department of Agriculture, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, provided an affidavit in which she stated that a search of the export files of that Department failed to show any documents issued to Jim or James Grady for cattle consigned from Mid-America L/S Auction, Bristow, Oklahoma, to Dunlap, Iowa (CX-1) nor was a destination copy of any export certificate received by the Iowa Department of Agriculture. See General Finding No. 3.

The affidavits of record show that 40 cows and 40 calves were transported from the Todd Brothers farm at Vinito, Oklahoma to the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, an interstate shipment. It is apparent that although Mr. Todd is listed as the shipper, that the cattle were purchased by Jim Grady, and that he ordered their interstate movement. It is also apparent that "40 cows and 40 calves" were moved in this interstate shipment. However, the only indication that the 40 cows being transported may have been covered by the cited regulations was the request by Mr. Holmes for the health papers. This request alone is not sufficient to sustain the allegations here. Nor, is there any connective evidence to show the age of the cows, or whether they were "cow/calf pairs." The evidence only shows "40 cows and 40 calves" were transported. Since neither is shown, this allegation must be dismissed.

XXVI-XXVII

Mr. Melvin Snyder, Ansley, Nebraska, is the son of Mr. Dan Snyder, Sr., identified in Finding No. IV. Somewhere around the first of September, 1983, he received a call from Pat Grady, who wanted a load of cows transported to Avon, South Dakota. When Mr. Snyder advised Pat Grady that the cows would have to be brucellosis tested and have health papers to accompany them, Pat Grady became abusive and stated that the cows could be tested at destination. Pat Grady also stated that he would pay any fine if Mr. Snyder transported the cows. When Mr. Snyder refused to transport the cows without a health certificate, Pat Grady advised him he would get someone else to transport the cattle (CX-12; Tr. 87-91).

Mr. Bobby Lee Olsen, Avon, South Dakota, provided an affidavit in which he stated that he only transported one load of cattle for the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, and that was to the Adolph Krcil farm near Avon, South Dakota. The load consisted of 29 cow/calf pairs; however, he was not given any health papers or certificates to accompany these cattle (CX-87; Tr. 366-367).

In his affidavit, Mr. Allen Krcil, Crooks, South Dakota, stated that on September 8, 1983, he purchased 29 cow/calf pairs from Jim Grady, Dunlap, Iowa. Jim Grady arranged for the transportation of these cattle which were delivered to Mr. Krcil's father's farm at Avon, South Dakota. The cows were not accompanied by any health certificates, nor did they have metal eartags or backtags (CX-85; Tr. 364-365). Mr. Krcil provided a copy of his check, no. 1534, dated September 8, 1983. This check was issued by Mr. Krcil to Jim Grady in the amount of $15,700.00 and was in payment of 29 cow/calf pairs. The check was endorsed by Jim Grady (CX-85; Tr. 365).

A copy of a Brucellosis Test Record, obtained from the South Dakota State Livestock Sanitary Board, shows that on October 30, 1983, Mr. Allen Krcil had 56 cows, described on the Test Record as adult, tested for brucellosis by Dr. David A. Barz, Parkston, South Dakota. At the time of the testing, a metal eartag was placed on each cow in numerical order (46INL2601-46INL2656). If there had been eartags on these cows, the record would have listed them and the numerical sequence would have been broken. The state veterinarian called Dr. Barz and was assured the cows did not have any previous metal eartags. Those designated in the extreme right column on the test record with the letter "H" were cows which Mr. Krcil already had on his farm, while those designated with the letter "P" were those purchased from Jim Grady, Dunlap, Iowa (CX-88; Tr. 367-371, 381).

Documents of record show that 29 cow/calf pairs were transported from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, to the farm of Mr. Allen Krcil's father near Avon, South Dakota, an interstate movement. The record further shows that the truck driver, Mr. Olsen, was not provided with any health papers to accompany this shipment of cattle, nor was any health certificate ever provided Mr. Krcil. It was noted by Mr. Krcil that the cows did not have any metal eartags, or backtags, when they were delivered at Avon, South Dakota. Because a health certificate was not provided, Mr. Krcil found it necessary to have these cows, along with others, brucellosis tested at a later date. At the time of the testing, Dr. Barz found it necessary to place eartags on these cows because none were present when received by Mr. Krcil or when tested by him for brucellosis. There is no question as to ownership of the cow/calf pairs, since Mr. Krcil stated they were purchased from Jim Grady, and a check for the purchase price was issued to Jim Grady and endorsed by him. These facts are not rebutted in this record. See General Findings 2 and 3, supra. As noted in Finding VII, the affidavits here are relevant and material and are admissible in this administrative proceeding.

Thus, it must be found that James Grady moved, or caused to be moved interstate, 29 postparturient cows from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, to Avon, South Dakota, in violation of §§ 71.18 and 78.9(b)(3)(ii) of Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, because the cows were not individually identified with U.S. Department of Agriculture backtags or other appropriate identification, and were not accompanied by a certificate, as required.

XXVIII

The records of Mr. Leslie Dean Brown, who is identified in Finding No. VII, show that on September 16, 1985, he transported a load of cattle from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa to "Kroupa, Kimball, South Dakota." As with previous loads transported from the Grady farm, the cattle transported were mostly cow/calf pairs, and the movement was ordered by Jim Grady (CX-22).

In an affidavit provided by Mr. Alan Kroupa, Kimball, South Dakota, he stated that in September, 1983, he received a load of cow/calf pairs from Iowa. The load was accompanied with a certificate listing Jim Grady as the seller and the Olsen Cattle Co., Merrill, Iowa, as the purchaser. To the best of his knowledge, all of the cows had silver metal tags (CX-89; Tr. 371-372).

Mr. Kroupa provided an Intrastate Health Certificate issued by the Iowa Department of Agriculture, Division of Animal Industry, on September 15, 1983. The Certificate carried a caution "Not Valid for Interstate shipment." It listed Jim Grady as the seller, and reflected the testing of 40 cows for brucellosis. The test for all was negative. The purchaser was listed as the Olsen Cattle Co., Merrill, Iowa. Mr. Kroupa certified on a copy of this certificate, that it had accompanied the cattle he purchased from Jim Grady. See General Findings, Nos. 2 and 3, supra. (CX-90; Tr. 372-373).

Mr. George Crowell, Compliance Officer, USDA, identified in Findings XII-XIII, testified that Mr. Arlo Olsen, Kimball, South Dakota, had been the order buyer or middleman who arranged the sale of these cattle between Mr. Kroupa and Jim Grady. Mr. Kroupa paid Mr. Olsen for these cattle. Mr. Crowell admitted that there was a possibility these cattle were sold to the Olsen Cattle Company, Merrill, Iowa, and that they were later sold and shipped by that company to Mr. Kroupa in Kimball, South Dakota. However, he doubted that this was the case since the records of Mr. Leslie Brown show that the cattle were to be transported from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa to Mr. Kroupa at Kimball, South Dakota (CX-22; Tr. 373-374, 376-378).

From the records and affidavit of Mr. Les Brown, it is clear that the shipment of cattle was cow/calf pairs, and that they were transported from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, to Mr. Kroupa, Kimball, South Dakota, on September 16, 1983. This was an interstate movement which was ordered by Jim Grady. Mr. Brown's records also negate any inference that there was a stop-off at the Olsen Cattle Co., Merrill, Iowa, or that the cattle were reshipped from that company to Kimball, South Dakota. Mr. Kroupa also attests to the fact that the shipment consisted of cow/calf pairs. Further, that only the Iowa Intrastate Health Certificate, listing the 40 cows, accompanied the shipment and was presented to him when they were delivered in Kimball, South Dakota. The Certificate also shows Jim Grady as the seller of these cattle. These unrebutted facts buttress the testimony of Mr. Crowell who stated that Mr. Arlo Olsen had only been the middleman in the transaction between Jim Grady and Mr. Kroupa, and that the cattle were delivered directly from the Grady farm to Mr. Kroupa at Kimball, South Dakota. See General Findings 2 and 3, supra. It is also noted that the Iowa Intrastate Health Certificate contains the caution "Not Valid for Interstate shipment." Additionally, the information required by an interstate certificate, as described in § 78.1(n), is more detailed than that required on the Iowa Intrastate Health Certificate (Tr. 13). Hence, the Iowa Intrastate Certificate does not meet the requirements of the regulations nor achieve their purpose. As noted in Finding VII, the affidavits are relevant and material and such responsible and probative hearsay evidence is admissible in administrative proceedings.

Therefore, it must be found that James Grady moved, or caused to be moved interstate, 40 postparturient cows from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, to Kimball, South Dakota, in violation of § 78.9(b)(3)(ii) of Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, because the cows were not accompanied by a certificate, as required.

XXIX

Mr. Leon Krueger, Emerson, Nebraska, is a truck driver for the Sioux City Motor Express, Inc., Sioux City, Iowa. On or about September 17, 1983, his dispatcher requested him to pick up a load of cattle for Jim Grady at the Sale Barn, Bristow, Oklahoma. He arrived at the Sale Barn about 7:00 p.m. on that Saturday night, September 17, 1983, and at about 2:00 a.m. Sunday morning Jim Grady helped him load about 20 cow/calf pairs, several other calves and some yearling steers. A cow/calf pair is a cow with her calf. Jim Grady knew which pens from which to take the cattle. Jim Grady accompanied him on the trip. He had a briefcase which Mr. Krueger assumed contained the health papers; however, Mr. Krueger never saw any health papers. When he asked about the health papers, Jim Grady told him he had all the papers they needed.

They arrived at the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, at about noon on Sunday, at which time Jim Grady's father helped in unloading the cattle. The cow/calf pairs were put in a separate pen while the yearlings were run through a restraining chute where all Sale Barn backtags and eartags were removed. The yearlings were then loaded back on his truck and he transported them to the Moorehead Sale Barn, Moorehead, Iowa. The cow/calf pairs remained at the Grady farm. It was his opinion that the cattle were mixed breeds. Mr. Krueger made no effort to determine how old the cattle were.

Mr. Krueger provided a copy of a Sioux City Motor Express, Inc., invoice, no. 11825, dated September 18, 1983, which he filled out and which showed that he transported 70 cattle from the Bristow Sale Barn, Bristow, Oklahoma, to the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa. Jim Grady signed this invoice as the consignee (CX-34, 35; Tr. 204-211).

Mrs. Barbara Pearman, identified in Finding No. XXV, could find no record which showed there were any documents issued by the State of Oklahoma to Jim or James Grady for cattle consigned from Bristow, Oklahoma, to Dunlap, Iowa. See also General Finding No. 3. The record shows that 20 cow/calf pairs were transported from Bristow, Oklahoma to the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, an interstate movement, and that Jim Grady ordered this movement. Further, that the records of the Oklahoma and Iowa Departments of Agriculture failed to show any documents issued to James Grady for the interstate transportation of the 20 cow/calf pairs.

Therefore, it must be found that James Grady moved, or caused to be moved interstate, 20 postparturient cows from Bristow, Oklahoma, to the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, in violation of § 78.9(c)(3)(ii), because the cows were not accompanied by a certificate, as required.

XXX-XXXI

Mr. Robert Smith, Woodbine, Iowa, is a trucker who normally transports livestock and grain locally. He stated in his affidavit that on November 28, 1983, he was asked by another local trucker to haul a load of cattle for Jim Grady, Dunlap, Iowa. Jim Grady helped him load 16 or 17 cows from the Grady farm which he delivered to the Leonard Gramlich farm, Gretna, Nebraska. Although Jim Grady gave him directions to the consignee's farm, he did not give him any health papers or other documents to accompany the cattle. He could not recall whether Jim Grady or Pat Grady was the owner of the cattle. Jim Grady told him to bill Pat Grady for the transportation of the cattle (CX-55; Tr. 275-277).

Mr. Leonard Gramlich is a farmer/rancher and is President of Black Hills Farms, Inc., Gretna, Nebraska. While attending a cattle auction in Omaha, Nebraska, he talked with Mike Guilfoyle, owner of the Corn Belt Livestock Company, Omaha, Nebraska (Corn Belt), which is a livestock commission company, and advised him that he was interested in purchasing some cows. He was later called by Mr. Guilfoyle and told that such cows as he was interested in were available at the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa. Mr. Guilfoyle gave him the price being asked for the cows but left it up to Mr. Gramlich to make his own deal.

On November 26, 1983, Mr. Gramlich went to the Grady farm which was about 3 miles south of Dunlap, Iowa. There were three men there; however, he negotiated with the younger man who appeared to be approximately 30 years of age and told him he was one of the Grady sons. However, Mr. Gramlich couldn't identify him if he saw him. The cows which were being offered for sale were represented to Mr. Gramlich as being home raised cows, four years or older. He believed the latter to be true because they did not appear to have metal eartags. He purchased 16 cows at the price quoted, which included delivery to his farm and for the Gradys to obtain the necessary health papers to accompany the cows. These were predominantly black cows. The Gradys made arrangements for the transportation of the cows and told him they would take care of the necessary health papers.

When delivery of the 16 cows was made to Mr. Gramlich's farm at Gretna, Nebraska, on November 29, 1983, Mr. Gramlich asked the truck driver for the health papers and was told that they would be sent to him. No health papers accompanied the 16 cows and although Mr. Gramlich has called Corn State about the health papers, he has never received them. Additionally, he later determined the majority of the cows had eartags. In response to an invoice received from Corn Belt, check no. 1418 dated November 30, 1983, in the amount of $6,207.20, was issued by Mr. Gramlich to Corn Belt. A notation on the check showed that the amount of $6,160.00 was in payment for "Grady, 16 bred cows, Dunlap," and that the amount of $47.20 was paid as a commission to Corn Belt (CX-92, 93; Tr. 411-428).

It is clear from the record that Mr. Gramlich purchased 16 cows, four years or older, from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, and that they were transported to his farm at Gretna, Nebraska, an interstate movement. It is also clear that Corn Belt was the middleman in the transaction since it billed Mr. Gramlich and was paid for the cattle but only received a commission for its part in the transaction. There is no evidence in this record which shows that the purchase price was paid to a specific Grady.

In both his affidavit and testimony Mr. Gramlich recounts that the cows were purchased at the Grady farm, and that the Grady son whom he dealt with was approximately 30 years of age. However, he stated that he could not identify this man if he saw him. In this regard, official notice is taken of the fact that there are at least two Grady sons, James and Patrick, and that James Grady sat at his counsel's table during Mr. Gramlich's testimony. Mr. Gramlich did not point out James Grady as the person with whom he negotiated the purchase of the cattle. Further, the record does not contain any evidence showing the ages of James or Patrick Grady. Nor does Mr. Gramlich's affidavit, or the remainder of his testimony, identify a specific Grady with whom he negotiated.

However, I find that the statement of Mr. Smith is sufficient to support a finding that James Grady was the movant for this interstate shipment, i.e., that James Grady not only helped him load the cattle but gave him directions as to how to reach his destination. Although the remainder of the testimony of Mr. Gramlich is too nebulous to identify any specific Grady, let alone James Grady as the owner of these cattle for this movement, ownership of the cattle is not a necessary ingredient to a violation of these regulations. Section 78.1(m) defines "moved" as ". . . shipped, transported, or otherwise moved or delivered or received for movement."

Therefore, it must be found that James Grady moved, or caused to be moved interstate, sixteen cows, which were over two years of age, from the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, to Gretna, Nebraska, in violation of §§ 71.18 and 78.9(b)(3)(ii) of Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, because the cows were not accompanied by an owner's statement or other document listing individual identification; and were not accompanied by a certificate, as required.

XXXII

Mr. Lawrence Wayne Hunter is the owner of Wayne Hunter, Inc., Jordan, Montana, which is a trucking company. In his affidavit, he stated that on or about December 3, 1983, he received a call to send a truck to Hinsdale, Montana, to pick up a load of cattle. He was told that the cattle were to be transported for a Mr. Pat Grady. He dispatched truck driver, Gary Flint, to Hinsdale, Montana, to pick up the cattle (CX-48; Tr. 257-258).

Mr. Gary Flint, Jordan, Montana, is a truck driver for Wayne Hunter, Inc. In his affidavit he stated that on December 3, 1983, he was dispatched to Hinsdale, Montana, to pick up a load of 60 cattle for a Pat Grady, Dunlap, Iowa. The cows were loaded at Hinsdale, Montana, on December 3, 1983. There were several trucks involved and Pat Grady was riding in one of the other trucks. The trucks stopped at Beach, North Dakota where Pat Grady made a phone call after which he decided to send Mr. Flint's load of cattle to the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, instead of some place in Minnesota. The 60 cows were delivered to the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, at about 2:00 or 3:00 p.m. on December 4, 1983 (CX-49; Tr. 258-259).

Mr. Vernon Zargdrager, South Sioux City, Iowa, is a truck driver for Livestock Express, Sioux City, Iowa. On or about December 4, 1983, his company sent two semi-trailer livestock trucks to Hinsdale, Montana, to transport cattle for Pat Grady, Dunlap, Iowa. The cattle were picked up at the Hinsdale Stockyards, Hinsdale, Montana. Mr. Zargdrager drove one truck and Mr. Kenny Jasperson, Kingsley, Iowa, drove the other truck. Pat Grady rode with Mr. Zargdrager to and from Hinsdale, Montana. Between the two trucks they transported 108 head of cattle to the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa. A third truck from Montana transported an additional 60 head of cattle to the Grady farm. The cattle the two trucks picked up were heifers. As far as Mr. Zargdrager knew the cattle were owned by Pat Grady because of the way he talked. He based this on the fact that the sales barn would not allow the cattle to leave without payment and that Pat Grady obtained the clearance for the trucks to leave (CX-36; Tr. 212-216).

Testimony and affidavits of record show that a total of 168 head of cattle (3 truckloads), owned by Pat Grady, were transported from Hinsdale, Montana, to the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, an interstate movement. Mr. Flint, in his affidavit, refers to his truckload as "cattle" and "cows". Mr. Zargdrager refers to the other two truckloads transported by his company as "cattle" or "heifers". The ordinary definition of a "heifer" is a young cow that has not given birth to a calf, and the term "cow" may be applied to any female bovine, whether young or old. Further, the term "cattle" is even more general, since it includes both cows and bulls.

This allegation of the amended complaint charges that this shipment of cattle violated § 78.9(b)(3)(ii). This section requires that the cattle described therein (2 years of age, or parturient or postparturient) must be accompanied by a certificate as defined in § 78.1(n). However, the evidence of record fails to show whether such certificate was required, since the age of the "cattle", "cows", or "heifers" has not been established. Nor does evidence of record reflect that any of these cattle were parturient or postparturient. Thus, a principal element of this violation is lacking in this record. I therefore find that complainant has failed to sustain the burden of proof of the allegation in this count, and that it must be dismissed.

Civil Penalty

The nature and characteristics of brucellosis, its devastating effects, as well as the federal/state/cooperation programs to prevent the spread and eradication of the disease, have previously been set forth. The disease and the potential economic impact upon producers, regardless of herd size, has been shown to be a costly experience. Because of this the regulations promulgated must be adhered to, and enforced vigorously. Noncompliance with these regulations impedes the efforts of federal/state governments to eliminate or prevent the further spread of brucellosis in the United States.

Evidence of record shows that there were previous indiscretions on the part of the respondents in the interstate transportation of cattle. Both Patrick and James Grady received warnings concerning the requirements of the regulations and the necessity to comply with them. Patrick Grady was contacted by Compliance Officers of the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) on October 17, 1982, and questioned concerning an interstate movement of cattle. He was uncooperative at the time and refused to provide the Compliance Officers with requested information on the interstate movement of the cattle. He was advised of the regulations and the necessity to comply with them. Later he received a warning letter, dated November 10, 1982, from the Chief Staff Veterinarian, Veterinary Services, USDA, for still another interstate movement of cattle where proper documents had not accompanied the shipment. In that letter he was again advised of the requirements of the regulation and was offered help on any questions he had concerning the interstate movement of cattle (CX-59; Tr. 132-134, 283).

James Grady was contacted on August 13, 1983, by a USDA Compliance Officer concerning still another interstate movement of cattle. He too was uncooperative. At that time, the regulations and their requirements for the interstate movement of cattle was explained to him at some length. He was again contacted by USDA Compliance Officers on November 17, 1983, at which time a written statement of the interview was made. Although James Grady did not sign the statement, he acknowledged its contents by reading it and initialling a correction he had requested to be made. The statement reflects that James Grady admitted that he had purchased cattle in several eastern states, but had not obtained health certificates for their interstate transportation "because the Vets are never around when we load the cattle". He also advised that eartags and other man-made identification were removed from most of the cattle since "people would not buy them if they knew where they come from" (CX-21; Tr. 136-139, 151, 262-264).

The affidavit of Mr. Leslie Brown shows eight shipments of mostly cow/calf pairs, the cows being over two years of age, being transported from the Mid-America Stockyards, Bristow, Oklahoma, to the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, during the period June-August, 1983. The movement of these cattle was ordered by Jim Grady. Immediately after the cattle were unloaded at the Grady farm, they were put through a restraining chute where all eartags and other man-made identification were removed. Mr. Brown witnessed Jim Grady removing eartags from at least 150 cows, while Patrick Grady removed any backtags or other identification. Mr. Brown even assisted in removing eartags on some of the occasions. James Grady told Mr. Brown if he were ever asked where the cows came from he was to say that they originated from "a NFO Station in southern Kansas" (CX-22, 58).

When questioned as to a health certificate and eartags for the cows delivered to Mr. Mark Crisp on July 31, 1983, Pat Grady advised he could not provide a health certificate for the cows Mr. Crisp had purchased, and that any eartags the cows may have had were removed because Pat Grady did not sell cows with eartags (CX-74).

Dr. Dan Nielsen noted on September 7, 1983, when he examined the 31 cows purchased by Mr. Bob Ondracek from Jim Grady that none of the cows had metal eartags, but that all of them had scabby holes which indicated that eartags had been removed from the cows 2 or 3 weeks previous (Tr. 318).

Mr. Leon Kruger, a driver for the Sioux City Motor Express, transported cow/calf pairs for Jim Grady from Bristow, Oklahoma, to the Grady farm, Dunlap, Iowa, in September 1983. He stated that upon arrival at the Grady farm the yearlings in the shipment were put through a restraining chute where the eartags were removed. The yearlings were later reloaded and transported to the Moorehead Sales Barn, Moorehead, Iowa (CX-34).

Dr. Richard N. Bruce noted upon examination of cows purchased in September 1983 by Mr. William Allemang from Jim Grady that some of the cows had holes in their ears indicating that they had previously been eartagged (CX-17).

Dr. Doug Wurster has examined cattle for the Gradys for intrastate movement on approximately six occasions during the ten months previous to November 17, 1983. He noted during these examinations that eartags had obviously been removed from some of the cows (CX-52).

The record therefore reflects that over an extensive period of time the respondents had been made aware of, and indeed were aware of, the regulations and requirements governing the interstate movement of cattle. Nevertheless, on numerous occasions throughout the Findings, supra, they deliberately chose to ignore them. Indeed, their actions show a pattern of disdain and utter disregard for the regulations. Such actions denigrate, debase and undermine the brucellosis eradication program by defeating federal/state efforts to properly trace movements of exposed animals and prevent the spread and exposure to non-contaminated cattle.

Nor do respondents contentions that the "spirit of the law" was complied with since the record fails to disclose any of the cattle transported were found to have brucellosis; that it did not make any difference whether an intrastate or interstate health certificate accompany the shipments; and that they did not intentionally violate 9 CFR § 78.9(b)(3)(ii), have merit. As noted previously, the intrastate health certificates lack the detail required by 9 CFR 78.1(n). One of the purposes of the interstate health certificate is to alert officials of a receiving state so that they may determine whether such cattle require testing. Further, the intrastate health certificate remains in the origin state and is not forwarded to the proper destination state since it lacks the correct consignee and destination. With regard to "intent", the record as a whole shows a deliberate and wilful pattern of total disregard for the regulations. Additionally, "intent" to violate the regulations is not a requirement of the provisions of 21 U.S.C. § 122.

Finally, it is noted that respondents failed to take the stand and testify concerning the alleged violations. A well settled principle that has been followed in many proceedings before the Department of Agriculture is that failure to testify raises the inference that any testimony respondents would have given would have been adverse to their positions and that the prima facie case which the complainant presented here would have been bolstered if they had chosen to testify. See In re Apex Meat Company, 44 Agric. Dec. ____ (Sept. 5, 1985) (Slip opinion, pages 32-33), and cases and authority cited therein.

Section 122 of Title 21 of the United States Code provides for the assessment of a civil penalty "of not more than one thousand dollars" for each violation of the regulations published pursuant to authority granted to the Secretary of Agriculture in §§ 111 and 120 of Title 21 of the United States Code.

Sections 111 and 120 of Title 21 of the United States Code authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to issue regulations which govern the interstate transportation of animals from any place where communicable disease exists or where he may have reason to believe it exists. The Secretary has issued such regulations governing the interstate transportation of cattle, as here pertinent, 9 CFR §§ 71.18, 78.9(b)(3)(ii) and 79.9 (c)(3)(ii). Each is a separate and distinct violation subject to the maximum civil penalty of $1,000. The complainant here seeks the maximum civil penalty assessment for each proven violation. Severe sanctions for violations of the Department's regulations has been an established policy. In re Braxton Worsley, 33 Agric. Dec. 1547, 1556-71 (1974); see also In re Donald Hageman, S&H Hogs, Inc., et al., 42 Agric. Dec. 531, 546

(1983) and cases cited therein. The evidence of record is void of any mitigating or extenuating circumstances which would lessen the assessment of the maximum penalty. Rather, the evidence supports the requested $1,000 civil penalty for each violation alleged and proven as appropriate to accomplish the goals of compliance and deterrence of respondents and others simularly situated.

ADDITIONAL CONCLUSIONS BY THE JUDICIAL OFFICER

Respondents contend that there is not sufficient evidence to support the ALJ's findings of fact. However, in view of the massive amount of evidence supporting the findings of fact, no useful purpose would be served by responding in detail to respondents' contentions.[2] In addition, notwithstanding the massive evidence introduced by complainant, respondents failed to testify. Under the settled principle that has been followed in many proceedings before this Department,[3] and which has been followed in many judicial proceedings,[4] I infer, as the ALJ did, that their testimony would have been adverse to their position here. "It is certainly a maxim that all evidence is to be weighed according to the proof which it was in the power of one side to have produced and in the power of the other to have contradicted." Lord Mansfield, in Blatch v. Archer, Cowp. 66, quoted with approval in Wigmore, Evidence (3d ed. 1940), § 285.

Respondents argue that the ALJ erroneously excluded evidence which they contend would show that certain animals not involved in this case that tested positive to the brucellosis card test were permitted to move in violation of the regulations. That evidence was properly excluded. Even if respondents were able to show that the regulations were not scrupulously followed in certain particular instances where animals should not have been moved under the regulations, that would not be a defense to respondents' failure to obtain the required health certificates, and to have the proper documentation and identification for their animals.

The evidence here shows that the maximum civil penalty should be assessed against respondents. They had a total disregard for the requirements designed to prevent the spread of brucellosis. They ignored instructions given by regulatory officials and truckers as to the need for health certificates.

The brucellosis eradication program is important to the national welfare. To date, the program has cost in excess of $1 billion. It costs about $150 million a year (Tr. 440). There is no excuse for respondents' complete disregard of the regulatory requirements.

In their appeal, respondents contend that Count XXV of the amended complaint should have been dismissed. As complainant points out, the ALJ did dismiss Count XXV. Complainant also argues that the record supports the allegations of Count XXV of the amended complaint, but complainant did not file a cross-appeal, and complainant requests that "Respondents' Appeal Petition be dismissed and that the Judicial Officer affirm the Administrative Law Judge's Decision and Order" (Complainant's Reply at 20). This further indicates that complainant was not seeking a reversal of the ALJ's ruling as to Count XXV.

For the foregoing reasons, the following order should be issued.

ORDER

IT IS ORDERED, that

1. Counts XX, XXI, XXII and XXXII be dismissed as to Patrick J. Grady, and that Count XXV be dismissed as to James Grady.

2. Respondent, James Grady, is assessed a total civil penalty of $22,000 for the violations as set forth in the Findings, supra ($1,000 each—VI, VII, IX, XII, XIII, XIV, XV, XVI, XVII, XVIII, XIX, XX, XXI, XXII, XXIII, XXIV, XXVI, XXVII, XXVIII, XXIX, XXX and XXXI).

3. Respondent, Patrick J. Grady, is assessed a total civil penalty of $5,000 for the violations set forth in the Findings, supra ($1,000 each—II, III, IV, X, XI).

4. Respondent, Rose Mary Grady, is assessed a total civil penalty of $2,000 for the violations set forth in the Findings, supra ($1,000 each—V and VIII).

5. The above civil penalties shall be payable to the "Treasurer of the United States" by certified check or money order, and shall be forwarded by each respondent to Thomas E. Bundy, Esq., Office of the General Counsel, Room 2422, South Building, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. Appendix A

Pertinent Statute and Regulations

Title 21, United States Code, § 122 provides that:

> Any person, company, or corporation knowingly violating the provisions of this Act or the orders or regulations made in pursuance thereof shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. Any person, company, or corporation violating such provisions, orders, or regulations may be assessed a civil penalty by the Secretary of Agriculture of not more than one thousand dollars. The Secretary may issue an order assessing such civil penalty only after notice and an opportunity for an agency hearing on the record. Such order shall be treated as a final order reviewable under chapter 158 of title 28, United States Code [28 U.S.C. §§ 2341 et seq.]. The validity of such order may not be reviewed in an action to collect such civil penalty.

Title 21, United States Code, § 111 provides that:

DEFAULT DECISION AND ORDER

This proceeding was instituted under the Act of February 2, 1903, as amended (Act) (21 U.S.C. §§ 111, 120, and 122), by a Complaint issued by the Administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, United States Department of Agriculture. The Complaint alleged that Respondent violated sections 111 and 120 of the Act (21 U.S.C. §§ 111 and 120) and section 78.9(c)(3) of the regulations promulgated thereunder (9 CFR § 78.9(c)(3)).

Copies of the complaint and the Rules of Practice governing proceedings under the Act were served by the Hearing Clerk, by certified mail, upon respondent on August 30, 1985.

Pursuant to section 1.136 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.136) applicable to this proceeding, Respondent was informed in the Complaint and the letter of service that an Answer should be filed with the Hearing Clerk within twenty (20) days after service of the Complaint, and that failure to file an answer either denying, admitting, or explaining the allegations in the Complaint and requesting an oral hearing would constitute an admission of such allegations and a waiver of such hearing. On September 24, 1985, Respondent was sent, by regular mail, a notice that his Answer had not been received by the Hearing Clerk in the allotted time. More than twenty (20) days have elapsed since Respondent was served with the Complaint in question. Respondent has not filed an answer to date. This Decision and Order, therefore, is issued pursuant to sections 1.136 and 1.139 of the Rules of Practice applicable to this proceeding (7 CFR §§ 1.136 and 1.139).

Accordingly, the material facts alleged in the Complaint, which are admitted by Respondent's failure to file an Answer, are adopted and set forth herein as the findings of fact.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Michael C. Bailey, Respondent, is an individual whose address is Route 1, Woodland, Alabama 36280.

2. On or about January 25, 1984, the respondent moved, from Randolph County, Alabama, within a class B state, to Bowden, Georgia, approximately five (5) postparturient cows in violation of section 78.9(c)(3) of the regulations (9 CFR § 78.9(c)(3)) because the cows were not accompanied by a certificate or other document, as required.

3. On or about January 25, 1984, the respondent moved, from Randolph County, Alabama, within a class B state, to Bowden, Georgia, approximately five (5) postparturient cows in violation of section 78.9(c)(3) of the regulations (9 CFR § 78.9(c)(3)) because the cows were not accompanied by a "Permit for Entry," as required.

4. On or about February 13, 1984, the respondent moved, from Randolph County, Alabama, within a class B state, to Bowden, Georgia, approximately one (1) postparturient cow in violation of section 78.9(c)(3) of the regulations (9 CFR § 78.9(c)(3)) because the cow was not accompanied by a certificate or other document, as required.

CONCLUSION

By reason of the facts in the findings of fact set forth above, Respondent has violated the Act and regulations promulgated thereunder. Therefore, the following Order is issued.

ORDER

Michael C. Bailey is assessed a civil penalty of two thousand dollars [$2,000] ($500.00 per violation) which shall be paid within thirty (30) days from the date this Order becomes effective. This civil penalty shall be made payable to "Treasurer of the United States," by certified check or money order, and shall be forwarded to Sherrie Kopka Kennedy, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Office of the General Counsel, Room 2422 South Building, Washington, D. C. 20250-1400.

This Order shall have the same force and effect as if entered after full hearing and shall be final and effective 35 days after service of this Decision and Order upon Respondent, unless there is an appeal to the Judicial Officer pursuant to section 1.145 of the Rules of Practice applicable to this proceeding (7 CFR § 1.145).

Numerous violations of the Animal Welfare Act.

The Judicial Officer affirmed Judge Palmer's order revoking respondent's license and assessing a civil penalty of $15,300 for numerous violations of the Animal Welfare Act. Complainant need only prevail by a preponderance of the evidence. A corporation is responsible for the acts or failures of its employees or other persons acting for it. Question left open as to whether anesthetizing animals solely for the purpose of making the animals appear dead while exhibited, or dyeing the animals, is unlawful.

Decision by Donald Campbell, Judicial Officer.

DECISION AND ORDER

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Animal Welfare Act, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 2131 et seq.), and the regulations and standards issued thereunder (9 CFR § 1.1 et seq.). On March 6, 1985, Administrative Law Judge Victor W. Palmer (ALJ) issued an initial Decision and Order directing respondent to cease and desist from violating the Act and regulations, assessing a civil penalty of $15,300, and revoking respondent's license issued under the Act.

On June 5, 1985, respondent appealed to the Judicial Officer, to whom final administrative authority has been delegated to decide the Department's cases subject to 5 U.S.C. §§ 556 and 557 (7 CFR § 2.35).* Complainant filed a cross-appeal on July 11, 1985. The case was referred to the Judicial Officer for decision on September 24, 1985.

Based on a careful reading of the entire record in this case, the initial decision by the ALJ is adopted as the final decision in this case (with a few trivial changes). Additional conclusions by the Judicial Officer follow the ALJ's conclusions.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE'S INITIAL DECISION

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is an administrative proceeding initiated by a complaint filed on October 17, 1983, by the Acting Administrator, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS), alleging that respondent, Gentle Jungle, Inc., violated the Animal Welfare Act (the Act), 7 U.S.C. §§ 2131-2155.[1] The complaint charges that respondent, as a

Reg. 3219 (1953), reprinted in 5 U.S.C. app. at 1068 (1982). The Department's present Judicial Officer was appointed in January 1971, having been involved with the Department's regulatory programs since 1949 (including 3 years' trial litigation; 10 years' appellate litigation relating to appeals from the decisions of the prior Judicial Officer; and 8 years as administrator of the Packers and Stockyards Act regulatory program).

[1] The provisions of the Animal Welfare Act pertinent herein are:

7 U.S.C. § 2132(e), (g), and (h), which defines the terms "commerce," "animal," and "exhibitor," so as to make respondent subject to the Act and to regulations issued under it by the Secretary of Agriculture.

7 U.S.C. § 2139 which establishes a broad and embracing standard of construction of principal-agent relationships to allow the Act to be enforced against an animal exhibitor for any act or omission by any person acting for it or in its employ.

7 U.S.C. § 2141 which requires that: "all animals delivered for transportation, transported, purchased, or sold, in commerce, by a dealer or exhibitor shall be marked or identified at such time and in such humane manner as the Secretary may prescribe . . . ."

licensed exhibitor of wild animals, repeatedly violated applicable standards under the Act for the care and handling of its animals, and failed to maintain records as required by applicable regulations. On November 23, 1983, an answer was filed by attorneys on respondent's behalf. On February 24, 1984, an amended complaint was filed alleging additional incidents of inadequate animal care and handling by respondent and additional recordkeeping violations found on reinspections of respondent's premises made subsequent to the filing of the original complaint. On March 22, 1984, an answer to the amended complaint was filed on respondent's behalf by its attorneys. Pursuant to a motion by complainant that the proceedings were ready for hearing, a notice scheduling an oral hearing in Los Angeles, California was issued on June 4, 1984. On July 27, 1984, respondent's attorneys notified the Hearing Clerk that they had withdrawn from its representation. On August 8, 1984, a notice was issued to respondent advising that it would be treated as representing itself pro se; the hearing would continue to be scheduled for November 6, 1984, and would not be postponed; and that if respondent wished to retain new counsel it should do so well enough in advance of the hearing that its attorneys would be prepared to go to hearing on November 6, 1984. A reminder notice of the November 6, 1984 hearing was issued on October 11, 1984.

On November 2, 1984, a telephone conference was held with complainant's counsel and Ralph Helfer, the President of the respondent corporation, in which Mr. Helfer advised that he would personally represent respondent at the hearing since there were no funds to pay attorneys. The rules of practice and various procedural questions raised by Mr. Helfer were discussed during the conference. Completed subpoenas for direct service by respondent, with instructions on how this was to be done, and a pamphlet copy of the rules of practice were mailed to respondent by Express Mail on November 2, 1984.

On November 6, 7, and 8, 1984, an oral hearing was held in Los Angeles, California. Complainant was represented by Donald A.

animal handling, housing, feeding, watering, sanitation, ventilation, shelter from extremes of weather and temperatures, and adequate veterinary care.

7 U.S.C. § 2149 which authorizes the Secretary, after notice and opportunity for hearing and after determining the Act has been violated, to revoke a license, assess a civil penalty of not more than $1,000 for each violation, and to enter a cease and desist order. Each violation and each day during which a violation continues is specified to be a separate offense. The Secretary is directed to give due consideration to the appropriateness of the penalty with respect to the size of the business of the person involved, the gravity of the violation, the person's good faith, and the history of previous violations.

Tracy, Office of the General Counsel, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. Respondent was represented by its President, Ralph Helfer. At the close of the hearing, both parties were given time to file proposed findings, conclusions, and supporting briefs. Staggered briefing was scheduled wherein complainant was required to file first to provide respondent with an opportunity to review complainant's materials and determine what, if any, responsive written arguments it might wish to enter. Complainant filed its proposed findings, conclusions, and brief on January 10, 1985. Respondent did not file a response within the allotted time and has not sought to file any written arguments.

Upon consideration of the evidence of record and the arguments of the parties, it has been decided that respondent violated the Act and pertinent regulations. An order is being entered revoking respondent's Class C license as an animal exhibitor, directing it to cease and desist from future violations, and requiring it to pay civil penalties totalling $15,300.00.

FINDINGS

A. General

1. Respondent, Gentle Jungle, Inc., 3815 West Olive Avenue, Suite 102, Burbank, California 91505, is a corporation which, at all times material herein, was an animal exhibitor and held a Class C license (No. 93 C-76) issued under the Act. Respondent is no longer engaged in business, but during the period 1980 through 1983, it was one of the largest suppliers of wild animals for exhibition in motion picture and television productions.

2. Ralph D. Helfer is the President of the respondent corporation.

3. At the time of respondent's license application, May 16, 1975, and each time the license was renewed, respondent received a copy of the regulations and standards contained in Title 9, Chapter 1, Subchapter A of the Code of Federal Regulations, and agreed in writing to comply with them.

B. Prior Warning

4. On November 24, 1981, Dr. James H. Roswurm, the APHIS area Veterinarian in Charge, sent a letter to respondent respecting its violation of regulations found in the course of an inspection of its facilities which warned that future violations would be prosecuted.

C. Recordkeeping and Untagged Cats

5. On September 23, October 14, and October 25, 1982, APHIS personnel inspected respondent's facilities and found: (1) the actual inventory of exotic animals differed from that shown in respondent's records; (2) no records to account for the disposition of some animals; and (3) a set of records was not maintained at the site where the animals were housed.

6. On November 29 and December 6, 1983, APHIS personnel inspected respondent's facilities and found untagged domestic cats to be present.

D. Veterinary Care for an Orangutan

7. In the summer of 1980, an orangutan owned by respondent was taken away from the set during the location filming of "Any Which Way You Can" and was struck with a cane and an axe handle by respondent's head trainer to make it more responsive to his commands and more submissive during the filming. Immediately afterwards, the orangutan exhibited a very submissive manner but there were no physical signs of injury. The orangutan was not provided veterinary care after the incident until it died a month later from acute cardiac collapse resulting from undetermined causes. During the month that followed the incident, the orangutan was not observed to be injured, sick or otherwise in need of veterinary care. To the contrary, on one occasion, it had the strength to seize one of the respondent's other trainers who had come too near its cage and held the trainer in a powerful grip until its attention was diverted.

E. Handling and Veterinary Care Provided a Sick Tiger

8. On November 20, 1981, respondent had its tiger, "Sulton" dyed black for exhibition as a panther in a film. The tiger was dyed by a veterinarian who first administered the drug Sernalin, a phenocycline, or PCP, to knock the tiger down; and anesthetized it with Halothene gas. The tiger was then dipped in a solution of Clairol professional hair dye. Three other tigers owned by respondent were likewise dyed by the veterinarian and tolerated the procedure without incident. Sulton did not and died on November 30, 1981, from an apparent adverse reaction to the drug Sernalin. The tiger never fully came out of its anesthetized state. The treating veterinarian was in attendance from the time he dyed the tiger until the next day when it was moved to respondent's ranch at Colton, California, in response to directions from local Animal Control authorities. The veterinarian accompanied the tiger to the Colton ranch, set up procedures for its care, and placed it in a trailer with hay and heat lamps. The veterinarian returned to examine it two days later when he concluded its condition was stable and improving. The treating veterinarian did not attend the tiger again until its death on November 30, 1981. There is a conflict in the evidence as to the content of telephone communications respondent's employees had with the veterinarian prior to the tiger's death. In any event, the tiger's condition progressively deteriorated from November 26, 1981, until its death on November 30, 1981.

(a) During the four-day period of November 26 and November 30, 1981, the tiger did not receive personal veterinary care to better address its health problems and to ameliorate its suffering.

(b) The tiger, on November 28 or 29, 1981, while very sick and unable to walk, was dragged from where it was housed by respondent's employees who used its tail to pull it, causing abrasions to the tiger's skin and increasing its suffering.

F. Failure to Provide Veterinary Care to a Sick Leopard

9. In January 1982, respondent's leopard, Satan, became sick and was not provided veterinary care from the time it was first observed to be sick (lethargic, refused food, just lay there), until its death nearly two weeks later. Veterinarians were called by respondent, but all but one refused to come because respondent already owed them overdue bills. The one who agreed to see the leopard required an experienced trainer to be in attendance and, again, all but one trainer refused to attend the leopard because they were unpaid for prior services. Respondent failed to coordinate the presence of the one willing trainer with the one willing veterinarian and the leopard died unattended and untreated.

G. The Anesthetizing of a Ferret

10. During the summer of 1980, a trainer employed by respondent used a non-medical grade of ether to anesthetize a ferret for exhibition in a film.

H. Housing a Bear in an Unclean Cage Without Drinking Water

11. In the spring of 1982, a full grown black bear owned by respondent was observed by one of respondent's former employees to have been confined in a cage that was not kept clean and was without drinking water.

I. Failure to Adequately Feed "Large Cats"

12. During mid-1980 through mid-1981, respondent was often without funds or acceptable credit to purchase needed food for the large cats (lions, tigers, etc.) it kept at the Colton facility. Respondent, as a consequence, provided no food to the large cats on a number of days when they were not scheduled to fast for health reasons or training purposes, and on various other days, fed the large cats only one chicken each instead of their normal food ration of three to four chickens each. During this period, the large cats were only rarely fed other types of food needed for a healthy diet.

J. Outdoor Housing of Camels, Llamas and Lions

13. On November 29, 1983, and again on December 6, 1983, an Animal Health Technician employed by APHIS inspected respondent's facilities at the Cougar Hill Ranch, Littlerock, California. She ordered respondent to correct deficiencies found at the time of the first inspection, but when she reinspected the facility, one week later, the following deficiencies were still in existence:

(a) Respondent's camels and llamas were confined outdoors by an open wire enclosure which provided them with no protection from the elements.

(b) Several of respondent's lions were housed outdoors in chain-link cages which did not contain den boxes needed for their protection from the elements.

K. Handling, Sanitation, Feeding, Watering, and Housing of Three Elephants

14. On November 29, 1983 and December 6, 1983, when the APHIS Animal Health Technician inspected respondent's facilities at the Cougar Hill Ranch, Littlerock, California, she also found that respondent was housing its three elephants in a trailer that was too small for normal movements by the elephants, and the inside walls of which had splintered plywood and protruding bolts endangering the elephants. At the time of her first inspection, the APHIS Health Technician ordered the correction of these conditions, but when she reinspected the facility, one week later, they existed as before.

15. In addition to the observations by the APHIS official on November 29 and December 6, 1983, the elephants were observed another time in December 1983 by another APHIS official accompanied by two elephant experts. On a subsequent day in December 1983, probably the 20th, they were observed by a third expert when he purchased and took possession of one of the elephants. Each time they were observed, the elephants were found to be chained inside a trailer where they were unable to move about sufficiently; the elephant chained between the wheel wells could not lie down; there was excessive accumulation of manure on the trailer floor which was wet and spongy from urine, indicating to the experts that the trailer had not been cleaned daily; and the elephants appeared to be thin, underfed, and in discomfort.

16. On December 20, 1983, approximately, Mr. Gary Johnson purchased and took possession of one of the elephants which he believed to be in the best condition of the three. Mr. Johnson found that elephant to be thin and apparently underfed, and its feet needed special care because of an excessive buildup of dead tissue, which resulted from a lack of sufficient exercise.

CONCLUSIONS

1. Respondent, at all times material herein, was and is subject to the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Agriculture as the holder of a Class C license issued to respondent as an animal exhibitor under the Act.

2. Respondent, on September 23, October 14, and October 25, 1982, violated regulations issued by the Secretary (9 CFR §§ 2.75 and 2.125) respecting the business records it was required to maintain as a Class C licensee. Additionally, on November 29 and December 6, 1983, untagged domestic cats were on respondent's business premises in violation of 9 CFR § 2.50. A civil penalty of $800.00 is appropriate.

Respondent's recordkeeping violations arose out of its failure to keep a set of records at the facility where its animals were housed (9 CFR § 2.125), and its failure to maintain records in the prescribed form showing the details of all acquisitions and dispositions of animals in its possession at various times (9 CFR § 2.75).

Respondent was required by 9 CFR § 2.125 to furnish requested information to any Veterinary Service representative "within such reasonable time as may be specified in the request." Because respondent did not keep a set of books at the facility where it kept its animals, it was unable to promptly comply with such requests on three occasions. This is construed to be a violation of the regulation but was the result of respondent's misunderstanding of APHIS requirements and was not in furtherance of any scheme to circumvent the Act. A penalty of $100.00 for each of the three instances of this violation, or $300.00 total, is appropriate.

Primarily, to guard pet dogs and cats from thieves who would steal and later sell them for laboratory experimentation, APHIS imposes stringent recordkeeping requirements to document the ownership history of animals in the possession of dealers and other licensees. APHIS also requires dealers and exhibitors to affix collars with special identification tags to all dogs and cats in their possession. Harsh sanctions for violations of these recordkeeping and tagging requirements are typically imposed as necessary to the achievement of this laudable goal. See Rudolph Vrana, ___ Agric. Dec. ___, (Nov. 6, 1984). However, the dogs and cats on respondent's premises were either pets owned by its employees and students, or highly trained animal performers. Respondent's business is not the type that is used to launder the identity of stolen dogs and cats. Furthermore, the inaccuracies in respondent's records chiefly concerned discrepancies in its inventory of exotic animals which apparently resulted from inadvertent bookkeeping errors of omission. Respondent's recordkeeping violations of 9 CFR § 2.75 are not concluded to be egregious in nature and a civil penalty of $300.00 is appropriate.

For these same reasons, complainant's violations of 9 CFR § 2.50, due to the presence of untagged domestic cats on its premises at the time of inspections by an APHIS official on November 29 and December 6, 1983, must also be construed to be minor in nature and, again, a civil penalty of $100.00 for each of the two violations, or $200.00 total, appears to be sufficient and appropriate.

3. There is no record evidence showing respondent's orangutan was "sick, diseased, injured, lame or blind" needing veterinary care after it was repeqtedly struck by its trainer, in the summer of 1980; and therefore the one applicable regulation, 9 CFR § 3.84, was not violated.

Departmental regulations applicable to nonhuman primates do not presently require their humane handling and treatment. This is a grievous oversight—an oversight that should be immediately corrected by concerned officials.

The only regulation now applicable to orangutans and other "nonhuman primates" has very limited application. It requires veterinary care to be provided to those animals observed to be "sick, diseased, injured, lame or blind." The testimony in this proceeding is that after being repeatedly struck, the orangutan exhibited a subdued manner for a time, but there were no physical signs or evidence of injury. Furthermore, its health was sufficiently vigorous to enable it to later seize and threaten one of its trainers.

The cause of its death a month later is undetermined, and to speculate that it was related to the beating, or that veterinary care could have prevented it, would be merely that—speculation.

4. Respondent, on November 26, 27, 28, and 29, 1981, violated 9 CFR § 3.134 by failing to provide veterinary care to its sick tiger, Sulton.

5. Respondent, on November 28 or 29, 1981, violated 9 CFR § 3.135 when its employees mishandled respondent's sick tiger, Sulton, dragging it by the tail to move it from where it was housed, and caused it unnecessary discomfort and stress.

6. The maximum civil penalty of $1,000.00 for each of the respondent's five violations concerning its tiger, Sulton, or $5,000.00 total, is appropriate.

At the hearing, Mr. Helfer questioned whether the failure to provide the tiger veterinary care for four days after its condition started to degenerate on November 26, 1981, is properly attributable to respondent or should be instead considered to be a breach of duty by the treating veterinarian employed by respondent as an independent contractor. The Act renders this consideration academic in that a licensee is held directly responsible "for any act or omission by any person acting for it or in its employ" (7 U.S.C. § 2139). In short, the Act precludes a licensee from delegating away its responsibility to provide each of its animals humane treatment and needed veterinary care. Various of respondent's employees testified that they observed the tiger to be suffering and in need of veterinary care and treatment from November 26, 1981, until its death. Their observations established respondent's duty to secure the needed veterinary care. When it was finally provided on November 30, 1981, it came too late and the tiger had suffered needlessly for four days.

During those four days of suffering, some of respondent's employees cruelly added to the tiger's torment by dragging the animal across the ground to move it from the trailer where it was housed. This incident, when added to the four days when it should have been provided needed veterinary care, constitutes a fifth violation of the Act which, together with the other four, should be penalized at the statutory maximum amount.

7. Respondent, in January 1982, violated 9 CFR § 3.134 by failing to provide veterinary care to its sick leopard, Satan, for over one week. A civil penalty of $3,000.00 is appropriate.

There is less testimony in the record pertaining to the leopard, Satan, and its need for veterinary care than was given respecting the tiger, Sulton. Its physical suffering, apparently, was not as intense. For that reason, a lesser civil penalty of $3,000.00 is being assessed.

On respondent's behalf, it is to be noted that attempts were made to obtain veterinary care which came of nothing because of its poor financial circumstances. But those who would employ animals for profit, particularly the large profits realized when they are exhibited for films, must first assure that they are always able to faithfully and promptly attend to the medical and other needs of these dependent animals.

The Department of Agriculture's sanction policy is to deal harshly with those who, because they are undercapitalized, are unable to fully discharge their financial duties to growers and dealers in agricultural commodities. See Worsley, 33 Agric. Dec. 1547, 1556–71 (1974). It is appropriate that this same standard be made applicable to licensed animal exhibitors to assume their faithful discharge of the duties they owe the animals they use for profit.

8. Respondent, during the summer of 1980, violated 9 CFR § 3.135 when its trainer anesthetized a ferret with a non-medical grade of ether and caused it unnecessary behavioral stress. A civil penalty of $500.00 is appropriate.

A veterinarian who respondent employed on various occasions to assist it in exhibiting its animals, testified that the preferred procedure for anesthetizing a ferret for exhibition in a film scene is to have a veterinarian put it to rest with halogen gas. In his opinion, the procedure employed by respondent's trainer was unnecessarily stressful to the animal.

Although the practice of anesthetizing healthy animals for special film illusions has not been questioned in this proceeding, the procedure employed should, at very least, be performed by a competent veterinarian using the finest grade of anesthetics.

Inasmuch as there was no proof that the animal suffered any permanent harm, the civil penalty is being assessed at one-half of the maximum amount.

9. Respondent, in the spring of 1982, violated 9 CFR § 3.137(d) by failing to provide a bear a clean and sanitized cage, and violated 9 CFR § 3.130 by failing to provide the bear adequate drinking water. A civil penalty of $500.00 is appropriate.

Although violations of two regulations were observed by one of respondent's employees, they both involved a single instance of neglect. A total civil penalty of $500.00 appears to be appropriate.

10. Respondent, from the middle of 1980 through the middle of 1981, violated 9 CFR § 3.129 by failing to feed its large cats (lions and tigers, etc.) food of sufficient quantity and nutritive value to maintain all animals in good health. A civil penalty of $2,000.00 is appropriate.

Credible testimony makes it very clear that during mid-1980 through mid-1981, respondent's lack of working capital and its poor credit rating, caused it to provide food of insufficient quantity and nutritive value to its lions, tigers and other large cats. What the record evidence leaves uncertain is the number of days when these violations were committed. Inasmuch as the principal witness on this subject recalled times when the cats were in need of food and were only given one chicken each, and others when they were fed nothing, the record does support the imposition of a maximum civil penalty for each of the two types of food deprivation, each of which must have occurred at least once.

11. Respondent, on November 29, 1983 and December 6, 1983, violated 9 CFR § 3.127 by failing to provide llamas, camels, and lions with sufficient shelter from cold, sunlight, and inclement weather. A civil penalty of $500.00 is appropriate.

These violations were detected after respondent moved its animals to a new facility and before it had completed permanent arrangements for their housing. Although such violations are serious in nature, none of the animals were noted to have suffered any adverse consequences, and a total civil penalty of $500.00 therefore seems appropriate.

12. Respondent, on November 29, 1983, and December 6, 1983, violated 9 CFR § 3.128 by housing three elephants in a trailer that did not provide sufficient space to allow each animal to make normal postural movements.

13. Respondent, on November 29, 1983, and December 6, 1983, violated 9 CFR § 3.125(a) by housing three elephants in a trailer, the inside walls of which were not maintained in good repair to protect the animals from injury.

14. Respondent, on two other days in December 1983, violated 9 CFR § 3.129, in that its three elephants were observed to be underfed; and violated 9 CFR § 3.131 in that the trailer in which the elephants were enclosed was not adequately cleaned of their excreta.

15. A civil penalty of $3,000.00 for these violations is appropriate.

Again, respondent's violations are the outgrowth of its poor financial condition at the time which led it to house its elephants in a trailer that was not suitable for longterm confinement, to cut back on their food rations, and to have a staff which was inadequate for the elephants' proper care.

The appropriate overall penalty for these violations, involving three elephants, appears to be $3,000.00.

16. In addition to the civil penalties that are being assessed, respondent's license should be revoked.

Respondent committed so many serious violations of the APHIS standards designed to protect the health and well-being of the animals it used for exhibition, its license as an exhibitor necessarily needs to be revoked.

In sum, upon consideration of the large and once extremely profitable business respondent conducted as an animal exhibitor, the gravity of specific violations found to have been committed, and the overall pattern of recurrent violations over a period of several years, a civil penalty totalling $15,300.00 is being assessed and respondent's license shall be revoked to preclude future violations.

Accordingly, the following order shall be entered.

ADDITIONAL CONCLUSIONS BY THE JUDICIAL OFFICER

Respondent's appeal, in the main, reargues matters that were fully considered by the ALJ and correctly decided. No useful purpose would be served by a detailed discussion of these matters. In short, the record contains ample evidence to support the ALJ's findings,[2] and the record reveals no procedural irregularities.

Respondent's owner argues that the respondent corporation should not be responsible for the actions or failures of employees or other persons acting for the corporation, but the Act expressly makes an exhibitor responsible for the acts or omissions of employees or other persons acting for the exhibitor. Specifically, the Act provides (7 U.S.C. § 2139):

> When construing or enforcing the provisions of this chapter, the act, omission, or failure of any person acting for or employed by a research facility, a dealer, or an exhibitor . . . within the scope of his employment or office, shall be deemed the act, omission, or failure of such research facility, dealer, exhibitor, licensee, operator of an auction sale, intermediate handler, or carrier, as well as of such person.

Respondent's owner argues that its license should not be revoked "in perpetuity" (Appeal at 3). But the regulations provide that a person whose license has been revoked is eligible to apply for a new license after 1 year from the effective date of the revocation (9 CFR § 2.10).

Complainant seeks to increase the civil penalty by $3,000 because of the violations involving the three elephants, but the civil penalty assessed against respondent, in conjunction with the revocation order, is adequate to serve as an effective deterrent to future violations.

Complainant argues on appeal that the ALJ improperly dismissed the allegation relating to respondent's orangutan. But the record supports the ALJ's finding that there were no physical signs or evidence of injury to the animal requiring veterinary care. Accordingly, the ALJ properly dismissed the allegation in the complaint as to the orangutan. The ALJ correctly observed that the failure of the Department's regulations to require humane handling and treatment of nonhuman primates, in the circumstances of this case, "is a grievous oversight—an oversight that should be

[2] Complainant need only prevail by a preponderance of the evidence. See Herman & MacLean v. Huddleston, 459 U.S. 375, 387-92 (1983); Steadman v. SEC, 450 U.S. 91, 92-104 (1981); In re Rowland, 40 Agric. immediately corrected by concerned officials" (Initial Decision at 16).

I should note that nothing in this decision should be regarded as affirming the legality of anesthetizing an animal solely for the purpose of (i) making the animal appear dead while exhibited, or (ii) dyeing the animal a different color. The record in this case indicates that anesthetization, even when done "properly" by a veterinarian, is stressful. Whether anesthetization solely for the purpose of exhibiting an animal causes "unnecessary discomfort, behavioral stress, or physical harm to the animal" is a question that is not involved here and will be left open.

For the foregoing reasons, the following order should be issued.

ORDER

1. Respondent's license is hereby revoked.

2. Respondent is assessed a civil penalty of $15,300, which shall be paid not later than the 90th day after service of this order by certified check or money order, made payable to the United States Treasury and sent to Donald A. Tracy, United States Department of Agriculture, Office of the General Counsel, Room 2014-South Building, Washington, D.C. 20250.

3. Respondent and its officers, employees, agents and assigns, acting directly or indirectly, or through any corporation, trust or other device whatsoever, is ordered to comply with the Act and all the regulations and standards thereunder and to cease and desist from any violations thereof.

The cease and desist provisions of this order shall become effective on the day after service of this order on respondent. The revocation order shall become effective on the 30th day after service of this order on respondent.

COURT DECISION

UTICA PACKING COMPANY and DAVID FENSTER v. JOHN R. BLOCK, SECRETARY, UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,et al. Civil Action No. 85-1324. (USDA FMIA Docket No. 35.) Decided January 13, 1986.

James L. Quarles, III, Washington, D.C., and Geoffrey S. Stewart, for plaintiffs-appellants.

L. Michael Wicks, Assistant U.S. Attorney, Detroit, Michigan, for defendants-appelees.

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS, SIXTH CIRCUIT.

Before LIVELY, Chief Judge, and CONTIE and WELLFORD, Circuit Judges. LIVELY, Chief Judge.

The question in this case is whether the Secretary of Agriculture may replace the Judicial Officer of the Department of Agriculture (hereafter USDA) after that officer has rendered a final decision in a case and then present a petition for reconsideration to the replacement. The district court found no legal impediment to this course of conduct, and affirmed the decision rendered by the second Judicial Officer. We disagree and reverse.

THE ADMINISTRATIVE SETTING

In 1940 Congress passed the Schwellenbach Act, 54 Stat. 81 (1940), now codified as 7 U.S.C. § 450c-450g (1982). This law authorized the Secretary of Agriculture (Secretary) to delegate his regulatory functions. Pursuant to this authority the Secretary established the position of Judicial Officer. "The Judicial Officer acts as the final deciding officer in lieu of the Secretary in Department administrative proceedings involving adjudicating or rate-making where the statute requires an administrative hearing or opportunity therefor." T. Flavin, The Functions of the Judicial Officer, United States Department of Agriculture, 26 Geo. Wash.L.Rev. 277 (1957-58) (footnote omitted). The delegation to the Judicial Officer as final deciding officer in adjudication proceedings is contained in 7 CFR § 2.35 (1985).

The Federal Meat Inspection Act, 21 U.S.C. §§ 601, et seq. (1982), requires that all meat food products moving in or affecting commerce be "prepared," labeled and marked only as permitted by the statute and regulations and that inspectors be appointed for the purpose of enforcing these requirements. Section 401 of the Meat Inspection Act, 21 U.S.C. § 671, empowers the Secretary to remove a person or firm deemed unfit to deal with meat food products by withdrawing the inspection service:

> The Secretary may (for such period, or indefinitely, as he deems necessary to effectuate the purposes of this chapter) refuse to provide, or withdraw, inspection service under subchapter I of this chapter with respect to any establishment if he determines, after opportunity for a hearing is accorded to the applicant for, or recipient of, such service, that such applicant or recipient is unfit to engage in any business requiring inspection under subchapter I because the applicant or recipient, or anyone responsibly connected with the applicant or recipient, has been convicted, in any Federal or State court, of (1) any felony, or (2) more than one violation of any law, other than a felony, based upon the acquiring, handling, or distributing of unwholesome, mislabeled, or deceptively packaged food or upon fraud in connection with transactions in food. This section shall not affect in any way other provisions of this chapter for withdrawal of inspection services under subchapter I from establishments failing to maintain sanitary conditions or to destroy condemned carcasses, parts, meat or meat food products.
> For the purpose of this section a person shall be deemed to be responsibly connected with the business if he was a partner, officer, director, holder, or owner of 10 per centum or more of its voting stock or employee in a managerial or executive capacity.
> The determination and order of the Secretary with respect thereto under this section shall be final and conclusive unless the affected applicant for, or recipient of, inspection service files application for judicial review within thirty days after the effective date of such order in the appropriate court as provided in section 674 of this title. Judicial review of any such order shall be upon the record upon which the determination and order are based.

The Secretary has promulgated rules of practice governing formal adjudicatory proceedings under various statutes, including the Meat Inspection Act. 7 CFR § 1.130, et seq. (1985). When an administrator of an agency within the USDA files a complaint with the Secretary the matter is referred to an administrative law judge (ALJ). Upon request the party complained against is entitled to a hearing before the ALJ. The decision of the ALJ is final unless there is a timely appeal to the Judicial Officer, who decides the appeal on the administrative record. The Judicial Officer may grant oral argument or accept submission on briefs. The Judicial Officer renders a decision under procedures set forth in 7 CFR § 1.145(i):

> (i) Decision of the Judicial Officer on Appeal. As soon as practicable after the receipt of the record from the Hearing Clerk, or, in case oral argument was had, as soon as practicable thereafter, the Judicial Officer, upon the basis of and after due consideration of the record and any matter of which official notice is taken, shall rule on the appeal. If the Judicial Officer decides that no change or modification of the Judge's decision is warranted, the Judicial Officer may adopt the Judge's decision as the final order in the proceeding, preserving any right of the party bringing the appeal to seek judicial review of such decision in the proper forum. A final order issued by the Judicial Officershall be filed with the Hearing Clerk. Such order may be regarded by the respondent as final for purposes of judicial review without filing a petition for rehearing, reargument, or reconsideration of the decision of the Judicial Officer.

The regulations further provide that if reconsideration is sought a petition to reconsider the decision of the Judicial Officer shall be filed within 10 days after service of the decision. 7 CFR § 1.146(a)(3).

I.

A.

In 1978 David Fenster, president and part owner of Utica Packing Company was convicted of bribing a meat inspector. After a hearing on a complaint filed by USDA the ALJ ordered withdrawal of meat inspection services from Utica unless Fenster divested himself of his holdings in the company and withdrew from management. Fenster appealed the decision and the Judicial Officer, Donald Campbell, affirmed the finding of the ALJ that Utica was unfit to receive inspection services because a responsibly connected person had been convicted of a felony which went to the heart of the inspection program. The Judicial Officer found Fenster's argument for leniency based on mitigating circumstances irrelevant and declined to consider any other circumstances in view of the type of felony involved. The effect of withdrawing inspection was to debar Utica from engaging in the meat products business so long as Fenster was associated with the company.

Fenster and Utica filed a complaint in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan pursuant to 21 U.S.C. § 674,[1] seeking review of the final decision of the Judicial Officer. After reviewing the administrative record the district court granted summary judgment affirming the decision. Utica Packing Co. v. Bergland, 511 F.Supp. 655 (E.D. Mich. 1981). On appeal this court found that the Judicial Officer erred in refusing to consider mitigating circumstances. The case was remanded "to afford the Judicial Officer an opportunity to consider the mitigating circumstances advanced by Fenster." Utica Packing Co. v. Bergland, 705 F.2d 460 (6th Cir. 1982) (Table).

Upon remand Judicial Officer Campbell expressed strong disagreement with the decision of this court, stating "any person who is convicted under 18 U.S.C. § 201(b) of corruptly bribing a Federal meat inspector is unfit to receive Federal inspection regardless of any mitigating circumstances." In re Utica Packing Company, FMIA Docket No. 35, Decision at 27 (Nov. 18, 1982) (emphasis in original). Because he was required to do so by this court's decision, Campbell did review the evidence of mitigating circumstances which included: possible improper conduct by the inspectors; virulent anti-Semitic remarks by one of the inspectors (Fenster is a Jewish survivor of the Holocaust); Fenster's serious health problems at the time of the bribery; evidence that despite the bribery, Fenster wanted to operate a clean plant; and the Judicial Officer's finding that the bribery stemmed partly from a misunderstanding.

As he reviewed each of the mitigating circumstances Judicial Officer Campbell stated in his decision that, except for this court's decision, he would "give no weight to this circumstance." Nevertheless, Campbell concluded:

> If mitigating circumstances must be considered, I cannot reasonably imagine any stronger mitigating circumstances than appear here. If any felon convicted under 18 U.S.C. § 201(b) of bribing a meat inspector is fit to receive Federal meat inspection, then David Fenster is fit . . . . Id. at 28.

[1] 1. 21 U.S.C. § 674 provides:

> The United States district courts, the District Court of Guam, the District Court of the Virgin Islands, the highest court of American Samoa, and the United States courts of the other Territories, are vested with jurisdiction specifically to enforce, and to prevent and restrain violations of, this chapter, and shall have jurisdiction in all other kinds of cases arising under this chapter, except as provided in section 607(e) of this title.

The Judicial Officer ordered the complaint dismissed "with great reluctance and misgiving." Id. at 29.

B.

Since the Judicial Officer acts for the Secretary, the only post-decision proceeding open to the USDA is a petition to the Judicial Officer for reconsideration. Several USDA officials met shortly after receiving Campbell's second opinion to consider what options might be available. As the brief of the Secretary in this court states, the USDA "violently disagreed" with the latest decision of the Judicial Officer and had "little hope of reconsideration." Instead of petitioning for reconsideration immediately, these officials obtained the Secretary's agreement to revoke Campbell's authority to perform any further "regulatory function" in the Utica case and to "vest such authority in Deputy Assistant Secretary John J. Franke, Jr." Appellee's Brief at 8–9. Mr. Franke is not a lawyer and had never performed adjudicatory, regulatory or legal work. Richard Davis, an attorney in the Office of General Counsel of USDA, was assigned to assist Franke. Davis had no previous contact with the Utica case, but his immediate supervisor participated in the removal of Campbell and appointment of Franke, and also supervised the division responsible for the prosecution of Utica.

Late in the afternoon of the tenth day after Campbell's decision the Secretary filed a petition for reconsideration with Franke. After denying Utica's motion to strike the notice of revocation and redelegation the new Judicial Officer granted the motion for reconsideration. Franke found that "despite the mitigating circumstances presented by respondent, respondent is unfit to receive federal meat inspection so long as David Fenster is associated with the plant." He then ordered inspection service withdrawn indefinitely until Fenster should sever all association with Utica. Utica and Fenster again sought review in the district court, and the district court again granted summary judgment in favor of the Secretary. This appeal followed.

A.

There are additional facts that should be stated before we undertake a consideration of the legal issues raised by the parties. The USDA officials who made the decision to replace Campbell were Dr. Houston, Administrator of Food Safety and Inspection Services, the client agency of the prosecution; James Barnes, USDA General Counsel; James Kelly, an Associate General Counsel who actually participated in supervision of the Utica case at the time the revocation and redelegation took place and was the supervisor of Richard Davis; and Harold Reuben of the Office of General Counsel who also participated in supervision of the prosecution. The Secretary was out of Washington and did not have information available to make an independent decision. He accepted the recommendation of the others and signed the revocation and redelegation order.

In response to requests for admission the Secretary judicially admitted that "[o]ne of the purposes of appointing a 'second Judicial Officer' was to improve the Department's chances of winning a petition for reconsideration."

B.

Utica and Fenster have presented a number of arguments for reversal, two of which require our consideration. In the first place, they contend that the actions of USDA violated the Administrative Procedure Act, particularly 5 U.S.C. § 554(d), which provides in relevant part:

> An employee or agent engaged in the performance of investigative or prosecuting functions for an agency in a case may not, in that or a factually related case, participate or advise in the decision, recommended decision, or agency review pursuant to section 557 of this title, except as witness or counsel in public proceedings.

The plaintiffs admit that Franke performed no investigative or prosecuting functions in the Utica case. They argue, however, that the selection of Franke and Davis by officials who were involved in the prosecution of the case violated the prohibition against prosecutors participating or advising in the decision of the second Judicial Officer. The Secretary counters that there was no violation of § 554(d) since neither Franke nor Davis had prior contact with the Utica case and no prosecutor or investigator participated as a judge.

The second basis for reversal urged by the plaintiffs is that the procedures followed by USDA in this case violated the due process guarantee of the Fifth Amendment. They assert that fundamental fairness was sacrificed to gain a desired decision from a handpicked judge and that all appearance of fairness was "shattered." The plaintiffs point out that Campbell was a career employee who was protected under the merit system and thus immune to departmental pressures (though he had no tenure in the position of Judicial Officer), whereas Franke, a political appointee, had no job protection and could be fired at will. In addition, they contend, the appointment of Davis, a subordinate of Kelly, guaranteed that the group who chose the "option" of revocation and redelegation would have strong influence over the decision on reconsideration.

The Secretary responds that there is a presumption of honesty and integrity on the part of responsible officers and that the plaintiffs produced no evidence of any improprieties by Franke or Davis. He argues that the supervision of agency adjudicators by prosecutorial officers has been upheld and that criminal cases involving blending of prosecutorial and judicial functions are not controlling in administrative settings.

III.

A.

Neither the court nor the parties have found a case with facts similar to those established by this record. This may be because very few federal agencies and departments have a position like the USDA Judicial Officer. He acts as delegee of the Secretary who appears to have total discretion in selecting and appointing the person to fill the position. While admitting that one of the reasons for removing Campbell and appointing Franke was to improve the chances of USDA on reconsideration, the Secretary asserts that the primary reason was that Campbell so "grossly misinterpreted" this court's decision ordering a remand that he was incapable of exercising an objective review. Reduced to its essence this is a claim that the Secretary's delegation can be withdrawn before reconsideration any time he disagrees with the Judicial Officer's conclusions. Yet discovery in this case disclosed that Judicial Officers had made hundreds of decisions since 1940, and none had ever had his delegation revoked on this ground. If the Judicial Officer is to have stature as an independent decision-maker, this argument of the Secretary cannot be accepted.

B.

The actions of USDA in this case do not appear to have violated APA § 554(d). The clear purpose of this section is to separate the investigative and prosecutorial functions from the adjudicative function. Wong Yang Sung v. McGrath, 339 U.S. 33, 41, 70 S.Ct. 445, 450, 94 L.Ed. 616, modified, 339 U.S. 908, 70 S.Ct. 564, 94 L.Ed. 1336 (1950). We do not accept the Secretary's position that § 554(d) is to be read so narrowly that it applies only to cases where the same person acts as prosecutor or investigator and judge. However, so far as this record shows neither Franke nor Davis had any prior contact with the Utica case, and there was no showing that anyone in USDA actually influenced the decision on reconsideration. Nor was there any showing that either Franke or Davis was acquainted with ex parte information about the case. By regulation USDA has specifically prohibited ex parte communications between investigators or prosecutors and the Judicial Officer:

> (a) At no stage of the proceeding between its institution and the issuance of the final decision shall the Judge or Judicial Officer discuss ex parte the merits of the proceeding with any person who is connected with the proceeding in an advocative or in an investigative capacity, or with any representative of such person: Provided, That procedural matters shall not be included within this limitation; and Provided further, That the Judge or Judicial Officer may discuss the merits of the case with such a person if all parties to the proceeding, or their attorneys have been given notice and an opportunity to participate. A memorandum of any such discussion shall be included in the record.

In Grolier Inc. v. Federal Trade Commission, 615 F.2d 1215, 1220 (9th Cir. 1980), the court stated the intention of Congress in adopting § 554(d) as follows:

> We conclude that by forbidding adjudication by persons "engaged in the performance of investigative or prosecuting functions," Congress intended to preclude from decisionmaking in a particular case not only individuals with the title of "investigator" or "prosecutor," but all persons who had, in that or a factually related case, been involved with ex parte information, or who had developed, by prior involvement with the case, a "will to win."

[1, 2] The focus under § 554(d) is on the past involvement of the adjudicator. Under the peculiar facts of this case we include both Franke and Davis within the term "adjudicator" or "judge" because of Franke's obvious reliance on Davis in all matters legal. In order for § 554(d) to cause disqualification where the adjudicator was not actually a prosecutor or investigator in the case or a factually related one, the person challenging his right to adjudicate has the burden of showing that some past involvement has acquainted him with ex parte information or engendered in him an unjudgelike "will to win." Id. at 1221. Though the "redelegation" of Franke as Judicial Officer was invalid for other reasons, the plaintiffs did not make this showing and we do not believe the move violated the Administrative Procedure Act.

IV.

A.

The Secretary does not quarrel with the indisputable fact that Anglo-American law does not permit anyone to be the judge of his own case. As least since Lord Coke's decision in Dr. Bonham's Case, 8 Rep. 114a (C.P.1610), this has been the rule. The Secretary also recognizes that Tumey v. Ohio, 273 U.S. 510, 47 S.Ct. 437, 71 L.Ed. 749 (1927), established the principle that it violates due process for a judge to have a direct and substantial interest in the outcome of a case before him. However, the Secretary argues that these principles were not involved in the removal of Campbell and the appointment of Franke, since Franke was not a party and was not shown to have any interest in the outcome of the case.

The Secretary places principal reliance on Marcello v. Bonds, 349 U.S. 302, 75 S.Ct. 757, 99 L.Ed. 1107 (1955), in arguing that the due process rights of Fenster and Utica were not violated in the present case. Marcello involved proceedings under § 242(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952, 8 U.S.C. § 1252(b). The petitioner charged that the proceedings violated due process because they failed to provide for a fair and impartial hearing. The objection was that the special inquiry officer who conducted the deportation proceedings was subject to the supervision and control of officials in the Immigration Service charged with investigative and prosecuting functions. Rejecting this claim, the Court stated:

> The contention is without substance when considered against the long-standing practice in deportation proceedings, judicially approved in numerous decisions in the federal courts, and against the special considerations applicable to deportation which the Congress may take into account in exercising its particularly broad discretion in immigration matters.

Id. at 311, 75 S.Ct. at 762. Marcello appears to be limited to immigration cases.

The Supreme Court affirmed in Withrow v. Larkin, 421 U.S. 35, 46, 95 S.Ct. 1456, 1464, 43 L.Ed.2d 712 (1975), that the due process requirement of a fair trial in a fair tribunal "applies to administrative agencies which adjudicate as well as to courts." (Citation omitted). Nevertheless, the Court distinguished cases where the probability of actual bias is "too high to be constitutionally tolerable" from normal administrative adjudication:

> The contention that the combination of investigative and adjudicative functions necessarily creates an unconstitutional risk of bias in administrative adjudication has a much more difficult burden of persuasion to carry. It must overcome a presumption of honesty and integrity in those serving as adjudicators; and it must convince that, under a realistic appraisal of psychological tendencies and human weakness, conferring investigative and adjudicative powers on the same individuals poses such a risk of actual bias or prejudgment that the practice must be forbidden if the guarantee of due process is to be adequately implemented.

Id. at 47, 95 S.Ct. at 1464.

[3] There can be no doubt that the requirement of separation of functions is relaxed in administrative adjudication. However, the requirement of a fair trial before a fair tribunal has not been eliminated. Withrow v. Larkin. This concept requires the appearance of fairness and the absence of a probability of outside influences on the adjudicator; it does not require proof of actual partiality.

In Amos Treat & Co. v. Securities and Exchange Commission, 306 F.2d 260 (D.C. Cir.1962), the court considered a challenge to a former division director of the SEC participating after his appointment as a commissioner in a case in which he had prior involvement. The dual role of the commissioner was challenged both under the APA and on due process grounds. The decision was based on due process considerations. Id. at 267. In attempting to determine the application of due process to administrative adjudications the court quoted Hannah v. Larche, 363 U.S. 420, 442, 80 S.Ct. 1502, 1514, 4 L.Ed.2d 1307 (1960):

> "Its exact boundaries are undefinable, and its content varies according to specific factual contexts. Thus, when governmental agencies adjudicate or make binding determinations which directly affect the legal rights of individuals, it is imperative that those agencies use the procedures which have traditionally been associated with the judicial process."

306 F.2d at 263 (footnote omitted). The court concluded that quasi-judicial proceedings must entail, "at the very least," a fair trial, quoting In re Murchison, 349 U.S. 133, 136, 75 S.Ct. 623, 625, 99 L.Ed. 942 (1955):

> "A fair trial in a fair tribunal is a basic requirement of due process. Fairness of course requires an absence of actual bias in the trial of cases. But our system of law has always endeavored to prevent even the probability of unfairness."

306 F.2d at 263. Hannah was a civil rights case and Murchison was a criminal case, yet the court turned to them for guidance in determining what process is due in administrative proceedings of a judicial or quasi-judicial nature.

[4] We believe this is a case where the plaintiffs have shown the risk of unfairness to be "intolerbly high." Every disappointed litigant would doubtless like to replace a judge who in the regular course of his or her duties has decided a case against the litigant and present a motion for a new trial or for reconsideration to a different judge of his own choosing. All notions of judicial impartiality would be abandoned if such a procedure were permitted.

There is no guarantee of fairness when the one who appoints a judge has the power to remove the judge before the end of proceedings for rendering a decision which displeases the appointer. Yet that is exactly what occurred in this case. Campbell was appointed Judicial Officer long before the Utica case arose, and considered the case in the normal course of his duties. When Campbell rendered a decision in the case with which USDA "violently disagreed," officials of the department unceremoniously removed him and presented a petition for reconsideration to their hand-picked replacement.

It is of no consequence for due process purposes that Fenster and Utica were unable to prove actual bias on the part of Franke or Davis. The officials who made the revocation and redelegation decision chose a non-career employee with no background in law or adjudication to replace Campbell. They assigned a legal advisor to the new Judicial Officer who worked under an official who was directly involved in prosecution of the Utica case. Such manipulation of a judicial, or quasi-judicial, system cannot be permitted. The due process clause guarantees as much. As the court stated in D.C. Federation of Civic Ass'ns v. Volpe, 459 F.2d 1231, 1246–47 (D.C.Cir.1971), cert. denied, 405 U.S. 1030, 92 S.Ct. 1290, 31 L.Ed.2d 489 (1972):

> With regard to judicial decisionmaking, whether by court or agency, the appearance of bias or pressure may be no less objectionable than the reality.

V.

Nothing in this opinion should be perceived as minimizing the seriousness of Fenster's criminal activities. Bribing an inspector does strike at the heart of the meat inspection program and cannot be tolerated. As we wrote in our earlier unpublished opinion in this case:

> The more closely the conduct strikes to the policies of the Federal Meat Inspection Act, the more likely it alone will support a determination of unfitness regardless of the mitigating facts present. See Wyszynski Provision, Co., Inc. v. Sec. of Agriculture, 538 F.Supp. 361, 364 (E.D.Pa.1982).

Judicial Officer Campbell properly concerned himself with the nature of Fenster's criminal activities and the possible harm to the public which could flow from them. It is not certain that Campbell properly construed this court's remand order in considering mitigating circumstances. However, that is not the issue presently before us. Whether the Judicial Officer was correct or incorrect in his application of the law, the Secretary's efforts to change the result by the methods described in this opinion cannot be permitted to succeed.

The judgment of the district court is reversed, and the case is remanded with directions to remand it to the Secretary for re-entry of Judicial Officer Campbell's order dismissing the complaint against Utica and Fenster.

The first such report is due July 1, 1986.

12. Respondent does not knowingly hire or permit the employment of any person who has been convicted of any violations of the FMIA, the PPIA, similar State and local food safety laws or of any crime of moral turpitude.

13. Respondent makes a request to the establishment's inspector that any of its formulations and labels containing additives other than water and texturized vegetable protein be rescinded.

The special conditions set forth in paragraphs 1 through 13 shall be applicable for a period of five years. During the five-year period, the Secretary shall have the right to summarily withdraw inspection service upon a finding by appropriate national headquarters staff of a violation of any special condition set forth in paragraphs 1 through 12. Any summary withdrawal of inspection service shall be subject to respondent's right to request an expedited hearing on the violations alleged.

This order shall not be construed as precluding the Department from taking other appropriate action, including criminal referral, for violations of the FMIA.

CONCLUSIONS

Inasmuch as the parties have agreed to the provisions set forth in the following Consent Decision in disposition of this proceeding, such Order will be issued.

ORDER

Inspection service under Title I of the FMIA is, for a period of five (5) years, withdrawn from and denied to respondent, its officers, directors, partners, affiliates, successors, and assigns, directly or through any corporate device. This five year period of withdrawal and denial will be held in abeyance, except for a period from February 23, 1985, through February 23, 1986, and will not become effective:

2. For as long as, within four years from February 23, 1986, respondent:

(a) Does not knowingly employ or add any individual who has been convicted, in any federal or state court of any felony, or of more than one violation of any law, other than a felony, based upon the acquiring, handling, or distributing of unwholesome, mislabeled or deceptively packaged food, or fraud in connection with transactions in food; and

A copy of this report will be provided to the establishment's USDA Inspector In Charge. These semi-annual reports will be due on July 1 and December 1 of each year of probation.

II

The term violate, as used in paragraph I(1) herein, means a violation found upon conviction (or upon affirmation of conviction, if appealed), or upon a final decision in a formal adjudicatory proceeding before the Secretary (or upon affirmation of the Secretary's decision, if appealed), and if it is found that there is any such violation of any term of this Order, the suspension of the withdrawal and denial of inspection service under Title I of the FMIA shall be terminated and denial will become effective immediately. This shall not preclude the referral of any such violation to the Department of Justice for possible criminal or civil proceedings.

III

The special conditions set forth in paragraphs 2 through 8 shall be applicable for a period of (4) four years. During this (4) four-year period, from February 23, 1986, to February 23, 1990, the Secretary shall have the right to summarily withdraw inspection service upon a finding by appropriate national headquarters staff of a violation of any special condition set forth in paragraphs 2 through 8. Decision by William J. Weber, Administrative Law Judge.

STIPULATION AND CONSENT DECISION AND ORDER

This is a proceeding under the Federal Meat Inspection Act (FMIA), as amended (21 U.S.C. §§ 601 et seq.), the Poultry Products Inspection Act (PPIA), as amended (21 U.S.C. §§ 451 et seq.), and the applicable Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.130 et seq. and 9 CFR § 335.1 et seq.), to withhold and deny federal meat inspection service to Tri State Meats & Provisions, Inc. This proceeding was commenced by a complaint filed on August 30, 1985, by the Administrator of the Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS), United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), who is responsible for the administration of federal meat and poultry inspection services. The parties have agreed that this proceeding should be terminated by the entry of the Consent Decision set forth below and have agreed to the following stipulations:

1. For the purposes of this stipulation and the provisions of this Consent Decision only, Tri State Meats & Provisions, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent, admits all of the jurisdictional allegations of the complaint, and waives:

(a) Any further procedural steps;

(b) Any requirement that the final decision in this proceeding contain findings and conclusions with respect to all material issues of fact, law or discretion, as well as the reasons or bases thereof; and

(c) All rights to seek judicial review or to otherwise challenge or contest the validity of this decision.

2. This Stipulation and Consent Decision is for settlement purposes in this proceeding only and does not otherwise constitute an admission or denial by the respondent that it violated the regulations or statutes involved.

3. The respondent waives any action against the USDA under the Equal Access to Justice Act of 1980 (5 U.S.C. § 504 et seq.) for fees and other expenses incurred by the respondent in connection with this proceeding.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Respondent is an applicant seeking to operate a meat processing establishment located at 1376 Market Street, Linwood, Pennsylvania 19061.

2. On or about March 5, 1985, respondent applied for Federal meat and poultry products inspection services under Title I of the FMIA and under the PPIA, at the above-named establishment. The application listed Mark S. Perry as the President, Secretary and Treasurer of respondent.

3. Mark S. Perry is now, and at all times material herein was, listed as the only individual responsibly connected with the respondent's proposed operation.

4. Mark S. Perry formerly was the General Manager of the Summit Beef Company (hereinafter Summit), another meat processing establishment, which was located at 1376-1378 Market Street, Linwood, Pennsylvania.

5. On December 19, 1984, Administrative Law Judge Victor Palmer issued an Order indefinitely withdrawing inspection service under Title I of the FMIA from Summit. This Order furthermore denied and withheld such inspection service from Summit's officers, directors, successors and assigns, directly or through any corporate or other device, for an indefinite period of time.

CONCLUSIONS

Inasmuch as the parties have agreed to the provisions set forth in the following Consent Decision in disposition of this proceeding, such Order will be issued.

ORDER

Inspection services under Title I of the FMIA and under the PPIA are withheld from and denied to respondent, its officers, directors, partners, affiliates, successors, and assigns, directly or through any corporate device, for a period of five years.

HOWEVER, said withholding and denial shall be suspended and held in abeyance and inspection services shall be provided to respondent so long as, in addition to all other requirements of inspection, the conditions set forth in paragraphs 1 through 13 below, are met. During this five-year period, the Secretary shall have the right to summarily withdraw inspection service upon a finding by appropriate national headquarters staff of a violation of any special condition set forth in paragraphs 1 through 13. The summary withdrawal of inspection service shall be effective pending final determination of a violation in accordance with the applicable Rules of Practice. Such summary withdrawal shall have no relevance with respect to the final determination in the proceeding and will not preclude the respondent from requesting an expedited hearing.

1. Vincent L. Perry shall not associate with respondent, its successors, or assigns, directly or through any corporate or other device, as a partner, officer, director, shareholder, or employee; nor have access to respondent's premises; nor provide any direction or advice to or exercise any control over respondent, its successors or assigns, directly or through any corporate or other device; and

3. Respondent immediately terminates its connection with any such individual when that individual's conviction becomes known; and

4. Respondent shall not violate any sections of the FMIA or the PPIA, or any regulations issued thereunder; and

5. Respondent shall identify any equipment used or located at its premises and which has been purchased or acquired after the effective date of this Order as belonging to Mark S. Perry; and

6. Respondent shall designate a full-time person who has overall, daily responsibility and control of respondent's operations (i.e., plant manager or plant superintendent) to conduct daily reviews of all areas of the official establishment for sanitation. In addition, this Designee shall review daily products for condition, processing procedures, formulation, and labeling of finished products. All incoming meat and meat food products will be checked for condition upon arrival. Any product of questionable condition will be held for inspection by the assigned inspector before use. All daily reviews shall be recorded in a hardbound Log Book, including but not limited to, the date, time, name of Designee conducting the review, the findings, suggestions and/or corrective action taken, and initialed by the Designee. Entries pertaining to incoming meat will include source, condition, and time received. The Log Book shall be available for review by USDA personnel; and

7. Respondent's Designee shall immediately notify the USDA on-site inspector of any operational or sanitation deficiencies that would or have caused work stoppage and corrective actions taken during the daily reviews; and

8. Respondent shall not prepare, handle or store custom exempt articles or game, whether for customers, employees, the owner, friends or relatives; and

9. Respondent shall not accept or receive any returned product due to its condition or the condition of the carton or container without prior notice to, and approval by, the on-site USDA inspector; and

All following semiannual written reports shall be submitted to the Area Supervisor on June 1 and December 1 of each calendar year that this Consent Decision and Order is effective; and

DECISION AND ORDER UPON ADMISSION OF FACTS BY REASON OF DEFAULT

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, as amended and supplemented (7 U.S.C. § 181 et seq.), herein referred to as the Act, instituted by a complaint filed by the Administrator, Packers and Stockyards Administration, United States Department of Agriculture, charging that the respondent wilfully violated the Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder (9 CFR § 201.1 et seq.).

Copies of the complaint and Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.130 et seq.) governing proceedings under the Act were served on the respondent by certified mail. Respondent was informed in a letter of service that an answer should be filed pursuant to the Rules of Practice and that failure to answer would constitute an admission of all the material allegations contained in the complaint.

Respondent has failed to file an answer within the time prescribed in the Rules of Practice, and the material facts alleged in the complaint, which are admitted by respondent's failure to file an answer, are adopted and set forth herein as findings of fact.

This decision and order, therefore, is issued pursuant to section 1.139 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.139).

(1) Engaged in the business of a dealer buying and selling livestock in commerce for his own account; and

(2) Registered with the Secretary of Agriculture as a dealer to buy and sell livestock in commerce for his own account.

The Packers and Stockyards Administration notified respondent on May 24, 1985, that the $22,000.00 surety bond he maintained to secure the performance of his livestock obligations under the Act was being terminated effective June 14, 1985, and that it was necessary to file a bond or bond equivalent in the amount of $30,000.00 before continuing in dealer operations. Respondent was further notified that if he continued his livestock operations without adequate bond coverage or its equivalent, he would be in violation of section 312(a) of the Act and sections 201.29 and 201.30 of the regulations. Notwithstanding such notice, respondent has continued to engage in the business of a dealer buying and selling livestock in commerce for his own account, without maintaining bond coverage or its equivalent, as required by the Act and the regulations.

CONCLUSIONS

By reason of the facts found in Finding of Fact 2 herein, respondent has wilfully violated section 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 213(a)), and sections 201.29 and 201.30 of the regulations (9 CFR §§ 201.29, 201.30).

ORDER

Respondent Richard D. Baumert, his agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, shall cease and desist from engaging in business in any capacity for which bonding is required under the Packers and Stockyards Act, as amended and supplemented, and the regulations, without filing and maintaining a reasonable bond or its equivalent, as required by the Act and the regulations.

Copies hereof shall be served on the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, as amended and supplemented (7 U.S.C. § 181 et seq.), hereafter referred to as the Act, instituted by a complaint filed on August 9, 1983, by the Administrator, Packers and Stockyards Administration, United States Department of Agriculture.

The complaint charged (1) that the respondents entered into a conspiracy which allowed respondents Wells and Schober to bill and collect from their principal on the basis of inflated weights and prices in violation of sections 312(a) and 401 of the Act (7 U.S.C.

§§ 213(a), 221), and section 201.44 of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.44); (2) that respondent Schober consigned livestock to auction markets and then repurchased it for the accounts of his principals without disclosing his prior ownership of the livestock in violation of section 312(a) of the Act, and Section 201.44 of the regulations; and (3) that respondent Schober failed to properly keep his business records in conformity with section 401 of the Act.

The respondents filed answers in which they admitted the jurisdictional allegations of the complaint and denied the remaining allegations. On April 10, 1984, a consent decision was entered with respect to respondent Northern New York Farmers' Marketing Cooperative, Inc. With respect to the remaining respondents, an oral hearing was held in Syracuse, New York on July 9 and 10, 1985. Respondents Schober and Wells were represented by David L. Welch, Esq. of Potsdam, New York. Complainant was represented by Barbara S. Harris of the Office of the General Counsel, United States Department of Agriculture. At the start of the hearing, the complaint was amended to delete and revise certain portions thereof. Thereafter at the close of the hearing, the time was fixed for the filing of briefs.

Pages 8 and 9 of respondents' brief reads in part:

> Respondents are alleged to have engaged in unfair, deceptive practices. With the exception of falsely inflating the price of beef, respondents admit the practices involved, but maintain the propriety of their actions.
>
> It is maintained that the activities in question may be improper, but only ex post facto, and that the matter has improperly or unwisely been continued beyond the imposition of a cease and desist order.
>
> Even if it is found that respondents intentionally violated the Act, the appropriate remedy at this time is an order to cease and desist.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. (a) Respondent Horst Schober, herein referred to as Schober, is an individual whose business mailing address is R.R. 2, Potsdam, New York 13676.

(b) Respondent Schober at all times material herein was:

(1) Engaged in the business of buying livestock in commerce on a commission basis, and buying and selling livestock in commerce for his own account; and

(2) Registered with the Secretary of Agriculture as a dealer to buy and sell livestock in commerce.

2. (a) Respondent Nancy Wells, herein referred to as Wells, is an individual whose mailing address is North R.D. 1, North Lawrence, New York 12967.

3. At all times material herein, respondent Wells was employed by Schober to buy and sell livestock on his behalf and for his account.

4. Respondent Wells, at all times material herein, was engaged in the business of buying and selling livestock in commerce as the employee or agent of the vendor or purchaser.

5. Respondent Wells, at all times material herein, was a dealer within the meaning of that term as defined in the Act and subject to the provisions of the Act.

Increased Weights and Prices of Livestock Purchased for Principal

6. Respondents Schober and Wells regularly purchased calves at various auction markets on order for Ezra H. Good, Inc., of Denver, Pennsylvania.

7. The calves purchased by Schober and Wells on order for Ezra H. Good, Inc., were used to fill the Good order with Strauss Veal, Inc. of North Manchester, Indiana.

8. Schober's agreement with Ezra H. Good, Inc., provided that Schober purchase calves at auction markets with his own funds, truck them to a central collection point and furnish to Strauss Veal a purchase invoice showing the actual purchase weights and prices.

9. Schober did not provide Good with buyer's invoices reflecting his purchases. However, Schober was required to report the details of his purchases to Good, including the number of head purchased, the total weight of the calves and the total cost of the calves at each sale. Based upon this report, Good reimbursed Schober his reported purchase prices plus trucking, and paid him a buying commission for his services.

10. Schober's agreement with Ezra H. Good, Inc., provided that all the calves purchased for the company by Schober be purchased through the auction sale and that he turn over the calves at their original purchase weights and prices. It was not acceptable under their agreement for Schober to buy calves at one auction market, take them to a second auction market, consign them and then repurchase the calves to fill the Good order.

11. Mr. Amos Good of Ezra H. Good, Inc., testified that pursuant to an oral agreement between the parties, Schober purchased baby bob calves for Good's firm on a regular basis during 1981 and 1982 and was paid a commission for his services. Good would instruct Schober as to the number of calves needed on a given day, the weight range required and the ceiling price to be paid. It was Good's expectation that Schober would buy the best quality calves at the lowest possible price. If Schober could buy calves at less than the ceiling price quoted, he was expected to turn them over to Good at the lower price. As noted in finding 10, it was not acceptable for Schober to buy calves at one market, take them to a second market for consignment and then repurchase them to fill his order with Good. In fact, as Mr. Good testified, if Schober were discovered engaging in this practice, his services would have been terminated.

12. Complainant's exhibits for the period June 14, 1982 through September 1982, substantiate that Wells and Schober purchased calves at several auction markets such as Bast Livestock Exchange and Empire Livestock Marketing Cooperative and received invoices from the markets documenting the actual purchase weights and prices of the calves. Accounts of sale issued to Wells and buyer's invoices issued to Schober by the Northern New York market purport to show that the calves, traced by ear tag numbers, were consigned on the same day to the Northern New York Farmers' Marketing Cooperative auction where they were repurchased by Schober for Good at weights and prices which were greater than Schober's original purchase weights and prices. When taken at face value, the Northern New York records appear to document normal consignment and sales transactions by respondents. However, as Mr. Marano and Mr. Johnson of the Packers & Stockyards Administration testified, the records establish that the animals originally purchased by respondents at Bast's or Empire were never consigned by respondents to the Northern New York market, did not pass through the auction ring, and were never purchased by Schober on a competitive basis.

Instead, respondents Wells and Schober, in consultation, arbitrarily determined prices and weights for the calves purchased for Good and then arranged for the necessary paperwork to be executed to document the purported consignment to the market and the purported purchase through the auction sale by Schober. As testified to by Mrs. Meister, the former officer manager at the Northern New York Market, the mechanics of the arrangement were easy to effect. The market's office personnel were instructed by the respondents to add or "mix in" the calves to Schober's buyer's invoices at the new and falsely increased weights and prices. Schober then sent the false buyer's invoices with the arbitrarily increased prices and weights with the calves to Strauss Veal. He also reported these false prices and weights to Amos Good who reimbursed Schober for his purchases and collected from Strauss Veal on the basis of the increased weights and prices shown on the false invoices.

13. On or about the dates and in the transactions specified below, Wells, under the direction of Schober and acting as his employee and agent, purchased calves at Bast's Livestock Exchange Market. On the same day, Wells transported the calves to the Northern New York Farmers' Marketing Cooperative stockyard where, the respondents caused to be prepared fraudulent Northern New York accounts of sale and buyer invoices which purported to show that the calves were consigned to Northern New York for sale on a commission basis by Wells and were purchased by Schober through Northern New York's auction ring on a competitive basis. In fact, however, the calves were not consigned to Northern New York for sale, did not pass through Northern New York's auction ring, and were not repurchased by Schober on a competitive basis.

14. On or about June 14, 1982, Schober purchased 3 calves at the Empire Livestock Marketing Cooperative, Adams, New York. On the same day, Schober transported the calves to the Northern New York stockyard, where respondents "invoiced" the calves through Northern New York records to Strauss Veal at weights and prices which were wrongfully increased over Schober's actual purchase weights and prices at the Empire Livestock Marketing Cooperative.

For the purpose of concealing the true nature of the transaction, the respondents caused to be prepared a fraudulent Northern New York account of sale and a buyer's invoice which purported to show that Schober consigned the three calves to Northern New York for sale on a commission basis through its auction ring, and repurchased them at the increased weights and prices. In fact, however, the calves were not consigned for sale, did not pass through Northern New York's auction ring, and were not repurchased by Schober on a competitive basis.

A copy of the fraudulent buyer's invoice was submitted to Strauss Veal by Schober. Copies of the fraudulent documents were retained in respondents' records. Schober reported the details of the purported purchase at Northern New York to Good, including the wrongfully increased weights and prices, and collected payment on the basis thereof.

15. On or about July 8, 1982, Schober purchased 3 calves at the Empire Livestock Marketing Cooperative, Adams, New York. On the same day, Schober transported the calves to the Northern New York stockyard, where the respondents "invoiced" the calves through Northern New York's records to Strauss Veal at weights and prices which were wrongfully increased over Schober's actual purchase weights and prices at the Empire Livestock Marketing Cooperative.

For the purpose of concealing the true nature of the transaction, the respondents caused to be prepared a fraudulent Northern New York account of sale and a buyer's invoice which purported to show that Wells consigned the three calves to Northern New York for sale on a commission basis through its auction ring, and that Schober purchased them at the increased weights and prices. In fact, however, the calves were not consigned for sale, did not pass through Northern New York's auction ring, and were not repurchased by Schober on a competitive basis.

A copy of the fraudulent buyer's invoice was submitted to Strauss Veal by Schober. Copies of the fraudulent documents were retained in respondents' records. Schober reported the details of the purported purchase at Northern New York to Good, including the wrongfully increased weights and prices, and collected payment on the basis thereof.

Purchase of Own Livestock Without Disclosure

16. During 1981 and 1982, respondent Schober purchased livestock for Ezra H. Good, Inc. and Whitestown Packing Co. The representatives of these firms testified that Schober received a buying commission for his services and was expected to purchase all livestock for their accounts at the lowest prices available.

Frank Gerace, president of Whitestown Packing Company, testified that his firm had a policy which discouraged buyers from using their own livestock to fill orders but if, under unusual circumstances, this occurred, the buyer was required to disclose his prior ownership of the livestock to the firm. Mr. Gerace testified that Schober was aware of this company policy.

With respect to the Ezra H. Good firm, as set forth in findings 10 and 11, Amos Good's agreement with Schober did not permit Schober to buy livestock at one market, consign it to a second market, and then repurchase the livestock for Good.

17. On or about the dates and in the transactions specified below, Schober consigned his own livestock to auction markets and then repurchased the livestock from consignments for the accounts of his principals without disclosing to his principals his prior ownership of the livestock.

Date 1982	Market Livestock Consigned to by Schober	No. of own Head Purchased for Principal	Principal

Accounts and Records

18. Respondent Schober, in connection with his business operations under the Act, failed to keep accounts, records and memoranda which fully and correctly disclosed all transactions involved in his business as a market agency and dealer under the Act in that respondent failed to keep and maintain (a) a general ledger of accounts showing assets, liabilities, income, expenses and net worth; (b) a dealer purchase and sales journal; and (c) a cash receipts and disbursements journal.

CONCLUSIONS

All contentions of the parties have been considered in the light of the record evidence. By reason of the aforesaid findings of fact, it is concluded that respondents have violated Sections 312(a) and 401 of the Act (7 U.S.C. 213(a), 221) and Section 201.44 of the regulation (9 CFR 201.44). The order proposed by complainant is appropriate in view of the record evidence and is issued herewith.

Increased Weights and Prices

As set forth in findings of fact 6 through 15, the evidence introduced at the oral hearing establishes that during the period alleged in the complaint, respondents knowingly and falsely increased the weights and prices of calves purchased on order for Ezra H. Good, Inc., in violation of the Act and applicable regulations.

Falsely increasing prices and/or weights on livestock purchased on commission for a principal has consistently been found to be in violation of section 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 213(a) and section 201.44 of the regulations. In re Hageman, 42 A.D. 531, 541 (1983); In re Hatcher, 41 A.D. 662, 665–66 (1982); In re Sidney Collier, 38 A.D. 957 (1979); In re Burrus, 36 A.D. 1668, 1687 (1977), aff'd per curiam, 575 F.2d 1258 (CA 8, 1978); In re Fairbank, 27 A.D. 1371, 1378–82 (1968), aff'd, 429 F.2d 264 (CA 9, 1970), cert denied, 400 U.S. 943 (1970).

Similarly, issuing invoices showing such arbitrarily increased weights is a violation of section 401 of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 221). In re Fairbank, supra at 1379–1382; In re George Saylor, Jr., 41 A.D. 2187; In re Hageman, supra at 541.

In light of the above, the documentary evidence and testimony leave no doubt that respondents falsely and unlawfully increased the weights and prices to their principal in violation of the Act and regulations.

Disclosure of Own Livestock

As set forth in findings 16 and 17, the record evidence establishes that respondent Schober purchased his own livestock to fill orders for his principals without disclosing his prior ownership in the livestock in violation of the Act and regulations.

In engaging in such an unfair and deceptive practice, Schober breached his fiduciary obligations to his principals. Buying one's own livestock through an auction to fill orders for a principal without full disclosure to the principal violates section 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 213(a)) and section 201.44 of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.44) In re Harry Vealey, 39 A.D. 8, 13 (1979); In re Livestock Marketing Development Co., 33 A.D. 784, 807-808 (1974).

Accounts and Records

The testimony of Mr. Marano, the investigator who reviewed the records, disclosed that at the time of the investigation, respondent Schober failed to keep accounts, records and memoranda which fully and correctly disclosed all transactions involved in his business. In particular, respondent failed to keep and maintain (a) a general ledger of accounts showing assets, liabilities, income, expenses and net worth; (b) a dealer purchase and sales journal; and (c) a cash receipts and disbursements journal.

The recordkeeping requirements of the Act are found in section 401 (7 U.S.C. 401). That section states in relevant part:

> Every . . . stockyard owner, market agency, and dealer shall keep such accounts, records, and memoranda as fully and correctly disclose all transactions involved in his business, including the true ownership of such business by stockholding or otherwise. Whenever the Secretary finds that the accounts, records and memoranda of any such person do not fully and correctly disclose all transactions involved in his business, the Secretary may prescribe the form in which such accounts, records and memoranda shall be kept . . .

While the above-referenced journals are not listed by name in section 401, maintaining such separate accounting is necessary to facilitate compliance with the other sections of the Act and with the regulations. For example, a general ledger of accounts is necessary to facilitate the determination of Schober's solvency under the Act, a requirement of all registrants. Similarly, the cash receipts and disbursements journal is necessary to carry out the requirements of section 201.44 of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.44, Accounting for Purchases).

Schober's failure to keep the journals and ledgers listed in the complaint prevents full disclosure of his business activities subject to the Act. Accordingly, respondent Schober is ordered, pursuant to section 401 of the Act, to maintain the specified records.

Willfulness of the Violation

1. Respondents argue (brief pp 2 and 3) that the practices they engaged in were proper and, therefore, not proscribed by the Act and regulations as alleged. In support of this view, they assert that the cited sections of the statute and regulations "are too vague to prohibit the conduct of respondent."

Respondents' argument is without merit. As the Judicial Officer noted in In re William E. Hatcher, 41 A.D. 662, 668:

> Respondent argues on appeal that the Act and regulations are not specific enough to be understood by non-lawyers. But that argument is frivolous as applied to the violations in this case. It does not take a lawyer to know that it is a violation of the Act and regulations for an agent to falsely increase prices and weights on livestock purchased on commission and to use counterfeit invoices to conceal the real market from which the livestock was purchased.

Although the terms "unfair", "unjustly discriminatory" and "deceptive" used in section 312(a) of the Act are not defined in the statute, it has been held that the terms are not so vague or uncertain as to be an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority. Farmers' Livestock Commission Co. v. United States, 54 F.2d 375, 378 (E.D. Ill. 1931); O. V. Handy Brothers Co. v. Wallace, 16 F.Supp. 662, 664-66 (E.D. Pa. 1936). The meaning of the terms must be construed from the facts of each case within the purposes of the Packers and Stockyards Act. Capitol Packing Co. v. United States, 350 F.2d 67, 76 (CA 10, 1965).

2. Respondents urge that they were the victims of discriminatory enforcement of the Act by the complainant (brief pp. 3-5) because the investigation which resulted in the issuance of the complaint was, in their view, instituted by Whitestown Packing Company president, Frank Gerace.

Congress expressly authorized the Secretary to initiate formal enforcement proceedings to redress violations of section 312(a) of the Act upon the complaint of injured parties. (See § 312(b); 7 U.S.C. § 213(b)). Whether through the Agency's own initiative or as the result of a private complaint, when formal action is taken, it is the Secretary of Agriculture or his delegated agent who is the complaining party, not the private firm or firms allegedly injured by the respondent's actions. Moreover, because formal action is not initiated to compensate private parties for their financial losses, the amount of money involved is irrelevant to a determination of whether the Secretary of Agriculture will initiate an action.

The fact that the investigation of respondents' operations may have originally resulted from a complaint lodged by Frank Gerace of Whitestown Packing Company does not support respondents' argument of discriminatory enforcement. Respondents' claim that the resources of the government were used to enforce private grievances is also without merit.

3. The practices engaged in by respondents must be characterized as wilful as they were carefully planned and executed. Deciding that there was nothing wrong with making a few extra dollars profit on each calf billed to their principal, respondents knowingly and intentionally caused false accounts of sale and buyer's invoices to be fabricated to document their transactions. This evidences a calculated and carefully implemented intention to deceive and defraud.

With respect to Schober's failure to disclose his prior ownership of the livestock sold to his principals, the evidence makes it clear that Schober was aware of his obligations and deliberately failed to live up to them.

In view of the nature of the violations demonstrated in the record, the question of wilfulness requires little discussion. A violation is willful if the respondent intentionally does an act which is prohibited, irrespective of evil motive or reliance on erroneous advice, or if the respondent acts with careless disregard of the statutory requirements. Butz v. Glover Livestock Commission Co., 411 U.S. 182, 185, 187 (1973); Goodman v. Benson, 286 F.2d 896, 900 (CA 7 1961); In re Miller, 33 A.D. 53, 83-87, aff'd sub nom., Miller v. Butz, 498 F.2d 1088 (CA 5, 1974); In re Lufkin Livestock Exchange, Inc., 27 A.D. 596, 609 (1968). The term "willful" is also often used to denote a voluntary or knowing act as distinguished from one which is accidental.

SANCTION

Complainant requests that respondent Schober be (1) ordered to cease and desist from the practices discussed above, (2) ordered to comply with the recordkeeping requirements of the Act, (3) assessed a $5,000.00 civil penalty and (4) suspended as a registrant for a period of six months. With respect to respondent Wells, the complainant recommends that in addition to the entry of an appropriate cease and desist order, she be prohibited from operating subject to the Act for a period of six months.

Respondents argue (brief pp. 6-8) that the sanction sought by complainant in this case is too severe and request only the imposition of a cease and desist order. In support of their recommendation, respondents rely upon factors which they claim complainant failed to consider in seeking the $5,000 civil penalty against Mr. Schober, i.e., the gravity of the offense, the size of the business involved, and the effect of the penalty on the person's ability to continue in business.

The gravity of the offense need not include the matter of damages resulting from the offense, as respondents claim. Instead, the testimony of Reuben Johnson, at page 156, sums up the gravity of the circumstances here. Whether or not a profit is realized by the wrongful act, or the amount of the profit, is of little concern. Instead, ". . . in a case like this, it would be the fact that . . . there was false weights, false prices, and the fact that full and complete disclosure was not rendered to the principal by the agent." Such practices destroy the integrity of the regulatory program. See: In re George W. Saylor, Jr., P & S Docket No. 5753, September 20, 1985, slip opinion pp. 489-495.

Questions such as, the size of respondent Schober's business or the effect of the $5,000 civil penalty on his ability to continue in business, appear to be answered at pages 318-319, 392, 401 of the record.

Respondent's business with Good amounted to almost $2 million, or anywhere from $40,000 to $80,000 per week, whereby respondent Schober paid for the livestock from his own funds and thereafter was reimbursed by Good. Although his net income has dropped appreciably since 1982 when his cattle sales were in excess of a million dollars, Schober's farm income has not changed. In short, there is no showing in the record that respondent is unable to pay the $5,000 penalty, or that the payment of such penalty will affect Schober's ability to continue in business. In re Saylor, supra, slip opinion pp. 525-526.

Complainant correctly argues, citing prior rulings, that the sanction sought is justified by the facts of this case and is consistent with past sanction policy (reply brief, pp. 4-5). Aside from prior precedents, falsely increasing the weights and prices of livestock purchased on a commission basis and failing to disclose prior ownership of livestock demonstrate clearly that the respondents deliberately and wilfully placed their interests ahead of their principals.

Accordingly, it is concluded that respondents have wilfully violated the Act and regulations as alleged in the complaint, and the following order is issued.

ORDER

Respondents Schober and Wells, their agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, shall cease and desist from:

(1) Engaging in any act, practice or course of business for the purpose of obtaining money from the purchasers of livestock by false or deceptive pretenses;

(2) Entering into, continuing in, or cooperating in any agreement, arrangement, understanding, or course of business with any person for the purpose of aiding or assisting such person to obtain money from the purchasers of livestock by false or deceptive pretenses;

(3) Misrepresenting to their principals or to other purchasers of livestock from respondents (a) the manner in which such livestock was purchased or acquired by respondents, (b) the origin, or actual place of purchase of such livestock; (c) respondents' original purchase weights or original purchase prices for such livestock, or (d) the true nature of all charges made for their buying services;

(4) Preparing and issuing, or causing to be prepared and issued, in connection with the purchase or sale of livestock, accounts of sale, buyer invoices, billings, scale tickets or any other documents evidencing or prepared in connection with the purchase or sale of livestock, which show false, incorrect or misleading price or weight entries for such livestock, or which fail to disclose all facts necessary to show clearly and completely the true nature of each transaction;

(5) Collecting or aiding and assisting any person to collect from the purchasers of livestock on the basis of false, incorrect, or misleading invoices or accountings; and

(6) Using their own livestock to fill orders on a commission or agency basis without full disclosure of their interest in the livestock to their principal.

Respondent Schober shall keep and maintain accounts, records and memoranda which fully and correctly disclose the true nature of all transactions involved in his business subject to the Packers and Stockyards Act, including accounts, records and memoranda which show (1) the number of head of livestock bought and sold; (2) the date of purchase and sale; (3) the true and correct purchase and sale prices for such livestock; (4) a complete and accurate cash receipts and disbursements journal; (5) the origin or place of purchase of such livestock; and (6) a general ledger of accounts showing assets, liabilities, income, expenses and net worth.

In accordance with section 312(b) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 213(b)), respondent Schober is assessed a civil penalty in the amount of $5,000.00.

Respondent Schober is suspended as a registrant under the Act for a period of six months.

Respondent Wells is prohibited for a period of six months from engaging in business and operating subject to the Act as a market agency, buying and selling livestock in commerce on a commission basis or furnishing stockyard services, or as a dealer, buying or selling livestock in commerce either for her own account or as the employee or agent of the vendor or purchaser.

The provisions of this order shall become final and effective 35 days after service of this order on respondents, unless appealed within 30 days after service. (9 CFR §§ 1.145(a) and 1.142(c)).

Copies of this decision and order shall be served upon the parties.

In re: FARMERS & RANCHERS LIVESTOCK AUCTION, INC., BILLY GENE DAVIS, MARY LAVONE DAVIS, JERRY MILLSPAUGH, and RANDY DAVIS d/b/a CATTLEMAN'S COMMISSION COMPANY. P&S Docket No. 6483. Decided February 27, 1986.

Custodial account—Issuing insufficient funds checks—Failing to pay—Failing to remit net proceeds to consignors when due—Exchanging checks to create false balance in checking account—Purchasing livestock out of consignments for his own speculative account—Accounts and records—Suspended as a registrant.

Judicial Officer affirmed Chief Judge Campbell's decision suspending respondent Jerry Millspaugh as a registrant for 5 years and ordering him to cease and desist from various practices, including misusing a custodial account, issuing insufficient funds checks, failing to pay for livestock, failing to remit to consignors when due the net proceeds from the sale of consigned livestock, exchanging drafts or checks to create a false "float" or balance in a checking account, and purchasing livestock out of consignments for speculation, all of which were held to be unfair practices under the Act. Respondent's records failed to meet the requirements of the Act since purchases by respondent out of consignments were not identified as such to the consignors. Respondent Millspaugh is responsible for the corporate respondent's violations since he was one-third owner, vice president, and one of the three members of the board of directors of the corporate respondent. He is also responsible for violations of Cattleman's Commission Company, which was a continuation of the corporate business. Although respondent Millspaugh's registration is inactive, it may be suspended. Complainant need only prevail by a preponderance of the evidence. Respondents' failure to testify gives rise to an inference that their testimony would have been adverse. A check-kiting scheme is a serious and flagrant violation of the Act because of its pc ntial for harm. Severe sanction policy explained. That portion of the order providing that respondent Millspaugh may be employed as an auctioneer after 1 year of his 5-year suspension is authorized by the Act since it is a relaxation of the sanction that would normally be in effect. Under the regulations, a suspended registrant cannot be employed by persons subject to the Act. The P&S Act adopts by reference the rule making authority of the Federal Trade Commission. The employment regulation has the force and effect of law. Auction market operators could be required to register as market agencies or dealers.

Eric Paul, for complainant.
Keith Rutledge, Battesville, AR., for respondent Millspaugh only.

DECISION AND ORDER AS TO JERRY MILLSPAUGH

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, as amended and supplemented (7 U.S.C. § 181 et seq.).* An initial Decision and Order was filed on October 28, 1985, by Chief Administ ative Law Judge John A. Campbell (ALJ) suspending respondent Jerry Millspaugh as a registrant for 5 years and ordering him to cease and desist from various practices, including misusing a "Custodial Account for Shippers' Proceeds"; issuing insufficient funds checks; failing to pay for livestock; failing to remit to consignors when due the net proceeds from the sale of consigned livestock; exchanging drafts or checks to create a false "float" or balance in a checking account; and purchasing livestock out of consignment for speculation. The order also requires respondent Jerry Millspaugh to keep complete and accurate records.

On December 3, 1985, respondent Jerry Millspaugh appealed to the Judicial Officer, to whom final administrative authority to decide the Department's cases subject to 5 U.S.C. §§ 556 and 557 has been delegated (7 CFR § 2.35). On December 19, 1985, the case was referred to the Judicial Officer for decision.

 The position of Judicial Officer was established pursuant to the Act of April 4, 1940 (7 U.S.C. §§ 450c-450g), and Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1953, 18 Fed. Reg. 3219 (1953), reprinted in 5 U.S.C. app. at 1068 (1982). The Department's present Judicial Officer was appointed in January 1971, having been involved with the Department's regulatory programs since 1949 (including 3 years' trial litigation; 10 years' appellate litigation relating to appeals from the decisions of the prior Judicial Officer; and 8 years as administrator of the Packers and Stockyards Act regulatory program) (December 1962-January 1971).

Based upon a careful consideration of the record, the ALJ's initial Decision and Order is adopted as the final Decision and Order in this case, with changes too minor to itemize. Additional conclusions by the Judicial Officer follow the ALJ's conclusions.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE'S INITIAL DECISION

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, as amended and supplemented (7 U.S.C. § 181 et seq., hereafter referred to as the "Act"), instituted by a complaint filed on January 30, 1985, by the Administrator, Packers and Stockyards Administration. The complaint alleged that the financial condition of respondent Farmers & Ranchers Livestock Auction, Inc., and the financial condition of respondent Billy Gene Davis do not meet the requirements of the Act, and that the respondents have wilfully violated provisions of the Act and of the regulations promulgated thereunder.

Answers in the nature of general denials of all allegations, both jurisdictional and substantive, were duly filed. An oral hearing concerning all respondents was held in Little Rock, Arkansas, on July 30-31, and August 1, 1985. Complainant was represented by Eric Paul, Esquire, of the Office of the General Counsel, United States Department of Agriculture. Respondent Jerry Millspaugh was represented by Keith Rutledge, Esquire, of the firm of Highsmith, Gregg, Hart, Farris & Rutledge of Batesville, Arkansas. Seven of the nine witnesses called by the complainant were cross-examined on behalf of respondent Jerry Millspaugh by his counsel on July 30 and 31, 1985. Some 68 exhibits offered by complainant were received into evidence. No oral testimony was presented on behalf of any respondent nor were any exhibits offered on behalf of any respondent prior to the close of the hearing.

At the close of the hearing, the time was set for the filing of briefs in regard to respondent Millspaugh. An initial decision and order was issued on September 13, 1985, pursuant to sections 1.139 and 1.141 (e) of the rules of practice (7 CFR § 1.139, 1.141(e)) with respect to the remaining respondents. Such decision and order requires: respondents Farmers & Ranchers Livestock Auction, Inc., Billy Gene Davis and Randy Davis, d/b/a Cattleman's Commission Co., to cease and desist from various practices in violation of the Act; to comply with record keeping provisions; suspends said respondents as registrants for a period of five years; and prohibits respondent Mary Lavone Davis from engaging in business as a market agency or dealer under the Act for a period of five years together with cease and desist and record keeping provisions.

In this phase of the proceeding, complainant seeks a decision and order imposing corresponding cease and desist, record keeping, and suspension provisions upon respondent Jerry Millspaugh.

Farmers & Ranchers Livestock Auction, Inc.

6. The corporate respondent, under the direction, management and control of respondents Jerry Millspaugh, Billy Gene Davis, and Mary Lavone Davis, in connection with its operations as a market agency, has failed to properly maintain and use its Custodial Account for Shippers' Proceeds, hereafter referred to as the Farmers & Ranchers custodial account, thereby endangering the faithful and prompt accounting therefor and payment of the portions thereof due the owners or consignors of livestock, in that:

(a) As of December 30, 1983, the corporate respondent had issued and outstanding custodial account checks in the amount of $215,951.30, and had, to offset the outstanding checks, a balance in the custodial account of $.78 and current proceeds receivable of $28,075.86, resulting in a deficiency of $187,874.66 in funds available to pay shippers' proceeds;

(b) As of January 13, 1984, the corporate respondent had issued and outstanding custodial account checks in the amount of $357,484.21, and had, to offset the outstanding checks, a balance in the custodial account of $16.02 and current proceeds receivable of $167,335.75, resulting in a deficiency of $190,132.44 in funds available to pay shippers' proceeds;

(c) As of January 31, 1984, the corporate respondent had issued and outstanding custodial account checks in the amount of $335,007.47, and had, to offset the outstanding checks, a balance in the custodial account of $42,416.68, resulting in a deficiency of $292,590.79 in funds available to pay shippers' proceeds;

(d) As of February 16, 1984, the corporate respondent had issued and outstanding custodial account checks in the amount of $301,480.55, and had, to offset the outstanding account checks, a balance in the custodial account of $8,889.76, resulting in a deficiency of $292,590.79 in funds available to pay shippers' proceeds;

(e) As of March 23, 1984, the corporate respondent had issued and outstanding custodial account checks in the amount of $262,907.94 and an account overdraft of $29,682,85, resulting in a deficiency of $292,590.79 in funds available to pay shippers' proceeds; and

(f) Such deficiencies were due, in part, to the misuse of funds received from the sale of consigned livestock as specified in Finding 7 below, and the failure to deposit in the custodial account within the time prescribed by the regulations an amount equal to the proceeds receivable due from the sale of consigned livestock.

7. During the period from at least January 6, 1984, through at least January 27, 1984, the corporate respondent, under the direction, management and control of respondents Jerry Millspaugh, Billy Gene Davis, and Mary Lavone Davis, in connection with its operations as a market agency, used funds received as proceeds from the sale of consigned livestock on a commission basis for purposes of its own and for purposes other than the payment of lawful marketing charges and the remittance of the net proceeds to the owners and consignors of livestock, in that funds received as proceeds from the sale of consigned livestock were regularly deposited to the corporate respondent's general account and used to repay a personal loan made to respondent Billy Gene Davis, to pay expenses of the market, and to finance livestock dealer expenses (CX 24-26; Tr. 130-144).

8. The corporate respondent, under the direction, management and control of respondents Jerry Millspaugh, Billy Gene Davis and Mary Lavone Davis, in connection with its operations as a market agency, on or about the dates and in the transactions set forth below, sold livestock on a commission basis and in purported payment of the net proceeds due the owners or consignors thereof, issued checks which were returned unpaid by the bank upon which they were drawn because the corporate respondent did not have sufficient funds on deposit and available in the account upon which such checks were drawn to pay such checks when presented.

9. In connection with the transactions set forth in Finding 8 above, and in numerous additional transactions during the same period of time, the corporate respondent, under the direction, management and control of respondents Jerry Millspaugh, Billy Gene Davis and Mary Lavone Davis, sold consigned livestock on a commission basis and failed to remit to the owners and consignors of such livestock, when due, the net proceeds resulting from such sales.

10. As of March 23, 1984, there remained unpaid to the owners and consignors of livestock net proceeds in the amount of $218,079.54.

11. These consignors recovered $100,160.93 upon the distribution of bonds maintained for the protection of consignors of livestock to Farmers & Ranchers Livestock Auction, Inc., pursuant to the bonding regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture.

12. The corporate respondent, under the direction, management and control of respondents Jerry Millspaugh, Billy Gene Davis and Mary Lavone Davis, in connection with its operations as a dealer, on or about the dates and in the transactions set forth below, purchased livestock and in purported payment therefor issued checks which were returned unpaid by the bank upon which they were drawn because the corporate respondent did not have sufficient funds on deposit and available in the account upon which such checks were drawn to pay such checks when presented.

13. The corporate respondent, under the direction, management and control of respondents Jerry Millspaugh, Billy Gene Davis and Mary Lavone Davis, in connection with its operations as a dealer, on or about the dates and in the transactions specified in Finding 12 above and in the transactions specified below, purchased livestock in commerce and failed to pay, when due, the full purchase price of such livestock.

14. As of August 16, 1984, there remained unpaid to the livestock seller in transactions set forth in Findings 12 and 13, a total of $8,330.86.

15. Between August 26, 1983, and December 30, 1983, as more fully set forth in the schedule attached to this decision as Appendix A, Respondent Mary Lavone Davis drew twelve drafts totalling $624,132.60 on Rex White Livestock Auction and deposited such drafts to the Farmers & Ranchers general and custodial accounts for immediate credit. On or about the dates on which these twelve drafts were drawn, respondent Mary Lavone Davis issued seventeen Farmers & Ranchers general account checks totalling $563,319.15 payable to Rex White Livestock Auction. Respondent Jerry Millspaugh issued two additional checks, drawn on his own personal checking account, totalling $60,819.27, payable to Rex White Livestock Auction. Although sixteen of the nineteen checks given to Rex White Livestock Auction contained a notation to the effect that the check was for "cattle" or for a specific number of head, the Farmers & Ranchers checks and the two checks issued by respondent Jerry Millspaugh were not issued in payment for livestock purchases, but rather, were issued to obtain the unauthorized use of credit by means of a float caused by a timed series of withdrawals and deposits, creating an illusion of sufficient funds in the Farmers & Ranchers general and custodial accounts (CX 32-50, 64; Tr. 204-256).

16. Numerous other drafts and checks drawn by respondent Mary Lavone Davis between Farmers & Ranchers and Rex White Livestock Auction during this period could not be verified as having been issued either in connection with actual purchases and sales of livestock or in connection with further check kiting or swapping because neither respondents Farmers & Ranchers Livestock Auction, Inc., Billy Gene Davis nor Rex White Livestock Auction maintained full and complete purchase and sales invoices and trucking records that could be reconciled with the dollar amount and number of head notations on additional Farmers & Ranchers checks.

17. On January 6, 1984, a Grace and Grace check in the amount of $31,455.00 was issued by C.C. Grace payable to Farmers & Ranchers for "142 Cattle" and deposited for immediate credit in the Farmers & Ranchers general account with a deposit ticket indicating "purchase". On the same date, respondent Mary Lavone Davis issued a Farmers & Ranchers check payable to C.C. Grace in the amount of $31,455.00 bearing the false notation "83 head".

18. On January 13, 1984, a Grace and Grace check in the amount of $100,000.00 was issued by C.C. Grace payable to Farmers & Ranchers for "350 Cattle" and exchanged for two Farmers & Ranchers general account checks in the amount of $50,889.20 and $49,110.80, totalling $100,000.00. Both Farmers & Ranchers checks contained the false notation "cattle".

19. No livestock was purchased or sold by respondents Farmers & Ranchers Livestock, Auction, Inc., or Jerry Millspaugh in connection with the exchanges or swapping of checks set forth in Findings 17 and 18 above, and the purpose of such exchange operations, commonly referred to as check kiting, was the generation of a float to finance the Farmers & Ranchers operations and/or hide the true balance in the Farmers & Ranchers general and custodial accounts.

20. On January 13, 1984, respondent Mary Lavone Davis drew a draft in the amount of $32,841.52 on Bray Cattle Co., and deposited such draft to the Farmers & Ranchers general account. Although deposited with other instruments indicated as having been received in payment for "purchases", this draft was drawn with the prior agreement of Gordon Bray pending either: (1) the honoring of a Farmers & Ranchers check issued on January 13, 1984, in the amount of $27,944.11 and a Jerry Millspaugh check issued on January 13, 1984, in the amount of $4,897.41, totalling $32,841.52; or (2) the receipt of livestock to be purchased from the next scheduled auction sale. In either case, the exchange of draft and checks was made for the purpose of obtaining an unauthorized use of credit by means of a float and no actual purchase or sale of livestock occurred (CX 51, 54; 324-327, 350-357).

Cattleman's Commission Company

21. Respondent Jerry Millspaugh, together with the remaining individual respondents, in connection with the market agency operations being conducted under the registration Randy Davis d/b/a Cattleman's Commission Company, failed to properly maintain and use the Cattleman's Commission Company custodial account, thereby endangering the faithful and prompt accounting therefor and payment of the portions thereof due the owners or consignors of livestock, in that:

(a) As of October 31, 1984, respondent Jerry Millspaugh, in combination with the other respondents in this proceeding, had issued and oustanding Cattleman's Commission Company custodial account checks in the amount of $272,124.42, and had, to offset the outstanding checks, a balance in the custodial account of $5,443.97, deposits in transit of $80,926.47 and current proceeds receivable of $152,501.40, resulting in a deficiency of $33,252.58 in funds available to pay shippers' proceeds;

(b) As of November 30, 1984, respondent Jerry Millspaugh, in combination with the other respondents in this proceeding, had issued and outstanding Cattleman's Commission Company custodial account checks in the amount of $286,111.74, and had, to offset the outstanding checks, a balance in the custodial account of $35,394.40 and current proceeds receivable of $174,447.12, resulting in a deficiency of $76,270.22 in funds available to pay shippers' proceeds;

(c) As of December 21, 1984, respondent Jerry Millspaugh, in combination with the other respondents in this proceeding, had issued and outstanding Cattleman's Commission Company custodial account checks in the amount of $181,283.22, and had, to offset the outstanding checks, a balance in the custodial account of $26,644.17, deposits in transit of $4,068.09 and proceeds receivable of $103,461.89, resulting in a deficiency of $47,109.07 in funds available to pay shippers' proceeds;

(d) Such deficiencies were due, in part, to the failure to deposit in the custodial account before the close of the next business day an amount equal to the proceeds receivable from livestock purchases by respondents, by market employees, and by a dealer to whom the market had extended credit and financed, one Gordon Bray.

22. Respondent Jerry Millspaugh, in combination with the remaining individual respondents, in connection with the operations of Randy Davis d/b/a Cattleman's Commission Company during the period August 8, 1984, through January 9, 1985, purchased livestock which had been consigned for sale on a commission basis for the speculative account of Randy Davis d/b/a Cattleman's Commission Company (CX 58-62, Tr. 372-377, 412-427, 470-472).

23. Respondent Jerry Millspaugh, in combination with the remaining individual respondents and in connection with the purchases of livestock consigned for sale on a commission basis in Finding 22 above, submitted accounts of sale to consignors which failed to disclose the true and correct names of the buyers and state the nature of the relationship existing between the market agency and the buyers (CX 60-62; Tr. 420-422, 425-427).

24. With respect to the financial condition and operations conducted under the name Cattleman's Commission Co., between January 1, 1985, and June 30, 1985, testimony by Regional Supervisor Jack Bellew and Auditor Kenneth Gordon of the Packers and Stockyards Administration's Memphis Regional Office (Tr. 436-444, 461-477), coupled with a Balance Sheet, Income Statement and Custodial Account analysis as of April 30, 1985 (Complainant's Exhibit 68) establish that respondent Jerry Millspaugh, in combination with the other individual respondents, continued to operate the Cattleman's Commission Co. auction market in a manner that endangers the livestock marketing public in total disregard of the custodial account and fair trade practice requirements of the Act and regulations. A continued custodial account shortage ($9,107.14 as of April 30, 1985) has been combined with a mounting operating loss ($60,348.43 between January 1, 1985, and April 30, 1985) and an insolvency of $80,367.44 (current liabilities less current assets as of April 30, 1985).

During this same period substantial purchases of consigned livestock, much of which was shipped to Amarillo, Texas, for resale on a speculative basis, have generated a company catch cattle income of $11,329.61, a figure entirely incompatible with a legitimate market support operation. Moreover, as explained by Mr. Bellew, the revenues of the Cattleman's Commission Co. operation during this period were used to pay feed expenses of $55,042.70. These feed expenditures go far beyond the amount of feed that could be used or stored at the stockyard, but are entirely appropriate for the feeding of cattle in the Bill Davis ranch operation (Tr. 464-466).

Lastly, an additional operating loss of some $13,000 was incurred between April 30, 1985, and June 30, 1985 (Tr. 467).

25. When the registration of respondent Randy Davis was accepted pursuant to the submission of the documents that have been admitted as complainant's exhibits 6–8, respondent Jerry Millspaugh was employed as auctioneer, the same position that he held in connection with the corporate respondent.

26. Respondent Jerry Millspaugh advanced $5,000.00 to respondent Randy Davis in order that a bond equivalent in the required amount of $65,000.00 could be obtained and operations commenced under the trade name Cattleman's Commission Co.

27. Respondent Randy Davis was not in possession of knowledge respecting Cattleman's Commission Co. records and was observed to perform work of a type normally handled by "yard help" during the investigation conducted by Mr. Jack Bellew and Mr. Kenneth Gordon on August 28, 1984 (Tr. 453, 459–460). This investigation, and others conducted on subsequent dates by employees of complainant, establish that respondent Randy Davis, d/b/a Cattleman's Commission Co. was, in fact, a successor or sham circumvention of the Act and not a bona fide new entity.

28. Livestock purchases made from consignment during eight weekly sales held in November and December, 1984, totalled $210,259.62, a figure equal to 14 per cent of the $1,520,456.19 in livestock that had been consigned for sale at the Cattleman's Commission Co. stockyard (CX 58).

29. Recap sheets maintained in the Cattleman's Commission Co. records for these eight sales could not be reconciled to invoices showing "company" purchases. The recap figure for "Cattleman's Commission Co." purchases was far greater and the discrepancy was not explained until a market employee, the bookkeeper, revealed that purchases by "C&L" and "Long" were, in fact, company purchases (CX 59–62; Tr. 413–427).

Additional Finding

30. The check kiting established to exist between respondents Jerry Millspaugh and Farmers & Ranchers Livestock Auction, Inc., on the one hand, and Rex White d/b/a White Auction Company on the other hand, included two checks drawn by respondent Jerry Millspaugh in the amounts of $30,747.33 on September 26, 1983, and $30,741.87 on October 3, 1983. These were the checks that could be closely matched to corresponding drafts drawn on Rex White. A total of seven personal checks had been issued by respondent Jerry Millspaugh payable to Rex White between September 7, 1983, and December 26, 1983 (CX 64). None of these could be reliably tied to any purchase or sale of livestock shown in the corporate respondent's records or in the records of Rex White d/b/a White Auction Company. Since respondent Jerry Millspaugh failed to comply with an administrative subpoena, complainant's investigators could not conclusively establish during their investigation that no actual livestock purchases were involved. His personal involvement in this check-kiting scheme was extensive until curtailed by the refusal of his bank to accept for immediate credit after October 6, 1983, additional large checks drawn on out of town banks (CX 64, p.3).

CONCLUSIONS

All contentions of the parties have been considered in the light of the record evidence. By reason of the aforesaid findings of fact, it is concluded that respondent, Jerry Millspaugh, has violated the Act, as more fully explained below. The order proposed by complainant is appropriate in the light of the record evidence and is issued herewith.

Custodial Accounts, Failure to Maintain and Use Properly

Every market agency selling livestock on commission is required to establish and properly maintain a "Custodial Account for Shippers' Proceeds" (9 CFR § 201.42(b)). This is a trust account and the proceeds generated by the sale of consigned livestock are trust funds. In re James L. Miller, 33 A.D. 53, 61-62 (1974), aff'd sub nom. Miller v. Butz, 498 F.2d 1088 (5th Cir. 1974). The failure of a market agency to maintain its custodial account in accordance with the requirements of section 201.42 is a violation of sections 307 and 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. §§ 208, 213(a)), as well as a violation of section 201.42 of the regulations. In re Arab Stock Yard, Inc., 37 A.D. 293, 301-302, 310-311 (1978), aff'd, 582 F.2d 39 (5th Cir. 1978); In re Sechrist Sales Company, Inc., 36 A.D. 665, 666, 671-675 (1977); In re Hardy, 33 A.D. 1383, 1398-1406 (1974).

Each of the custodial accounts that have been maintained for the protection of shippers who have consigned their livestock for sale at the Farmers & Ranchers Livestock Auction and Cattleman's Commission Co. stockyards have been shown to be in a state of substantial deficiency of a regularly recurring basis (Findings 6 and 21). The method used by respondent Jerry Millspaugh, in combination with the other individual respondents, to hide the shortage in the corporate respondent's custodial account was check-kiting or check swapping (Findings 15-19). The deficiencies found in the Cattleman's Commission Co. custodial account on October 31, 1984 ($33,252.58), November 30, 1984 ($76,270.22), and December 21, 1984 ($47,109.07), while somewhat smaller, were created by a failure to deposit in the custodial account before the close of the next business day, an amount equal to the proceeds receivable from livestock purchases made by the respondents, including purchases hidden by the use of false or misleading buyers names or notations, and a failure to make timely deposits for purchases made by a dealer to whom the market had extended credit and financed, one Gordon Bray (Findings 21, 22). This failure on the part of respondent Jerry Millspaugh to maintain the Cattleman's Commission Co. custodial account in the required manner has continued and a deficiency continues to exist (Finding 24).

It must be concluded, therefore, that the course of conduct of respondent Jerry Millspaugh with respect to the maintenance and use of the respective custodial accounts constitutes a wilful, deliberate and flagrant violation of sections 307 and 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. §§ 208 and 213(a)), and of section 201.42 of the regulations.

Failure to Remit the Net Proceeds Due Owners and Consignors of Livestock

The corporate respondent, under the direction, management and control of respondents Jerry Millspaugh, Billy Gene Davis and Mary Lavone Davis, sold livestock on commission at four auction sales and failed to remit, when due, the net proceeds resulting from such sales. As of March 23, 1984, net proceeds in the amount of $218,079.54 remained unpaid (Finding No. 10). Respondent Jerry Millspaugh acted in a fiduciary capacity and was obligated to remit the net proceeds of sale with a complete and accurate accounting before the close of the next business day following the sale of consigned livestock. In re Arab Stock Yard, Inc., supra, 37 A.D. at 299, 301. This prompt payment of net proceeds is required by section 201.43(a) of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.43(a)). Any failure by any market agency to comply with this prompt remission requirement is an extremely serious violation of the Act.

Failures to remit net proceeds often follow failures to properly maintain custodial accounts in conformity with section 201.42 of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.42), when, as here, the market agency does not possess funds with which to make up custodial account shortages. The responsibility for properly maintaining the custodial account of respondent Farmers & Ranchers Livestock Auction, Inc., rests on its owners, officers and directors, including respondent Jerry Millspaugh, who was an officer, director, and 1/3rd owner of this closely held corporation. Respondent Jerry Millspaugh had to have actual knowledge that Billy Gene Davis has repeatedly failed to comply with these requirements, even to the extent of violating a 1967 stipulation, a 1970 consent decision and a 1978 injunction. This pattern has continued after the January, 1984, failure of the corporate respondent in connection with a de facto successor, the Cattleman's Commission Co. operation (Finding No. 21).

It must be concluded that there has been a pattern of wilful and deliberate failures to comply with the requirements of section 201.43(a) of the regulations and that such actions violate section 307 and 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. §§ 208 and 213(a)).

Failures to Pay for Livestock Purchases

The corporate respondent, under the direction, management and control of respondents Jerry Millspaugh, Billy Gene Davis and Mary Lavone Davis, made four purchases of livestock totalling $98,498.64 as a dealer and failed to pay the livestock seller, Merrell C. Akin Livestock Co., for such purchases (Findings 12, 13). Checks drawn in purported payment for two of these purchases were dishonored upon presentation because sufficient funds were not on deposit and available (Finding 12). These failures to pay, when due, the full purchase price of livestock constitute an unfair and deceptive practice in willful violation of sections 312(a) and 409 of the Act (7 U.S.C. 213(a), 228b). Lewis v. Butz, 512 F.2d 681, 682-83 (8th Cir. 1975); In re Mid-States Livestock, Inc., 37 A.D. 547, 561-62 (1977), aff'd sub nom. Van Wyk v. Bergland, 570 F.2d 701, 704-05 (8th Cir. 1978); Bowman v. U.S.D.A., 363 F.2d 81, 85 (5th Cir. 1966). The unpaid livestock seller in this case was fortunate to recover all but $8,330.86 of the total purchase amounts from dealer bonds required by the Secretary (Finding 14; CX 31, 31A). These actions, however, remain serious violations that call for the imposition of a substantial period of suspension.

The Issuance of NSF Checks and Check-kiting

Fourteen checks drawn on the corporate respondent's general and custodial acounts were dishonored upon presentation because of an absence of sufficient funds on deposit and available in these checking accounts (Findings 8, 12). Schedules of debts, and amendments to such schedules, which were filed by the corporate respondent in its Chapter 11 proceeding before the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Eastern District of Arkansas (CX 17) admit the issuance of many additional NSF checks that were eventually paid because they had been held too long by the corporate respondent's bank. Respondent Mary Lavone Davis drew these checks (CX 31) knowing that they could be honored upon presentation only by reason of the float produced by an extensive check-kiting or check swapping scheme (Findings 15-20). Respondent

Jerry Millspaugh actively participated in this check swapping scheme until his bank advised him of no further immediate credit on checks deposited to his personal checking account (Finding 30).

It is well established that the issuance of checks in connection with transactions under the Act which are dishonored because of insufficient funds on deposit and available in the account on which such checks are drawn is an unfair and deceptive practice that violates section 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 213(a)). In re Edzards, 37 A.D. 1880, 1887 (1978); In re Bryan, 36 A.D. 37, 42 (1977). By issuance of the two NSF checks made payable to Merrell C. Akin, the corporate respondent and respondent Jerry Millspaugh have also wilfully violated section 409 of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 228b).

The generation of a false "float" in the corporate respondent's general and custodial bank account by the deposit of checks or drafts for immediate credit coupled with the concurrent issuance of checks in identical or similar amounts for exchange or swapping is clearly an unfair and deceptive practice in violation of section 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 213(a)).[1] Even the misuse of a "float" generated without resort to check-kiting has been condemned in numerous cases. In re Roseth, 39 A.D. 28, 36 (1980), aff'd per curiam (unpublished), 636 F.2d 1224 (8th Cir. 1980); In re Hardy, 33 A.D. 1383, 1398-1406 (1974); Bowman v. U.S.D.A., supra; Daniels v. United States, 242 F.2d 39, 41-42 (7th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 354 U.S. 939.

Incomplete Records and Records Containing False and Deceptive Entries

The records maintained by the corporate respondent fail to meet the requirement of section 401 of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 221), which provides, inter alia, that > any . . . market agency, and dealer shall keep such accounts, records and memoranda as fully and correctly disclose all transactions involved in his business . . .

Drafts drawn on White Auction Company between August 26, 1983, and January 5, 1984, totalled $2,719,477.48. Checks issued payable to Rex White or White Auction Company totalled $2,243,147.35 (CX 64). Only a handful of these transactions could be tied to the legitimate purchase or sale of livestock or to an existing check-kiting arrangement because complete dealer invoices and related records were not available. At the hearing, complainant was able to link over $600,000 in drafts to a corresponding total of checks by reason of identical or virtually identical amounts and dates (Finding 15; Appendix A of this decision). False notations were entered on Farmers & Ranchers checks involved in this check swapping, and on additional checks issued to a number of other livestock dealers, to the effect that such checks were for "cattle" or a specific number of head, for example, "83 hd" (Findings 17, 18). Similar false notations were entered on personal checks issued by respondent Jerry Millspaugh.

Similarly, the accountings of sale provided to livestock consignors in connection with consignments to the Cattleman's Commission Co. sale were shown to misrepresent the name of the buyer. When livestock purchased by the market agency were not shown as "Co." (the designation noted on the invoices for sale barn purchases), designations were used which were not identified to the consignors as having any relation to the respondent market agency (Finding 23; CX 59-62). There was unrefuted testimony to the effect that this practice had also prevailed at the sales conducted by the corporate respondent (Tr. 400).

The issuance of invoices that fail to disclose the true and correct name of the buyer is an unfair and deceptive practice that violates section 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 213(a)), and the failure to maintain complete records warrants the entry of a record keeping order pursuant to section 401 of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 222).

Purchasing Out of Consignments

It is well established that market agencies selling on commission are fiduciaries that engage in an unfair and deceptive practice, in violation of section 201.56 of the regulations and section 312(a) of the Act, when they buy livestock out of consignments for speculation and when they fail to fully disclose purchases made to support the market. See 9 CFR § 201.58(c), (e); In re Loretz, 36 A.D. 1087 (1977); In re Hardy, 33 A.D. 1383 (1974); In re Lufkin Livestock Exchange, 27 A.D. 596, 610 (1968).

The high volume of purchases out of consignments by respondents in Cattleman's Commission Co. sales, and the profits generated from such purchases, show that this unfair practice has been a basic element of the business conducted, just as it was previously with respect to the corporate respondent's operations (CX 58; Tr. 373-377).

It must be concluded, as complainant contends, that respondent Jerry Millspaugh had full knowledge that a high volume of livestock was being purchased for speculative purposes on a regular basis in violation of the fiduciary obligation owed to livestock consignors under the Act. Mr. Kenneth Gordon, an auditor who is familiar with the sale of livestock at auction markets, testified as follows:

> Q. And how would you describe these transactions?
>
> A. My description of them, based on the numbers of percentages, even though the classification of market support or catch cattle was used, the volume would lend itself to be buying out of consignment for speculative purposes, in other words, buying and shipping and then expecting it to sell at a profit.
>
> Q. Now is there any way that this could have been done without Jerry Millspaugh personally knowing that these purchases were being made by the company?
> A. No, they were not. Him being the auctioneer, he indicated the sale of the livestock to the individual that purchased them when he accepted the final bid on the animal, the buyer was disclosed at that time, so Mr. Millspaugh had to know who the purchaser was. (Tr. 376)

The true extent of such speculative purchases was evident to respondent Jerry Millspaugh, but hidden from consignors by the use of fictitious names such as "Long" and initials and numbers that were not identified in the accountings prepared as company buying symbols (Findings 28, 29; Tr. 385-387, 392-393, 397-400).

Mr. Jack Bellew, complainant's Regional Supervisor, a CPA with 12 years experience in the observation of auction sales and the investigation of auction market operations, also testified that respondent Jerry Millspaugh would have had to be aware of market purchases exceeding five or ten percent of total consignment volume and was an integral part of the operation (Tr. 470-471).

Responsibility of Respondent Jerry Millspaugh For Violations By Farmers & Ranchers Livestock Auction, Inc., and Cattleman's Commission Co.

The position taken by respondent Jerry Millspaugh throughout the portion of the oral hearing he attended, in person and by counsel, is that his involvement in the direction, management and control of the operations of Farmers & Ranchers Livestock Auction, Inc., was strictly limited to a performance of the duties of auctioneer.

Respondent argues at page 15 of his brief:

> Respondent Jerry Millspaugh was an owner and director and Vice-President of the Corporate Respondent. His sole function was that of auctioneer. He had no direct supervisory control, management, direction, or control over the custodial accounts, general accounts, check writing, or any other management responsibilities for the Corporate Respondent. The actions taken by Jerry Millspaugh throughout his employment and connection with the other Respondents herein clearly show that Jerry Millspaugh has not in any way violated the Rules and Regulations to the Packers & Stockyards Act.

The record shows, however, that respondent Jerry Millspaugh either actively participated in violations which occurred in the course of the Farmers & Ranchers and Cattleman's Commission Co. operations, or knowingly permitted respondents Billy Gene Davis and Mary Davis to conduct the daily operations of the corporate respondent and the Randy Davis d/b/a Cattleman's Commission Co. operation in violation of the Act and regulations. In either case, he must be held fully responsible for such violations in order that the remedial purposes of the Act can be achieved.

Cease and desist orders have been repeatedly made applicable to respondents who are owner/officers of closely held family corporations despite lack of active personal participation in the practices found to violate the Act. In In re MCM Livestock, 39 A.D. 893, 901 (1980), the Department's Judicial Officer made such an order applicable to respondent McAninch, even though he was an absentee owner/officer who lived in Indianapolis, Indiana, and only visited the Whiteville, North Carolina, auction market facility on rare occasions and generally took no active part in the day-to-day operation of MCM. The Judicial Officer stated:

> This is not to punish respondent McAninch, but to deter him and others similarly situated from permitting such violations to occur in the future. If the president of a closely held family corporation, whose wife owns two-thirds of the firm, could avoid a cease and desist order when serious violations are committed by the corporation merely by delegating his responsibility to someone else, the remedial purposes of the Act would not be achieved.

Respondent Jerry Millspaugh's involvement was much more extensive. First, he wrote checks containing false entries as to the number of head of livestock purportedly being paid for that were issued solely in connection with a check-kiting scheme (Findings 15-20). Second, he sold livestock as auctioneer in transactions where he could not avoid knowing that the livestock were being purchased without disclosure that these were direct or indirect company purchases for speculative purposes. This occurred on a regular basis with respect to both Farmers & Ranchers and Cattleman's Commission Company operations (Tr. 376-400). He advanced funds to respondent Randy Davis to permit a continuation of the same practices that he knew had occurred in the corporate respondent's operation (CX 12-14; Tr. 82-84). He was aware that the respective custodial accounts were not being properly maintained and that a dealer, Gordon Bray, was being allowed to pay for livestock at the following weekly sale without a prompt reimbursement of the custodial account (CX 63, Tr. 442). Lastly, he was present when records were sought by complainant's investigators during both the current and prior investigations and must have been well aware that the corporate respondent's records were being kept during 1983 and 1984 in such a manner as to fail to fully and correctly disclose all transactions involved in its business (Tr. 444, 450). He failed to produce records to support his issuance of personal checks used in a check-kiting scheme (CX 32, 64; Tr. 191, 203, 448). He was, as noted by witness Jack Bellew, an integral part of the entire operation (Tr. 470-471). Under these circumstances, a suspension order as well as a cease and desist and record keeping order is required.

SANCTION

Respondent Jerry Millspaugh was initially registered as an individual, selling livestock on a commission basis under the name Farmers & Ranchers Livestock Auction at Mt. View, Arkansas, on May 5, 1975 (CX 1, p.9). This registration was amended April 30, 1976, to add buying and selling on commission at the Montgomery Livestock Auction, Searcy, Arkansas, and a dealer operation (CX 1, pp. 7-8). On February 25, 1977, a corporate registration was issued to Farmers & Ranchers Livestock Auction, Inc., and the Mt. View operation was continued under this registration. Subsequently, the Searcy sale was replaced with a sale at Charlotte, Arkansas, after construction of a new sale barn (Tr. 32). The individual registration of respondent Millspaugh became inactive with the termination of bond coverage on March 27, 1977 (CX 1, p. 8). It is complainant's position that respondent Jerry Millspaugh remains a registrant, since it is not the policy of complainant to terminate registrations, but only to inactivate them (Tr. 254-255). Since he is an inactive registrant, he may be suspended as a registrant.

Complainant presented sanction testimony at the close of the oral hearing from Mr. Jack Bellew, and from Mr. Harold W. Davis,

Chief of the complainant's Livestock Marketing Division. Mr. Bellew reviewed the difficulties being encountered by his office in obtaining proper adherence to the Act by other registrants as a result of what was generally perceived as a continued blatant violation of the Act by respondent Billy Gene Davis through the operation being conducted under the name Randy Davis d/b/a Cattleman's Commission Co. Mr. Davis, the individual delegated primary responsibility by complainant to determine what sanctions should be sought in all cases involving market agencies and dealers, testified that a five-year suspension and standard cease and desist provisions should be made applicable to each registrant, and that a like period of prohibition and cease and desist provisions should be imposed upon the single non-registrant, respondent Mary Lavone Davis. He qualified this agency recommendation by indicating that a provision allowing the employment of respondent Jerry Millspaugh as an auctioneer only by other registrants after the completion of the first year of a five-year suspension would be agreeable to complainant. He explained that respondent Jerry Millspaugh should not be allowed employment involving the buying and selling of livestock outside the auctioneer function or the exercise of management responsibilities or control of operations requiring registration.

The requested five-year suspension of respondent Jerry Millspaugh appears reasonable in the light of the record evidence. Respondent Jerry Millspaugh has been shown to be intimately involved in numerous violations which occurred with respect to both the operations conducted under the name Farmers & Ranchers Livestock Auction, Inc., and under the name Randy Davis d/b/a Cattleman's Commission Co.

It is evident that respondent Jerry Millspaugh has wilfully participated in the violations that have occurred after the registration of Randy Davis. To insure that Jerry Millspaugh does not act as a front during the five-year period when complainant has sought to have respondents Billy Gene Davis and Mary Lavone Davis barred from operating as market agencies and dealers in the same manner as respondent Randy Davis has done since August 8, 1984, a suspension of the same duration must be imposed upon him. Recognition that he was not responsible for the earlier violations or subject to a prior order of the Secretary is provided by a provision allowing his employment by other registrants after one year exclusively as an auctioneer. The broad authority of the Secretary to impose a sanction on one respondent designed to insure that a sanction imposed on a related respondent is not circumvented has been upheld by the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in Mattes v. United States, 721 F.2d 1125 (1983).

ADDITIONAL CONCLUSIONS BY THE JUDICIAL OFFICER

Respondent contends on appeal that the ALJ's findings are not adequately supported by the record, but the record abundantly supports the ALJ's findings and conclusions. In fact, the proof here far surpasses the preponderance of the evidence, which is all that is required.[2]

Respondent Jerry Millspaugh's argument as to the evidence is primarily based on his contention that the evidence does not prove that he was personally responsible for the violations. But the evidence showing that respondent Jerry Millspaugh was vice president and one of the three directors of the corporate respondent, and that he owned one-third of the corporate respondent's outstanding stock, is sufficient to show that he was responsible for the corporate respondent's violations. The record further shows that Randy Davis d/b/a Cattleman's Commission Company was merely a continuation of the corporate respondent.

Furthermore, neither respondent Jerry Millspaugh nor any of the other respondents testified in this proceeding, notwithstanding the fact that respondent Jerry Millspaugh was present during most of the hearing. Under the settled principle that has been followed in many proceedings before this Department,[3] and which has also been followed in many judicial proceedings,[4] I infer that Jerry Millspaugh's testimony would have been adverse to his position here. "It is certainly a maxim that all evidence is to be weighed according to the proof which it was in the power of one side to have produced and in the power of the other to have contradicted." Lord Manfield, in Blatch v. Archer, Cowp. 66, quoted with approval in Wigmore, Evidence (3d ed. 1940), § 285.

In addition, the record shows that respondent Jerry Millspaugh personally participated in the check-kiting scheme. For example, on September 26, 1983, respondent corporation drew a draft on Rex White for $43,331.92. On the same date, September 26, 1983, the corporate respondent issued a check to Rex White for $12,585, and respondent Jerry Millspaugh issued a check from his personal account to Rex White for $30,747.33. The total amount of the two checks issued by the corporate respondent and Jerry Millspaugh to Rex White on September 26, 1983, is $43,332.33, i.e., a difference of only 41¢ between the draft drawn by the corporate respondent on Rex White on September 26, 1983, and the two checks issued by the corporate respondent and Jerry Millspaugh on the same day to Rex White.

Similarly, on October 4, 1983, the corporate respondent drew a draft on Rex White in the amount of $56,811. On the same day, the corporate respondent issued a check to Rex White for $26,070, and on the preceding day, October 3, 1983, respondent Jerry Millspaugh issued a check from his personal account to Rex White for $30,741.87. The two checks to Rex White totalled $56,811.87, i.e., just 87¢ more than the draft drawn by the corporate respondent on Rex White.

In the absence of any testimony by respondent Jerry Millspaugh or any of the other respondents, this evidence, together with the other evidence relating to the check-kiting scheme, gives rise to the strong inference that Jerry Millspaugh was personally writing checks on his own checking account as part of the check-kiting scheme.

It should be noted that a check-kiting scheme is a serious and flagrant violation of the Act not because of the actual loss that may have occurred as a result of the arrangement, but, rather, because a check-kiting arrangement of the size involved here over an extended period of time has the potential for great harm.[5] Such check-kiting schemes are very easy for livestock firms to engage in without detection by banking officials. Accordingly, severe sanctions must be imposed where any respondent engages in a check-kiting scheme in connection with its livestock activities subject to the Act.

It is the policy of this Department to impose severe sanctions for serious violations of any of the regulatory programs administered by the Department to serve as an effective deterrent not only to the respondents, but also to other potential violators. This policy has been followed in all of the Department's disciplinary proceedings in recent years.

The basis for the Department's severe sanction policy is set forth at great length in numerous decisions, e.g., In re Worsley, 33 Agric. Dec. 1547, 1556-71 (1974),[6] which is set forth as Appendix B to this decision.[7]

[5] For example, in In re Blackfoot Livestock Commission Co., P&S Docket No. 6107, presently before the Judicial Officer, when a check-kiting scheme engaged in by two livestock firms was suddenly ended by one of the firms, the other firm's bank was left holding three dishonored drafts totalling almost $900,000 (for which it had already given credit). In addition, livestock sellers lost nearly $200,000.

[6] The Department's severe sanction policy did not originate with Worsley, but, rather, was mentioned briefly in the first decision issued by the present Judicial Officer, In re Henner, 30 Agric. Dec. 1151, 1263-64 (1971), and was further developed in numerous other decisions before it was finalized in In re Miller, 33 Agric. Dec. 53, 64-80 (1974), aff'd per curiam, 498 F.2d 1088 (5th Cir. 1974).

In view of the serious, flagrant and repeated violations by the corporate respondent, for which respondent Jerry Millspaugh is responsible, the 5-year suspension imposed by the ALJ as to respondent Jerry Millspaugh is appropriate, irrespective of the additional violations by Randy Davis d/b/a Cattleman's Commission Company, and irrespective of the desirability of preventing Billy Gene Davis and Mary Lavone Davis from continuing operations during their 5-year suspension period. Nonetheless, the ALJ properly considered the violations by Randy Davis d/b/a Cattleman's Commission Company (since it was merely a continuation of the corporate respondent's business), and the desirability of having the sanction as to respondent Jerry Millspaugh coincide with the 5-year suspensions applicable to respondents Billy Gene Davis and Mary Lavone Davis (see In re Farmers & Ranchers Livestock Auction, Inc., 44 Agric. Dec. ____ (Sept. 13, 1985) (decision as to the respondents other than Jerry Millspaugh)).

Respondent Jerry Millspaugh challenges that part of the order relating to a restriction on his employment, i.e., providing that his suspension "shall not constitute a bar on his employment by any other registrant under the Act in the capacity of a salaried or hourly wage auctioneer after the completion of the first year of his five-year period of suspension." However, that provision is actually a relaxation of the sanction that would normally be in effect. The regulations prohibit a stockyard owner, packer, market agency, or dealer from employing any suspended registrant to perform activities in connection with livestock transactions subject to the Act

> No stockyard owner, packer, market agency, or dealer shall employ any person who has been suspended as a registrant to perform activities in connection with livestock transactions subject to the jurisdiction of the Secretary under the Act during the period of such suspension: Provided, That the provisions of this section shall not be construed to prohibit the employment of any person who has been suspended as a registrant until such time as the person demonstrates solvency or obtains the bond required under the Act and regulations. No such person shall be employed, however, until after the expiration of any specified period of suspension contained in the order of suspension.[8]

Authority to issue regulations under the Packers and Stockyards Act is contained in § 402 of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 222), which adopts by reference the authority of the Federal Trade Commission to issue regulations (15 U.S.C. § 46(g)), and in § 407 of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 228(a)). Many of the Packers and Stockyards Act regulations are merely advisory, but others have the force and effect of law.[9] The regulation just quoted is obviously one of the regulations having the force and effect of law. The regulation is necessary to carry out the provisions of the Act, and is within the statutory authority of the Secretary (see, e.g., 7 U.S.C. §§ 192, 208, 213).

In addition, the regulation is necessary to prevent evasion of suspension orders issued under 7 U.S.C. § 204. If a suspended registrant could be employed by a stockyard owner, packer, market agency, or dealer to perform activities subject to the Act during the period of a suspension, the suspension power would be an ineffective regulatory tool.

[8] The current provisions were added in 1984 (49 Fed. Reg. 37,371, 37,374-75 (1984)), but similar provisions were previously in effect (19 Fed. Reg. 4522, 4532 (1954); 24 Fed. Reg. 3182, 3184 (1959); 44 Fed. Reg. 45,359, 45,361 (1979)).

Apr. 23, 1981).

The same goal achieved by the regulation (9 CFR § 201.81) could be achieved by requiring all employees of a registrant who are actually engaged in buying or selling livestock to register separately from their employer. That is, such employees could themselves be required to register as market agencies or dealers. The Act defines "market agency" and "dealer" as follows (7 U.S.C. § 201(c), (d)):

> (c) The term "market agency" means any person engaged in the business of (1) buying or selling in commerce livestock on a commission basis or (2) furnishing stockyard services; and
> (d) The term "dealer" means any person, not a market agency, engaged in the business of buying or selling in commerce livestock, either on his own account or as the employee or agent of the vendor or purchaser.[10]

The term "stockyard services" is defined as (7 U.S.C. § 201(b)):

> (b) The term "stockyard services" means services or facilities furnished at a stockyard in connection with the receiving, buying, or selling on a commission basis or otherwise, marketing, feeding, watering, holding, delivery, shipment, weighing, or handling in commerce, or livestock.

Livestock auctioneers fit the definitions of a market agency and a dealer and, therefore, the Secretary could require their individual registration. The regulation prohibiting their employment while suspended merely accomplishes the same purpose in a more economical manner. It is clearly within the Secretary's authority under the Act.

For the foregoing reasons, the following order should be issued in this proceeding.

ORDER

ORDER OF DISMISSAL AS TO RESPONDENT MONELL

These are reparation proceedings under the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, as amended, 7 U.S.C. 181 et seq., begun by complaints received on various dates in early 1983, alleging in substance failure to pay for livestock purchased.

Copies of each complaint, and of an investigation report prepared by the Packers and Stockyards Administration of this Department and filed in each proceeding pursuant to the Rules of Practice, were duly served on each respondent. A copy of the respective investigation report was duly served on each complainant.

In some of the cases Mr. Monell cross claimed against the Holmes firm, and in some of them the Holmes firm cross claimed against Mr. Monell.

Respondents Holmes and Hunt subsequently entered bankruptcy. Accordingly these proceedings are stayed under 11 U.S.C. 362(a)(1) as to them. The cross claims of the Holmes firm are in abeyance. The proceedings went forward only as to the claims of the complainants against Mr. Monell.

A total of 65 related cases including these were consolidated for hearing, the rights of the parties turning on the pleadings and proof in their respective proceedings notwithstanding the joint trial. AmJur2d Actions §§ 156 et seq. The oral hearing was held on May 20, 1985 in Syracuse, New York before John J. Casey of the Office of the General Counsel of this Department. No party was represented by counsel. Six witnesses testified. No exhibits were received. No brief was received.

At the hearing, complainants in the proceedings identified on the attached list, although duly notified, did not appear in person or by counsel or other representative, and no evidence was offered or received in support of their claims. Mr. Monell testified that, in all purchases of livestock made by him and involved in the 65 cases, he was acting as agent for Mr. Hunt and he disclosed this to the sellers. His testimony was credible and the record contains no evidence to the contrary. He is not liable for the unpaid price of any of such livestock on that basis. Sweeney v. Herman Management, Inc., 85 App. Div. 2d 34, 447 N.Y.S. 2d 164 (2 Dept. 1982).

On possible liability in court under his surety bond see United States Fid. & G. Co. v. Clover Creek Cattle Co., 92 Idaho 889, 452 P. 2d 993 (1969) and Arnold Livestock Sales Company, Inc. v. Pearson, 383 F. Supp. 1319 (D. Nebr. 1974).

This order is the same as an order issued by the Secretary of Agriculture, being issued pursuant to delegated authority, 7 CFR § 2.35, as authorized by Act of April 4, 1940, 54 Stat. 81, 7 U.S.C. 450c–450g. See also Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1953, 5 U.S.C., 1976 ed., app. p. 764.

On a petition to reopen a hearing, to rehear or reargue a proceeding, or to reconsider an order, see Rule 17 of the Rules of Practice, 9 CFR § 202.117.

On a complainant's right to judicial review of such an order see 5 U.S.C. 702–3 and United States v. I.C.C., 337 U.S. 426.

All claims of the complainants in the proceedings identified in the attached list are dismissed as to Mr. Monell.

Copies hereof shall be served on the complainants and Mr. Monell.

ORDER OF DISMISSAL AS TO RESPONDENT MONELL

These are reparation proceedings under the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, as amended, 7 U.S.C. 181 et seq., begun by complaints received in early 1983, alleging in substance failure to pay for livestock purchased.

In each proceeding, copies of the complaint, and of an investigation report prepared by the Packers and Stockyards Administration of this Department and filed in the proceeding pursuant to the Rules of Practice, were duly served on each respondent, and a copy of the respective investigation report was duly served on complainants.

Respondents Holmes and Hunt subsequently entered bankruptcy. Accordingly the proceedings are stayed under 11 U.S.C. 362(a)(1) as to them. The cross claims of the Holmes firm are in abeyance. The proceedings went forward only as to the claims of the above-named complainants against Mr. Monell.

A total of 65 related cases including these were consolidated for hearing, the rights of the parties turning on the pleadings and proof in their respective proceedings notwithstanding the joint trial. AmJur2d Actions §§ 156 et seq. The oral hearing was held on May 20, 1985 in Syracuse, New York before John J. Casey of the Office of the General Counsel of this Department. No party was represented by counsel. Six witnesses testified, including Mr. & Mrs. Chesbro, Mr. Stuart Young, and Mr. Monell. No exhibits were received. No brief was received.

Between the complainants and Mr. Monell, it is undisputed that the latter, in the purchases of livestock made by him and involved in these two cases, was acting as agent for Mr. Hunt and disclosed this to the sellers. He is not liable for the unpaid price of any of such livestock on that basis. Sweeney v. Herman Management, Inc., 85 App. Div. 2d 34, 447 N.Y.S. 2d 164 (2 Dept. 1982).

This order is the same as an order issued by the Secretary of Agriculture, being issued pursuant to delegated authority, 7 CFR § 2.35, as authorized by Act of April 4, 1940, 54 Stat. 81, 7 U.S.C. 450c–450g. See also Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1953, 5 U.S.C., 1976 ed., app. p. 764.

On a complainant's right to judicial review of such an order see 5 U.S.C. 702–3 and United States v. I.C.C., 337 U.S. 426.

The claims of Mr. & Mrs. Chesbro, and of Messrs. Young, in these proceedings, are dismissed as to respondent Monell.

Copies hereof shall be served on the complainants and Mr. Monell.

CLIFTON CATTLE COMPANY, INC., v. SIOUX CITY LIVESTOCK MARKETING, INC., AND WESTERN IOWA FARMS COMPANY. P&S Docket No. 6192. Decided February 10, 1986.

Violation of the P&S Act.

In re P&S Docket No. 6192, Clifton Cattle Company, Inc. complainant, v. Sioux City Livestock & Marketing, Inc., and Western Iowa Farms Company, respondents; Presiding officer John J. Casey ruled in favor of Clifton Cattle Company. Findings showed that complainant and respondent, Western Iowa, had in early February, 1983, separately placed cattle at a Nebraska feed lot, whose operator mixed 21 steers of complainant with 39 of Western Iowa. On February 4 a large death loss occurred at the feed lot. On that day Western Iowa moved surviving steers to another pen. Next day complainant's agent went to move his cattle but found not only they were fewer than the number originally placed there, but fewer than he had counted the day before. Western Iowa, later sold the steers it had removed on the Sioux City Stockyards. Some of the steers sold belonged to complainant. Western Iowa knew this but never troubled to sort out which ones belonged to complainant, who received nothing on account of such steers. Because Western Iowa, sold all surviving steers moved from the original pen, knowing that some belonged to complainant, but without ascertaining how many, it was no longer possible to identify which of the surviving steers belonged to which of the parties. By mathematical calculation of the total number of cattle of both parties involved, Presiding Officer Casey determined, consequently, that of the net proceeds obtained by Western Iowa in the sale of the surviving cattle, a 21/59 quota was to go to complainant. He thus ordered Western Iowa to pay complainant, Clifton Cattle Co., Inc., $5,883.48 with 13% interest until paid, the amount representing 21/59 of the $16,529.77 net proceeds obtained by Western Iowa. The complainant as to Sioux City Livestock Marketing, Inc., was dismissed by the Presiding Officer.

John D. Hartigan, Jr., Omaha, Neb., for complainant.
Victor J. Lich, Jr., Lich, Herold & Mackiewicz, Omaha, Neb., for respondent Sioux City only.
Respondent, pro se (Western Iowa).
John J. Casey, Presiding Officer.

Decision by Donald A. Campbell, Judicial Officer.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, as amended, begun by a written complaint received on March 29, 1983, alleging in substance conversion of certain livestock. The amount claimed was $17,786.21.

Copies of the complaint, and of an investigation report prepared by the Packers and Stockyards Administration of this Department and filed in this proceeding pursuant to the Rules of Practice, were served on respondents on June 17, 1983. A copy of the investigation report was served on complainant on the same day. Respondents filed an answer and request for oral hearing on June 27, which was served on complainant on July 25.

An oral hearing was held on November 30, 1983 in Omaha, Nebraska, before John J. Casey of the Office of the General Counsel of this Department. Complainant was represented by John D. Hartigan, Jr., Esq., and respondents were represented by Victor J. Lich, Jr., Esq., both of Omaha. Six witnesses testified. Nine exhibits were received. Thereafter testimony of Gerald A. Lutjens was taken by deposition and made a part of the record by agreement of the parties. Both sides filed briefs.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant Clifton Cattle Company, Inc., a corporation, at all times material herein was engaged in business as a market agency buying livestock on commission, and as a dealer buying and selling livestock for its own account, in commerce, with a principal place of business at Clifton, Texas, and so registered with the Secretary under the Act.

2. Respondent Sioux City Livestock Marketing, Inc., a corporation, at all times material herein was engaged in business as a market agency buying and selling livestock on commission, operating on the Sioux City Stockyards, Sioux City, Iowa, a posted stockyard subject to the Act, thus in commerce, and so registered with the Secretary under the Act.

3. Respondent Western Iowa Farms Company, a corporation, at all times material herein was engaged in business as a market agency and dealer buying and selling livestock on commission and for its own account, operating on locations including the Union Stock Yards, Omaha, Nebraska, a posted stockyard subject to the Act, thus in commerce, and so registered with the Secretary under the Act.

4. Prior to February 4, 1983, complainant and respondent Western Iowa had separately placed cattle for feeding at a feedlot near Platte Center, Nebraska. The feedlot operator, in what was called Pen 6, had commingled 21 steers of complainant with 38 steers and certain heifers of Western Iowa. In the following months a large death loss occurred at the feedlot, of which the operator did not keep the parties informed.

5. On February 4, 1983, respondent Western Iowa by agent removed all the then surviving steers from Pen 6, as well as the other animals of Western Iowa, and transported them to another feedlot where they remained until on or about March 2.

6. On dates as follows, respondent Western Iowa caused the then surviving steers which had been removed on February 4 from Pen 6 to be sold on the Sioux City Stockyards, for proceeds as follows:

Date	Steers	Gross Proceeds	Expenses of Sale	Net Proceeds
March 2	1	$268.45	$11.52	$256.93
March 2	31	12,270.62	357.12	11,913.50
March 2	12	4,205.92	138.24	4,067.68
March 30	1	298.76	7.10	291.66
Total:	45			$16,529.77

Some of the steers belonged to complainant, and Western Iowa by agents knew this, but never either sorted them out, identified which ones, or even ascertained how many. Complainant has received nothing on account of such steers.

7. The complaint was filed within 90 days of accrual of the cause of action alleged therein.

CONCLUSIONS

In the Fall of 1982 complainant and respondent Western Iowa separately placed cattle in a certain commercial feedlot near Platte Center, Nebraska, operated by Gerald A. Lutjens, not a party herein. Complainant placed 619 steers. Western Iowa placed 359 larger heifers, 271 smaller heifers, and 38 steers. No other animals were there. In the following months a large death loss occurred there, at least 327 animals, of which the feedlot operator did not keep the parties informed. In early February of 1983, shortly before the feedlot operator became bankrupt, each of such parties learned that the condition of its cattle had deteriorated and determined to move them elsewhere. On Friday, February 4, Western Iowa by agent removed cattle, fewer than it had placed there. The next day, Saturday, Febraury 5, complainant's agent went there to remove its cattle and found, not only fewer than complainant had placed there, but fewer than complainant's agents had counted there the day before. Of the animals removed by Western Iowa, and later sold at Sioux City by Western Iowa, it is undisputed that some belonged to complainant and Western Iowa knew this. The question is how many and of what value.

On Friday morning, February 4, complainant's agent Gordon Reisinger went to the Lutjens feedlot. Mr. Alan Larsen, who operated another commercial feedlot, went with him. Both got into three pens assigned to complainant, and counted the steers by running them between themselves. Their respective counts varied by a very few animals but were approximately 380. The feedlot operator, Mr. Lutjens, was present and told them there were others belonging to complainant in another place, called Pen 6, commingled with the smaller heifers and the steers belonging to Western Iowa. The number he told them was 21 but it is clear that this was the number of complainant's animals originally commingled with Western Iowa's and not necessarily the number then surviving. All three men then departed together to transact other business in Leigh and Columbus, Nebraska. They parted company in Columbus. Mr. Larsen arranged for trucks to remove complainant's animals and take them to Mr. Larsen's feedlot the next morning.

Mr. Lutjens returned to his feedlot about 5:00 that afternoon and found a number of trucks, and Western Iowa's agent Charles Leonard loading cattle from Pen 6, in which 21 steers of complainant had been commingled with the smaller heifers and the 38 steers of Western Iowa. At least one truck had already departed. That departed truck must have contained animals from Pen 6, based on Mr. Leonard's testimony (Tr. 53) that he loaded the animals from that pen before loading any of the animals, called the "Dose cattle," from the other pen assigned to Western Iowa. Mr. Lutjens observed some of complainant's animals being loaded (the ear tags were of a different design) and told Mr. Leonard this. The latter said in substance that that would have to be taken care of later as sorting was impossible under the circumstances. Western Iowa had brought a total of 668 animals to the Lutjens feedlot, of which 38 were steers, but that day it removed a total of 566, of which 45 were steers. Western Iowa's agents denied that they removed any animals from the three pens assigned to complainant, in which Messrs. Reisinger and Larsen had earlier that day counted the animals. However they acknowledged an obligation to complainant for seven, the difference between 38 and 45; for this to be correct the death loss at the feedlot would have had to included none of Western Iowa's steers.

That evening Mr. Lutjens phoned Mr. Reisinger and told him that Western Iowa had removed some of complainant's cattle from the Lutjens feedlot that day.

The next morning, Saturday, February 5, the truckers hired by Mr. Larsen arrived at the Lutjens feedlot and began loading complainant's animals before Mr. Larsen arrived there. Mr. Reisinger did not go there that day.

Also that Saturday morning Mr. Leonard returned to see if there were any more Western Iowa cattle there. He found none. While he was there, Mr. Reisinger phoned the Lutjens home to inquire about the loading of complainant's cattle. Mrs. Lutjens told him that some had been removed by Western Iowa the night before, and that Mr. Leonard was there. Mr. Reisinger asked to speak to Mr. Leonard, and Mrs. Lutjens tried to summon him. Mr. Leonard testified (Tr. 55):

> Q. Did Mr. and Mrs. Lutjens come out and tell you that Gordon Reisinger's on the the phone, he wants to talk to you?
> A. Mrs. Lutjens came out, was crying, wanted me to come to the house to use the phone. And I told her I wanted to leave before the snowstorm got any worse. She went back to the house and then came back and said Gordon Reisinger's on the phone. And I told her to tell Gordon we'd talk to him later.
>
> Q. Did she tell you why he was calling?
>
> A. No, she did not.

Mr. Lutjens testified (Deposition 10), "Mr. Leonard was with me in my pickup, and my wife called us on the radio, and he says he didn't want to talk to him." Mr. Reisinger testified (Tr. 26):

> Mr. Lutjens told me that our cattle were transported out by Western. Mrs. Lutjens told me on Saturday morning, > and I asked her if I could speak to Chuck Leonard and if she would call him. And she came back to the phone and said he didn't want to talk to me.

Mr. Reisinger then phoned Mr. Hugh "Scotty" Mactier, President of both respondent corporations, and told him of his information that the latter had some of complainant's cattle. Mr. Mactier promised to check it out and call him back.

Mr. Mactier then directed Mr. Leonard to go to the feedlot where Western Iowa had taken the animals which it had removed, and count the steers, but without getting any of the animals up because they were in bad condition. Mr. Mactier testified (Tr. 62):

> So Charlie [Leonard] went out and walked through the pen, called me back, and he said he thought he counted about 35 cattle. And so I called Gordon [Reisinger] back approximately 11:00 or thereabouts; and I said we walked through the cattle, we think we've got 35 steers in there and we want 38; and so as of this moment I don't know that we have any of your cattle.

Mr. Mactier also testified that in this second phone call he told Mr. Reisinger where Western Iowa had taken the animals, Ruser's. "I may have said Ruser's at Valley instead of at Venice, but I told him they were at Ruser's." Mr. Reisinger testified that he was told that Western Iowa had taken the animals to Valley, and had no cattle belonging to complainant. By the time Mr. Reisinger understood where Western Iowa had taken the animals, about a month later, they had been moved again, this time to Sioux City for sale there.

Complainant had brought 619 steers to the Lutjens feedlot, and on Friday, February 4, Messrs. Reisinger and Larsen had counted approximately 380 in the three pens assigned to complainant, but on Saturday, February 5, the number removed by complainant's truckers from the same pens was only 353. About the cause of the difference between the 380 and the 353, the record does not support a finding.

Of the 566 animals removed by Western Iowa from the Lutjens feedlot on Friday, February 4, 331 were all heifers and belonged to another for whom it was acting as agent, leaving 235 others including 45 steers. Of the latter, some heifers died at Ruser's. The remaining heifers, and the steers, were taken to Sioux City, Iowa at the beginning of March and sold as set forth in the Findings of Fact above.

Western Iowa offered complainant seven times the average price obtained for the 45 steers. It made no effort to sort out the steers belonging to complainant and either return them or sell them separately, or even to ascertain how many there were.

The investigation report, complainant's evidence and the Lutjens deposition show clearly that 21 steers of complainant had been commingled with 38 steers of Western Iowa in the Lutjens Pen 6, that Western Iowa removed all the surviving steers from that pen, and that Western Iowa later sold all surviving steers from that pen, knowing that some belonged to complainant but without ascertaining how many. Thus Western Iowa could have identified how many of those survivors belonged to which of the parties, but did not, and made it impossible for this to be done. Under the circumstances the burden of proof of the latter fact is on Western Iowa. Campbell v. United States, 365 U.S. 85, 96 (1961); Old Ben Corp. v. Interior Bd. of Mine Op. App., 523 F.2d 25 (7 C. 1975); Fleming v. Harrison, 162 F.2d 789 (8 C. 1947); Trans-American Van Service, Inc. v. United States, 421 F. Supp. 308, 330–1 (N.D. Tex., Ft. Worth Div., 1976); United States v. Bull Steamship Line, 146 F. Supp. 210 (S.D.N.Y.), aff'd., 274 F.2d 877 (2 C. 1960); AmJur2d Evidence § 131; and C.J.S. Evidence § 113.

On that basis, Western Iowa will be ordered to pay complainant the value of complainant's animals removed from Pen 6 and later sold, determined in the only way possible from the evidence in the record, that is, the proportion of animals of the parties first put into Pen 6. There were a total of 59, 21 of complainant and 38 of Western Iowa. Western Iowa will be ordered to pay to complainant 21/59 of the net proceeds of sale of the surviving steers at Sioux City on that basis. "Damages are not rendered uncertain because they cannot be calculated with absolute exactness. It is sufficient if a reasonable basis of computation is afforded, although the result be only approximate." Eastman Co. v. Southern Photo Co., 273 U.S. 359, 379.

Investigation Report Exhibits B, C, and D show the gross proceeds of sale of the 45 steers in question, and the expenses of sale of those steers plus certain heifers not involved herein. We determine the net proceeds of sale of the steers sold on March 1 by dividing the expenses of sale ($1,416.90 plus $368.77) by the number of animals sold (155) which produces the expenses per animal ($11.52), then multiplying, then subtracting. Thus, as shown above in the Findings of Fact, $16,529.77 net proceeds were obtained for the 45 steers; 21/59 of that would be $5,883.48.

Respondents contended that we have no subject-matter jurisdiction in the case. If we do not have jurisdiction over the action at the Lutjens feedlot on February 4, we certainly have jurisdiction over the action of Western Iowa on the posted stockyard at Sioux City in March, selling animals belonging to complainant, and the disposition of the proceeds thereof. United States v. Donahue Bros., 59 F.2d 1019 (8 C. 1932).

Mr. Mactier testified (Tr. 95-6) credibly that respondent Sioux City Livestock had nothing to do with the transactions in dispute.

SAMUEL I. MORGAN v. PRODUCERS MARKETING ASSOCIATION, INC.
P&S Docket No. 6258. Decided February 10, 1986.

Preparation Proceedings under P&S Act.

In re Producers Marketing Association, Inc., P&S Docket No. 6258, Presiding Officer John J. Casey ruled in favor of complainant, Samuel I. Morgan. It was shown that complainant shipped certain animals to respondent for an agreed price. Respondent did not reject any of the animals but complained they were not as agreed-upon. So respondent deducted $1000 in payment to complainant. Presiding Officer determined that to do that one has to have a burden of proof and such a burden was not carried in this case. Presiding Officer consequently ordered respondent, Producer Marketing Association, Inc., to pay complainant, Samuel I. Morgan, $1000 with 13% interest until paid, with respondent's counter claim dismissed.

Complainant, pro se.
John L. Whittinger, Indianapolis, Indiana, for respondent.

Decision by John J. Casey, Presiding Officer.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, as amended, begun by a written complaint received on May 16, 1983, alleging in substance failure to pay in full for livestock purchased. The amount claimed was $1,000.00.

Copies of the complaint, and of an investigation report prepared by the Packers and Stockyards Administration of this Department and filed in this proceeding pursuant to the Rules of Practice, were served on respondent on July 15, 1983. A copy of the investigation report was served on complainant on July 14. Respondent filed an answer and counterclaim on August 5, which was served on complainant on August 13. Complainant filed a reply on September 8 which was served on respondent on September 16.

Since neither party requested an oral hearing, a written hearing was held as provided in the Rules of Practice. John J. Casey of the Office of the General Counsel of this Department acted as presiding officer. Complainant was not represented by counsel. Respondent was represented by John L. Whitinger, Esq., Indianapolis, Indiana. Complainant presented no evidence in response to the notice of opportunity to do so. Respondent presented an affidavit only of damages in support of the counterclaim. No brief was received.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant Samuel I. Morgan at all times material herein was engaged in business as a dealer buying and selling livestock for his own account in commerce, with a principal place of business at Ronceverte, West Virginia, and so registered with the Secretary under the Act.

2. Respondent Producers Marketing Association, Inc., a corporation, at all times material herein was engaged in business as a market agency buying livestock on commission and a dealer buying and selling livestock for its own account, in commerce, with a principal place of business at Indianapolis, Indiana, and so registered with the Secretary under the Act.

3. On or about March 14, 1983 complainant caused to be shipped, from a place in West Virginia to another place in Indiana designated by respondent, certain animals for an agreed price. Respondent communicated no timely rejection of them, but expressed a complaint about them and transmitted $1,000.00 less than the agreed price.

4. The complaint was filed within 90 days of accrual of the cause of action alleged therein.

CONCLUSIONS

It is undisputed that complainant caused to be shipped certain animals to the place designated by respondent for an agreed price, and that respondent paid $1,000.00 less than that price. It is further undisputed that respondent did not communicate any rejection of the animals, but complained that they were not what had been agreed-on.

The sort of animals agreed-on, the sort shipped, or the substance of respondent's customer's complaint about them, cannot be identified from the evidence in the record, or from the unsworn correspondence.

Under U.C.C. § 2-602(1) rejection of goods must be within a reasonable time after their delivery or tender and is ineffective unless the buyer seasonably notifies the seller. Under § 2-606(b) acceptance of goods occurs when the buyer fails to make an effective rejection but such acceptance does not occur until the buyer has had a reasonable opportunity to inspect them. Under § 2-607(1) and (4) the buyer must pay at the contract rate for any goods accepted, and the burden is on the buyer to establish any breach with respect to goods accepted.

So far as the record shows, respondent's customer was unhappy with the animals so respondent deducted $1,000.00 when it paid complainant. Anyone doing that has a burden of proof, and such a burden was not carried in this case.

On failure to pay in full for livestock purchased as an unfair or unjust practice within the meaning of the Act, see Section 409, 7 U.S.C. 228b, and Vance v. Reed, 495 F. Supp. 852, 39 Ag. Dec. 1117 (M.D. Tenn., Nashville Div., 1980).

Section 309 of the Act provides for reparation orders against market agencies and dealers for violation of certain provisions including Section 307 which includes a prohibition against unjust practices. See discussion, Rice v. Wilcox, 630 F.2d 586, 39 Ag. Dec. 883 (8 C. 1980).

On the jurisdiction to issue a reparation order on the basis of a single transaction see Hays Livestk. Com'n. Co., Inc. v. Maly Livestk. Com'n. Co., Inc., 498 F.2d 925, 33 Ag. This decision and order is the same as a decision and order issued by the Secretary of Agriculture, being issued pursuant to delegated authority, 7 CFR § 2.35, as authorized by Act of April 4, 1940, 54 Stat. 81, 7 U.S.C. 450c–450g. See also Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1953, 5 U.S.C., 1976 Ed., appendix p. 764. It constitutes "an order for the payment of money" within the meaning of section 309(f) of the Act, 7 U.S.C. 210(f), which provides for enforcement of such an order by court action instituted by complainant.

It is requested that copies of all pleadings filed by any party in any such suit be filed with the Hearing Clerk, USDA, Washington, D. C. 20250, for inclusion in the file on this reparation proceeding. It is further requested that if the construction of the Act, or the jurisdiction to issue this order, becomes an issue in any such suit, prompt notice of such fact be given to the Office of the General Counsel, USDA, Washington, D. ORDER Within 30 days of the date of this order, respondent Producers Marketing Association, Inc. shall pay to complainant Samuel I.

Morgan, with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from May 1, 1983 until paid, $1,000.00.

Respondent's counterclaim is hereby dismissed.

Decided January 22, 1986.

Failure to make full payment for fruit purchases.

In re August Battaglia Company, Inc., PACA Docket No. 2-7048, complainant shows respondent failed to account properly and make full payment for six lots of fruit from five shippers and underreporting and underpaying its principals an amount totaling $50,901.54. Full restitution has now been made to all shippers by respondent, whose license was suspended for 45 days by Administrative Law Judge John A. Campbell.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.; hereinafter referred to as the "Act"), instituted by a complaint filed on December 26, 1985, by the Director, Fruit and Vegetable Division, Agricultural Marketing Service, United States Department of Agriculture.

The complaint alleges that during the period September 1983 through November 1984, Respondent received on consignment, in interstate commerce, six lots of fruit from five shippers, but failed to account truly and correctly and to make full payment promptly to the shippers of the net proceeds realized from the sale of this fruit, in the total amount of $50,901.54. A copy of the Complaint was served upon Respondent. The Respondent and Complainant have now agreed to the entry of a Decision and Order as set forth herein. Therefore, pursuant to Section 1.138 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 1.138), the following Decision and Order is issued without further procedure or hearing.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. August Battaglia Company, Inc., (hereinafter "Respondent"), is an Illinois corporation whose mailing address is 2545 South Ashland Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60605.

2. Pursuant to the licensing provisions of the Act, license number 106488 was issued to Respondent on March 27, 1947. This license has been renewed annually, and is next subject to renewal on or before March 27, 1986.

3. The Secretary has jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter involved herein.

4. As set forth more fully in paragraph 5 of the Complaint, during the period September 1983 through November 1984, Respondent failed to account truly and correctly and make full payment promptly to five shippers of the net proceeds realized from the sale of fruit, all being perishable agricultural commodities, received and accepted in interstate commerce. Respondent underreported and underpaid its principals an amount totaling $50,901.54.

5. Respondent has made full restitution to the shippers of the amounts due with respect to the consignment transactions set forth in Finding of Fact 4.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent has committed willful, flagrant and repeated violations of Section 2 of the PACA (7 U.S.C. 499b), by failing to make full payment promptly with respect to the transactions set forth in Finding of Fact No. 4 above, for which the Order below is issued.

ORDER

Respondent's license is suspended for 45 days.
This order shall become effective January 22, 1986.
Copies hereof shall be served upon the parties.

In re: TRI-COUNTY WHOLESALE PRODUCE CO., INC. PACA Docket No. 2-6300. Decided January 17, 1986.

Employment violation of the Act.

The Judicial Officer reversed Judge Baker's order requiring respondent to cease and desist from permitting Robert Ferwerda from being in respondent's office or performing other duties for respondent. The Judicial Officer revoked respondent's license for continuing to employ Robert Ferwerda after respondent was advised that he could only be employed if an appropriate bond were filed (since Robert Ferwerda failed to pay reparation awards). Interpretation and legislative history of employment restrictions discussed. The harsh "employment" restrictions are consistent with the general pattern of imposing severe sanctions against persons who fail to pay for produce, irrespective of what excuses they offer. The Judicial Officer gives great weight to ALJ findings, but has reversed as to the facts, where appropriate. The word "any" is a broad and comprehensive term. Complainant need only prevail by a preponderance of the evidence. There is no showing that the Secretary unreasonably delayed in setting the amount of the bond, but that would not be a good defense in any event. Respondent cannot collaterally attack the determination as to the amount of the bond by way of defense in a disciplinary proceeding. The failure to publish the bond determination factors in the Federal Register would not be a valid defense, but even if the issue could be raised here, the factors considered in determining a bond are not substantive rules of general applicability or statements of general policy and, therefore, they are not required to be published. Actual notice of the bond determination factors would preclude reliance on any failure to comply with publication requirements, even if publication were required. Respondent's violations were willful, but willfulness is not required since respondent had received a warning letter. The definition of willful in TWA v. Thurston is inapplicable in our Department's disciplinary proceedings. The ALJ's cease and desist order is unlawful since there is no statutory authority in PACA for a cease and desist order, and, also, the statutory restriction as to employment of a restricted person is applicable only within 2 years after the issuance of a reparation award. Respondent's petition to reopen the hearing to take further evidence with respect to the meaning of "employment" and as to the determination of respondent's bond is denied.

Dennis Becker, for complainant.
Stephen P. McCarron, for respondent.

Decision by Donald A. Campbell, Judicial Officer.

DECISION AND ORDER

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.),[1] in which Administrative Law Judge Dorothea A. Baker (ALJ) filed an initial Decision and Order on August 2, 1985, ordering respondent to cease and desist from permitting Robert Ferwerda from being in respondent's office, answering respondent's telephone or engaging in conversations on the telephone or elsewhere relating to respondent's business, acting as agent on behalf of others relating to respondent, and hauling produce for respondent. The ALJ's order applies unless respondent has an appropriate employment bond as to Robert Ferwerda approved by the Secretary, and suspends respondent's license for 6 months if it violates the order.

On August 13, 1985, complainant appealed to the Judicial Officer, to whom final administrative authority to decide the Department's cases subject to 5 U.S.C. §§ 556 and 557 has been delegated (7 CFR § 2.35).[2] On August 28, 1985, respondent filed a cross-appeal and a motion to reopen the hearing.

Oral argument before the Judicial Officer, which is discretionary (7 CFR § 1.145(d)), was requested by respondent, but is denied inasmuch as the issues are not complex, the case has been thoroughly briefed, and oral argument would seem to serve no useful purpose.

[1] See generally Campbell, "The Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act Regulatory Program," in 1 Davidson, Agricultural Law, ch. 4 (1981 and Aug. 1985 Supp.), and Becker and Whitten, "Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act," in 10 Harl, Agricultural Law, ch. 72 (1980).

[2] The position of the Judicial Officer was established pursuant to the Act of April 4, 1940 (7 U.S.C. §§ 450c–450g), and Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1953, 18 Fed. Reg. 3219 (1953), reprinted in 5 U.S.C. app. at 1068 (1982). The Department's present Judicial Officer was appointed in January 1971, having been involved with the Department's regulatory programs since 1949 (including 3 years' trial litigation; 10 years' appellate litigation relating to appeals from the decisions of the prior Judicial Officer; and 8 years as administrator of the Packers and Stockyards Act regulatory program).

The principal issue in this case is whether Robert Ferwerda was "employed" by respondent after March 22, 1982, which is 30 days after respondent was notified by the Department that it could not employ Robert Ferwerda without an employment bond approved by the Secretary. Employment is defined as "any affiliation of any person with the business operations of a licensee, with or without compensation, including ownership or self-employment" (7 U.S.C. § 499a(10)). For the reasons set forth below, I have found and concluded that Robert Ferwerda was employed by respondent from August of 1981 to the date of the oral hearing in this case (February 13-15, 1984), and that respondent's license should be revoked.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Respondent, Tri-County Wholesale Produce Co., Inc. (hereinafter Tri-County), has a business address of 1202 Hammondville Road, Office No. 15, Pompano Beach, Florida 33060.

2. Respondent was first licensed on September 8, 1981. Its license has been renewed annually, and is next subject to renewal on or before September 8, 1986.

3. On November 23, 1979, a license to do business under the PACA was issued to Robert A. Ferwerda, doing business as Four Seasons Wholesale Produce (hereinafter Four Seasons). This license was renewed annually, but terminated on November 23, 1981, when that firm failed to pay the annual license fee.

4. Robert A. Ferwerda was the sole owner of Four Seasons.

5. Six reparation awards were issued against Robert A. Ferwerda, doing business as Four Seasons, between December 16, 1981, and August 6, 1982. All of these awards have remained unpaid to date.

6. On January 21, 1982, the Department wrote a letter to Robert A. Ferwerda advising him that the reparation awards had not been paid and stating:

> The purpose of this letter is to call your attention to the fact that until these awards are satisfied, you are not eligible to obtain a license under the Act. Furthermore, you cannot be employed by or affiliated in any capacity with any other licensee under the Act for a period of two years from the date of the orders without the approval of the Department.

7. The business address of Four Seasons during the time it was doing business was 1202 Hammondville Road, Office No. 15, Pompano Beach, Florida 33060. It ceased doing business in July 1981. In August 1981, Tri-County began doing business at the same address. When Tri-County began to do business, it took over most of the better accounts of Four Seasons. Robert A. Ferwerda became an employee of Tri-County with many responsibilities with respect to the daily management of that organization. The only function which he did not perform which he had performed as the owner of Four Seasons was making the final financial decisions as to dealing with the accounts payable and accounts receivable. He was responsible for the purchase and sale of produce, including determining the price at which goods would be purchased and sold. He was responsible for the hiring and firing of employees. He supervised all of the employees in respondent firm. He made decisions with respect to the transportation of commodities. He managed the physical receipt and disposition of produce at the business location. He also performed such other managerial tasks as were necessary for the proper carrying on of the day to day business of respondent.

8. Robert A. Ferwerda was not, however, an officer, director, or owner of any stock in Tri-County. Rather, his father, Arend Ferwerda, was the owner, president, and a director of respondent. In addition, Sheila Quick, a bookkeeper with respondent, was secretary-treasurer and a director.

9. In a letter dated February 16, 1982, which was received by Tri-County on February 19, 1982, the Secretary of Agriculture notified respondent that Robert A. Ferwerda was not eligible to be employed by respondent unless there were posted an employment bond in an amount satisfactory to the Secretary to assure that respondent would meet its obligations under the PACA. The letter requested certain information from respondent so that the Secretary could determine an appropriate amount of bond. It also provided a notice that if Robert A. Ferwerda continued to be employed by respondent after 30 days from the receipt of the letter without the posting of a required bond and getting the approval of the Secretary, the license of respondent could be in danger. The letter stated:

> Gentlemen:
> According to the records of the Department, there have been several reparation awards issued under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act against Four Seasons Wholesale Produce, Pompano Beach, Florida. These awards have not been satisfied.

The records of the Department show that Robert A. Ferwerda was the individual owner of Four Seasons Wholesale Produce. It is our understanding that Mr. Robert A. Ferwerda is currently employed by you.

Section 8(b) of the Act provides that when a reparation order is issued against a person and remains unpaid, no licensee can employ any such person for a period of two years from the date of such order except with the approval of the Secretary.

Before the Department will approve of the continued affiliation with the firm, it will be necessary for you to furnish a surety bond in an amount satisfactory to the Secretary. In order to determine the amount of bond to be posted, the following information should be furnished:

1. Approximate value of your produce transactions in fresh or frozen fruits and vegetables during an average month;
2. The percentage of business that is handled on consignment or joint account;
3. The amount of credit that is incurred;
4. A detailed description of the duties and responsibilities performed by Mr. Ferwerda in conducting your business.

   In this description, advise if he will perform his duties only at your headquarters' office. If not, state the extent of time he will be at other locations;
5. The extent of supervision he will receive and under whose supervision he will perform his duties at any location;
6. The title or position he holds;
7. The salary or compensation he will receive.

Pursuant to Section 8(b) of the Act, notice is hereby given that after thirty days from the receipt of this letter, you cannot continue the employment unless the approval of the Department has been obtained. To continue such employment after that date without posting the required bond and obtaining the approval of the Department could endanger your license.

> Please let us know what you intend to do about the continued employment of Mr. Ferwerda by February 26, 1982.

10. (a) In an attempt to obtain a bond, respondent furnished the requested information to the Department by a letter dated February 25, 1982, which was received March 2, 1982. On April 15, 1982, a PACA employee telephoned Arend Ferwerda and advised that a bond in the neighborhood of $100,000 would be required. Arend Ferwerda seemed shocked at the amount of the bond, and stated that Robert was not currently working for him. Arend Ferwerda further explained that Robert's reparation complaints might be satisfied within 3 months. Arend Ferwerda asked for a listing of the reparation awards and pending complaints against Robert Ferwerda.

(b) A letter listing the complaints and reparation awards against Robert Ferwerda was sent to Tri-County on April 15, 1982, the same day as the telephone conversation, and the Department's letter of April 15 concluded "Please keep us advised of your intentions." That letter was received by respondent on April 19, 1982. When respondent failed to keep the Department advised of his intentions, as requested in the Department's letter of April 15, 1982, the Department again wrote respondent on May 19, 1982, referring to the April 15 letter and stating "To date, we have not received a reply and again call this matter to your attention."

(c) On June 4, 1982, Arend Ferwerda wrote to the Department stating that he had not "received any definite amount of the employment bond," and asking questions as to the exact amount and nature of the required bond. In his letter of June 4, 1982, Arend Ferwerda stated:

> Robert Ferwerda is not employed by us at this time. His last check for working was the week of March 25, 1982.
> As soon as we can secure the above information and are able to obtain the bond we would like to re-employ him.

(d) On September 24, 1982, the Department wrote a letter to Arend Ferwerda advising him that a surety bond in the amount of $125,000 is required to cover the employment of Robert Ferwerda. The letter enclosed a bond form and gave respondent additional information as to the nature of the bond. The letter concluded: "To employ Mr. Robert Ferwerda without meeting these requirements could endanger your license."

11. However, respondent did not file a bond and did not in fact terminate the "employment" of Robert A. Ferwerda prior to the hearing in this case. Instead, it kept Robert A. Ferwerda in its

best copy available

"employ" under changed circumstances after March 25, 1982. Prior to March 25, 1982, Robert Ferwerda was receiving $300 per week salary from respondent. Subsequently, his affiliation with respondent changed somewhat. He was no longer in charge of the hiring and firing of employees. However, he continued to make produce purchases on behalf of respondent up to the morning of the hearing (February 14, 1984). He steered accounts to Tri-County. He was given the function of managing a complex of offices, owned by his father, Arend Ferwerda, including the business space occupied by respondent. He was furnished an office upstairs from the actual space occupied by respondent, but Robert spent a great deal of his time in respondent's office. He often received produce during the early hours of the morning. He consulted with respect to special packaging needs of respondent, negotiated price adjustments, and made decisions as to whether produce should be accepted or rejected. He and his family continued to enjoy coverage under the group health insurance policy of respondent, and he was, indeed, the most heavily covered person under the group life insurance portion of the policy of Tri-County.

12. Around March 25, 1982, in consultation with his father, Arend Ferwerda, Robert Ferwerda incorporated a trucking business, Bob's Transfer Service. Under the name of Bob's Transfer Service, Robert Ferwerda picked up produce to be delivered from the local area around Pompano Beach to respondent. He delivered such produce to respondent. He frequently used trucks belonging to Tri-County for this purpose. He drew from Tri-County $300 a week as an advance on the money he was earning for performing a pickup and delivery service of produce. Such amount was raised to $500 per week approximately January 1, 1983. The $300 amount was, of course, the same amount as he received as salary prior to March 25, 1982.

I.

A.

Section 8(b) of the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act authorizes the Secretary to suspend or revoke the license of any licensee who, after notice, continues to "employ" any person against whom there is an unpaid reparation award issued within 2 years without furnishing and maintaining a surety bond satisfactory to the Secretary. Specifically, § 8(b) of the Act provides (7 U.S.C. § 499h(b), emphasis added):

(b) Unlawful employment of certain persons; restrictions; bond assuring compliance; approval of employment without bond; change in amount of bond; payment of increased amount; penalties

Except with the approval of the Secretary, no licensee shall employ any person, or any person who is or has been responsibly connected with any person—

(1) whose license has been revoked or is currently suspended by order of the Secretary;

(2) who has been found after notice and opportunity for hearing to have committed any flagrant or repeated violation of section 499b of this title, but this provision shall not apply to any case in which the license of the person found to have committed such violation was suspended and the suspension period has expired or is not in effect; or

(3) against whom there is an unpaid reparation award issued within two years, subject to his right of appeal under section 499g(c) of this title.

The Secretary may approve such employment at any time following nonpayment of a reparation award, or after one year following the revocation or finding of flagrant or repeated violation of section 499b of this title, if the licensee furnishes and maintains a surety bond in form and amount satisfactory to the Secretary as assurance that such licensee's business will be conducted in accordance with this chapter and that the licensee will pay all reparation awards, subject to its right of appeal under section 499g(c) of this title, which may be issued against it in connection with transactions occurring within four years following the approval. The Secretary may approve employment without a surety bond after the expiration of two years from the effective date of the applicable disciplinary order. The Secretary, based on changes in the nature and volume of business conducted by the licensee, may require an increase or authorize a reduction in the amount of the bond. A licensee who is notified by the Secretary to provide a bond in an increased amount shall do so within a reasonable time to be specified by the Secretary, and if the licensee fails to do so the approval of employment shall automatically terminate. The Secretary may, after thirty days notice and an opportu- > nity for a hearing, suspend or revoke the license of any licensee who, after the date given in such notice, continues to employ any person in violation of this section.

The terms "employ" and "employment" were defined by an amendment to the Act approved October 1, 1962, as follows (7 U.S.C. § 499a(10)):

> (10) The terms "employ" and "employment" mean any affiliation of any person with the business operations of a licensee, with or without compensation, including ownership or self-employment.

The legislative history of the amendatory legislation adding those definitions states (H.R. Rep. No. 1546, 87th Cong., 2d Sess. 4 (1962)):

> This section of the bill adds to the first section of the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act definitions of "responsibility connected" and "employ" or "employment." These new definitions are necessary by reason of the rewriting of the provisions relating to sections 4(b), 4(c), and 8(b) of the act. These terms, although heretofore used in the act, were not defined. Their definition will give them specific meaning, thus avoiding possible confusion as to interpretations. The defining of "employ" and "employment" to include ownership or self-employment makes it clear that the provisions of section 8(b), as amended, apply to owners, as well as others employed in the business. To fail to include owners would defeat the whole purpose of this provision of the act. Heretofore the phrase used in connection with § 8(b) was "employ in a responsible position" and considerable difficulty has been encountered in delineating what constituted a responsible position.

B.

The Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, as originally enacted in 1930, contained no provisions restricting the employment of a person whose license was suspended or revoked, or who failed to pay a reparation award. The first employment restrictions were added by an amendment adding § 8(b) approved August 20, 1937, which prohibited the employment "in a responsible position" of a person whose license was revoked or who was responsibly connected with a firm whose license was revoked. After 1 year following the revocation, such employment was permissible if a satisfactory bond was filed. The 1937 amendment provided (50 Stat. 725, 730 (1937)):

"(b) The Secretary may, after thirty days' notice and an opportunity for a hearing, revoke the license of any commission merchant, dealer, or broker who, after the date given in such notice, continues to employ in any responsible position any individual whose license was revoked or who was responsibly connected with any firm, partnership, association, or corporation whose license has been revoked. Employment of such individual by a licensee in any responsible position after one year following the revocation of any such license shall be conditioned upon the filing by the employing licensee of a bond, in such reasonable sum as may be fixed by the Secretary, or other assurance satisfactory to the Secretary that its business will be conducted in accordance with the provisions of this Act;

In 1956, the employment restriction was made applicable to a person whose license is suspended, or who was responsibly connected with a firm whose license is under suspension. The 1956 amendment to § 8(b) of the Act is as follows (70 Stat. 726, 727 (1956)):

"(b) The Secretary may, after thirty days' notice and an opportunity for a hearing, suspend or revoke the license of any commission merchant, dealer, or broker who, after the date given in such notice, continues to employ in any responsible position any individual whose license has been revoked or is under suspension or who was responsibly connected with any firm, partnership, association, or corporation whose license has been revoked or is under suspension. Employment of an individual whose license has been revoked or is under suspension for failure to pay a reparation award or who was responsibly connected with any firm, partnership, association, or corporationwhose license has been revoked or is under suspension for failure to pay a reparation award after one year following the revocation or suspension of any such license may be permitted by the Secretary upon the filing by the employing licensee of a bond, of such nature and amount as may be determined by the Secretary, or other assurance satisfactory to the Secretary that its business will be conducted in accordance with the provisions of this Act;"

Since the Act had previously been amended in 1934 to provide for the automatic suspension of the license of a licensee who failed to pay a reparation award or file an appeal for judicial review (48 Stat. 584, 588 (1934); 7 U.S.C. § 499g(d)), the 1956 amendment made the Act more restrictive than the 1937 amendment, discussed above, as to the employment of a person who had not paid a reparation award.

The legislative history of the 1956 amendatory legislation states (S. Rep. No. 2507, 84th Cong., 2d Sess. 4 (1956)):

> Section 8(b) would authorize the Secretary to suspend the license of a person who employs in any responsible position an individual whose license is under suspension. In effect, this would place restrictions on suspended licensees comparable to those now in effect for revocations, and it would serve to eliminate the effectiveness of dummy organizations and other such devices that might be set up to circumvent the suspension penalty.

In 1962, § 8(b) of the Act was amended to contain the provisions presently in effect, which are set forth in § I(A) of these conclusions (76 Stat. 673, 675–76 (1962); 7 U.S.C. § 499h(b)). The 1962 amendment makes the Act much more harsh, in one respect, with respect to the employment of a person who fails to pay a reparation award. Under the 1962 amendment, such a person cannot be employed in any capacity, without a bond, whereas the previous restrictions were applicable only to employment "in any responsible position." Moreover, at the same time that the employment restrictions were made more harsh, in this respect, the definitions of "employ" and "employment," discussed above, were added, defining employment as "any affiliation of any person with the business operations of a licensee, with or without compensation, including ownership or self-employment" (7 U.S.C. § 499a(10)).[3]

The legislative history of the 1962 amendatory legislation, which enacted the provisions of § 8(b) presently in effect, states (H.R. Rep. No. 1546, 87th Cong., 2d Sess. 8 (1962)):

> Section 11 amends section 8(b) of the act to clarify and make more effective the provisions of the act with respect to employment by licensees of persons who have been found to have violated the act or failed to pay reparation awards under the act, as well as persons responsibly connected with such persons. It prohibits the employment of these persons by a licensee without the approval of the Secretary and prescribes standards with respect to the conditions for such approval, authorizing the approval of such employment upon the furnishing and maintaining of a surety bond satisfactory to the Secretary as assurance that the licensee's business will be conducted in conformance with the act and all reparation awards paid. Employment under such conditions may be approved, with respect to unpaid reparation awards, at any time and, with respect to persons found guilty of flagrant or repeated violations of the act, after 1 year, with authority in the Secretary to approve employment of the latter persons without a surety bond after the expiration of 2 years. It is further provided that the Secretary may increase the amount of bond required and that failure to comply with his order in that regard shall result in automatic termination of approval. Any licensee hiring a person without the approval of the Secretary in violation of this provision, after notice and opportunity for hearing, may have his license suspended or revoked. At present the act applies only to the employment of a person in a responsible position. This has caused serious difficulties due to the problem of delineating what constitutes a responsible position under all circumstances and the difficulty of ascertaining the true nature of the employee's relationship with the licensee. Under the present provisions of the act the restrictions against employment are directed specifically to persons whose licenses had been revoked or suspended and persons responsibly connected therewith. The bill extends such restrictions to persons whose licenses could have been revoked or suspended if they had had active licenses. As amended, section 8(b) would prohibit employment of persons covered by it unless such employment is approved by the Secretary; whereas at present it prohibits such employment only after notice by the Secretary.

From the foregoing, it is clear that Congress regarded a person who fails to pay a reparation award as a defiled person who is likely to contaminate any licensee whose business operations he becomes affiliated with in any manner, with or without compensation, including ownership or self-employment. Congress prohibited any affiliation (with or without compensation) of such a defiled person with a licensee unless (i) the affiliation is approved by the Secretary, and (ii) the licensee furnishes a bond in form and amount satisfactory to the Secretary.

The harsh "employment" (i.e., affiliation) restrictions involving a person who fails to pay a reparation award, discussed in §§ I(A) and (B), supra, are consistent with the general pattern of the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act regulatory program. Severe sanctions are imposed against persons who fail to pay for produce, irrespective of what excuses they offer.

Failure to pay for produce is a very serious violation of the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act which results in an order revoking the license of the offender [4] since it is the "goal [of the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act] that only financially responsible persons should be engaged in the perishable agricultural commodities industry," [5] and it is the policy of this Department to impose severe sanctions for serious violations of any of the regulatory programs administered by the Department to serve as an effective deterrent not only to the respondents but also to other potential violators.[6] This policy has been followed in all of the Department's disciplinary proceedings in recent years.

The basis for the Department's severe sanction policy is set forth at great length in numerous decisions, e.g., In re Worsley, 33 Agric. Dec. 1547, 1556–71 (1974),[7] which is set forth as an appendix to this decision.[8] The Department's sanction policy is also discussed at length in In re Esposito, 38 Agric. Dec. 613, 624–65 (1979).

"Failure to pay violations not only adversely affect the party who is not paid for produce, but such violations have a tendency to snowball. 'On occasions, one licensee fails to pay another licensee who is then unable to pay a third licensee.' This could have serious repercussions to producers, licensees and consumers." [9]

Whenever (a) the Secretary determines, as provided in section 499f of this title, that any commission merchant, dealer, or broker has violated any of the provisions of section 499b of this title . . . the Secretary may publish the facts and circumstances of such violation and/or, by order, suspend the license of such offender for a period not to exceed ninety days, except that, if the violation is flagrant or repeated, the Secretary may, by order, revoke the license of the offender.

[7] The Department's severe sanction policy did not originate with Worsley, but, rather, was mentioned briefly in the first decision issued by the present Judicial Officer, In re Henner, 30 Agric. Dec. 1151, 1263–64 (1971), and was further developed in numerous other decisions before it was finalized in In re Miller, 33 Agric. Dec. 53, 64–80 (1974), aff'd per curiam, 498 F.2d 1088 (5th Cir. 1974).

If the violator who fails to pay for produce does not have a license in effect, an order is issued finding that the person has engaged in repeated or flagrant violations of the Act,[10] which has the same effect on the violator and on persons responsibly connected with the violator as a license revocation.[11]

Specifically, as a result of a finding that a firm has committed flagrant and repeated violations of the Act, the firm cannot again become licensed under the Act for 2 years after the effective date of the Order issued in the case (7 U.S.C. § 499d(b); see, also, 7 U.S.C. § 499d(c)). Similarly, the persons "responsibly connected" with the firm cannot be licensed under the Act for 2 years (7 U.S.C. § 499d(b); see, also, 7 U.S.C. § 499d(c)); and they cannot work for another licensee under the Act for 1 year (7 U.S.C. § 499h(b)). After 1 year, the Secretary may approve their employment by another licensee if the licensee furnishes a satisfactory bond; after 2 years, the Secretary may approve their employment by another licensee without a bond (7 U.S.C. § 499h(b)).

In Finer Foods Sales Co. v. Block, 708 F.2d 774, 781-82 (D.C. Cir. 1983), the court held that the Judicial Officer properly interpreted the Act in refusing to consider excuses for failure to pay in determining whether payment violations occurred or whether they were willful, stating:

> The petitioner argues that the Judicial Officer improperly refused to consider various "mitigating factors" that, according to it, should have been viewed as excusing its failure to pay its debts. These include the allegedly relatively small amount the petitioner owed, the absence of previous violations by the petitioner, and the lack of "devious or dishonest practices by the petitioner." In refusing to consider these factors, the Judicial Officer pointed out that "it has repeatedly been held under the Act that all excuses are routinely rejected in determining whether payment violations occurred or whether violations were wilful since 'the Act calls for payment—not excuses.' " Quoting In re Kafcsak, 39 Agric. Dec. 683, 686 (1980). See also In re Carlton F. Stowe, Inc., 41 Agric. Dec. 1116, 1129 (1982).

The Judicial Officer properly interpreted the Act. Section 2(4), 7 U.S.C. § 499b(4) (1976), is unequivocal. It makes it unlawful for a licensee to "fail or to refuse . . . to . . . make full payment promptly." As Congress noted in amending the Act in 1956, "The Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act is admittedly and intentionally a 'tough' law." S.Rep. No. 2507, 84th Cong., 2d Sess. (citing H.Rep. No. 1196, 84th Cong., 1st Sess.), reprinted in 1956 U.S. Code Cong. & Ad.News 3699, 3701. The Secretary explained the reason for this strict requirement in In re Columbus Fruit Co., 40 Agric. Dec. 109, 114 (1981), aff'd mem. 41 Agric. Dec. 89 (D.C. Cir. No. 81-1446, Jan. 19, 1982):

> > Failure to pay violations not only adversely affect the party who is not paid for produce, but such violations have a tendency to snowball. "On occasions, one licensee fails to pay another licensee who is then unable to pay a third licensee." This could have serious repercussions to producers, licensees and consumers.
> Quoting In re John H. Norman & Sons Distrib. Co., 37 Agric. Dec. 705, 720 (1978).

> In sum, the "goal of the [Perishable Agricultural] Commodities Act [is] that only financially responsible persons should be engaged in the businesses subject to the Act." Zwick v. Freeman, 373 F.2d 110, 117 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 389 U.S. 835, 88 S. > The strict policy of the Secretary that all excuses for nonpayment are disregarded furthers this goal. Under the Act a licensee is required to conduct his business in a manner that insures that he pays his bills fully and promptly. If he fails to do so, he violates the Act. For this reason, alleged mitigating circumstances are irrelevant.

In a Congressional report as to the 1962 amendments to the Act, discussed above in § I(B), it is stated (H.R. Rep. No. 1546, 87th Cong., 2d Sess. 3 (1962)):

> Testimony of the shippers, brokers, wholesalers, and other elements of the trade in fresh and frozen fruits and vegetables who have been operating under this act is enthusiastically and almost unanimously in its support. It has brought a high degree of stability and responsibility to an industry which had frequently been beset by instability and irresponsibility. It is regarded as one of our most successful regulatory programs.[12]

Congress further recognized the peculiar vulnerability of producers of perishable agricultural commodities, and the importance of the Department's regulatory programs to assure payment for these commodities, in the recent 1978 Bankruptcy Act amendments, in which it is provided that disciplinary sanctions may be issued under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act for failing to pay for produce where there has been a bankruptcy. The Bankruptcy Act provides (11 U.S.C. § 525):

> Except as provided in Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930 (7 U.S.C. 499a-499s), the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921 (7 U.S.C. 181-229), and section 1 of the Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the Department of Ag-

II.

It is the consistent practice of the Judicial Officer to give great weight to the findings by Administrative Law Judges since they have the opportunity to see and hear the witnesses testify.[14] However, in some circumstances, the Judicial Officer has reversed as to the facts, particularly where documentary evidence or inferences to be drawn from the facts are involved.[15]

In the present case, it is not necessary to squarely disagree with the ALJ's findings since she found and concluded that Robert Ferwerda's "activities do indicate a minimum association or affiliation with the Respondent corporation, but not of the flagrant or deliberate type" (Initial Decision at 35). That is all that is necessary to constitute "employment," as defined in the Act. "Employment" includes "any affiliation of any person with the business operations of a licensee, with or without compensation" (see § I(A), supra, emphasis added). The word "any" is a broad and comprehensive term (United States v. Rosenwasser, 323 U.S. 360, 362-63 (1945); FDIC v. Winton, 131 F.2d 780, 782 (6th Cir. 1974); Kuhlman v. W.A. Fletcher Co., 20 F.2d 465, 468 (3d Cir. 1927)) that includes all kinds of affiliation—whether minimum or maximum; whether deliberate or not.

The ALJ further found (Initial Decision at 22):

> 58. Unknowingly, the Respondent violated the Act, as interpreted and administered by the Complainant, but this was not wilfull, and was caused more by the actions of Bob Ferwerda, rather than the Respondent.

Since complainant interprets the Act in accordance with the statutory definition referred to in § I(A), supra, the ALJ's findings and conclusions actually support my findings and conclusions that respondent continued to "employ" Robert Ferwerda after respondent received notice that to continue such employment after March 21, 1982, could endanger its license.

The admissions of Robert Ferwerda and the testimony of five trade witnesses prove conclusively that respondent continued to "employ" Robert Ferwerda after receiving the Department's notice.[16] For example, Mark Levigne testifed that he sold mushrooms to respondent for Florida Mushroom, and that "Bob Ferwerda" (i.e., Robert Ferwerda) was the only person at Tri-County who gave him the orders, or who decided whether the quantity or quality was acceptable. Specifically, he testified (Tr. 437-41):

Q. August, 1983, to the present, you've been with Florida Mushroom; is that not true?

A. Yes.

Q. What are your duties with Florida Mushroom?

A. There again, I'm a truck driver. I have all the same duties. I might be going in as office manager in a few weeks.

Q. Do you, in fact, still sell mushrooms to customers?

A. Yes, I still do all the same things.

Q. Have you had occasion to call Tri-County?

A. Every day.

Q. Every day you've called Tri-County?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you the representative who calls Tri-County for Florida Mushroom? Does anybody else?

A. When I'm out sick or I'm on the road, somebody else will do it.

Q. When you call Tri-County, who will you talk to?

A. Bob.

Q. Is that Bob Ferwerda?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you talk to anybody else?

A. Well, I try . . . Well, nobody else gives an order. I talk to other people but nobody else gives an order.

Q. If you try to give an order to somebody else what happens?

A. Well, if I try to give one, nobody else really knows.

Q. Do they, then call someone else to call you back?

A. Well, Bob calls me back.

Q. Bob calls you back? And do you deliver any mushroom to Florida Mushroom?

A. I work for Florida Mushroom.

Q. Excuse me, Tri-County?

A. Yes.

Q. How many times?

A. Between four and six times a week.

Q. Almost every day?

A. Yes.

Q. You're the primary deliverer?

A. In Broward County.

Q. And do you unload the truck yourself?

A. Myself.

Q. And what time do you do that?

A. 5:00, quarter to 5:00. 5:30 o'clock in the morning.

Q. Is that right? And who do you see?

A. Again, the receivers on the dock.

Q. Is Bob ever there?

A. Yes, Bob's there.

Q. Every day?

A. Yes, every day.

Q. And what happens with the questions in respect to quantity or quality?

A. Again, it's up to Bob what they keep or send back.

Q. Do you have discussion with him?

A. Yes.

Q. And when is the last time you saw Bob at Tri-County?

A. I'd say this morning. This morning I was late. I'd say 5:30 o'clock.

Q. 5:30 o'clock this morning? Did you talk with Bob?

A. No, this morning I didn't.

Q. There were no problems?

A. No problems.

Q. When is the time before that you saw him?

A. Yesterday morning.

Q. And did you talk to him yesterday morning?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you talk to him about?

A. It was a quarter to 5:00 o'clock when I got there. He was the only one there and so he asked me to leave the mushrooms there and he couldn't sign the ticket.

Q. What? He couldn't sign the ticket?

A. That's what he said.

Q. Did you ask him?

A. He said: You can leave the mushrooms here but I couldn't sign the ticket. So in that case I signed it.

Q. What do you mean, you signed it?

A. I signed it to show that they were delivered.

Q. You mean that you signed it to show that you had delivered it? Does that happen frequently?

A. Yes. A lot of my stops . . .

Q. Have you had any other instances when you stopped at Tri-County when nobody has been there but Bob?

A. Yes.

Q. How often does that happen?

A. Not too often.

Q. And when it does, what happens with respect to the invoices or sales tickets.

A. I sign it.

Q. Now, normally when you go to Tri-County and somebody other than Bob is there to receive it, is the sales ticket signed by those people?

A. Yes.

Mark Levigne further testified that Robert Ferwerda's activities for Tri-County were the same when Mark Levigne previously worked for New Garden Supply and C&G Mushroom (Tr. 429–37). He testified (Tr. 435):

> Q. What if there were a disagreement [at Tri-County] as to the quantity of the mushrooms. What would happen?
>
> A. Well, that's happened a couple of times.
>
> There was a disagreement about the quality or the quantity then the receiver would always go get Bob [i.e., Robert Ferwerda] to either reject it, tell me something about it, or something to that nature.
>
> Q. So you talked to Bob about it if there was a discrepancy?
> A. Yes.

Similar testimony was given by Terrance Polcyn, who worked for C&G Mushroom and New Garden Supply. He testified that he talked to Robert (Bob) Ferwerda as to respondent's orders for mushrooms, and that Robert Ferwerda would resolve any discrepancies as to mushrooms (Tr. 355–425). Mr. Polcyn testified (Tr. 364–67, 423):

> Q. Now, during the period June, 1982, through December, 1982, did you have occasion to sell mushrooms to C&G. Sorry, beg your pardon, to Tri-County Wholesale Produce Company?
>
> A. Yeah, we dealt with Tri-County.
>
> Q. Did you initiate phone calls to Tri-County?
>
> A. Yes, sir.
>
> Q. Did Tri-County initiate phone calls to you?
>
> A. Yes, sir.
>
> Q. Were the phone calls initiated by Tri-County to you for the purpose of purchasing mushrooms?
>
> A. Yes, sir.
>
> Q. Who called you?
>
> A. Bob Ferwerda.
> Q. How do you know it was Bob Ferwerda?

A. Since the initial meeting and contact over the long period of time. I know his voice on the phone and I know him personally.

Q. And how many times were you called during that six months period, approximately?

A. I couldn't even say. It was numerous conversations. Whether I would initiate the call or Mr. Ferwerda. Mainly I would initiate calls to that office.

Q. Approximately how many sales a week did C&G Mushroom make to Tri-County.

A. Probably two or three. We would go into the market at least five times a week.

Q. Two or three sales of mushrooms a week?

A. Yes.

Q. In that respect, sir, did you ever deal with anybody else in the sale of mushrooms to Tri-County from June, 1982, through December, 1982, other than Bob Ferwerda.

A. I had talked to other people, the girls, the secretary in regard to orders and things like this, the yes or no would come from Bob Ferwerda.

Q. When you talked to other people in the business, what happened?

A. Well, they would—if Mr. Ferwerda wasn't in, I'd call back, or he would return my call.

Q. And if he were in, what would they do?

A. I'd talk to him.

Q. Did they refer you to him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I see. Did you go down to the place of business at Tri-County from June, 1982 to December, 1982?

A. Yes.

Q. And who did you see when you were there?

A. Bob Ferwerda.

Q. What time of the day, sir?

A. Various times, early morning. I'd generally try to get there before 11:00 o'clock.

Q. And what would Bob Ferwerda be doing?

A. Just working.

Q. What do you mean by just working? Describe specifically.

A. Sitting at the desk or answering the phone.

Q. Sitting at what desk? Can you describe the place of business?

A. Yes. Well, you have your loading platform. Facing the building off to the left is a small office.

Q. Is that in the front or the back of the building?

A. The front of the building.

Q. Is that where he was sitting? In that office?

A. Yeah. It was an office with a couple of chairs and one desk. Maybe two desks, but there would be one desk facing the door, which is where he sat.

Q. I see. If you had any problems who did you talk to?

A. Mr. Ferwerda.

Q. If you had problems with respect to quantity of mushrooms delivered; with whom did you speak?

A. Mr. Ferwerda.

Q. If you had problems with respect to quality of mushrooms; with whom did you speak?

A. Mr. Ferwerda. In regard to exchange of mushrooms or any monetary difference or anything it would be—other people would maybe call and say the product's not as good or this or that, but basically, in regard to getting a business decision, it would be Mr. Ferwerda.

Q. And when you say Mr. Ferwerda, you mean Bob; do you not? You do not mean Arend Ferwerda?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know Arend Ferwerda?

A. I know that's the gentleman over there. I believe I met him one time.

Q. Did you ever deal with Arend Ferwerda?

A. No, sir.

A. The only—on payment, if there was a discrepancy in regard to—a controversy on how many were ordered and how many were delivered or quality or price cutting, it would have to go and be initialed by Bob before the bookkeeper would pay it. In other words he would have the say so into whether it would be paid as invoiced or as lower.

Harold Brick, sales manager for Central American Produce Company, signed an affidavit written in his own handwriting on March 15, 1983, in which he states that "I have been selling Tri County produce thru Bob Ferwerda from December 1982 to March 1983 melons from Central America" (CX 1). His testimony supports his affidavit (Tr. 13-30). He testified (Tr. 14-15):

Q. I ask you to reflect upon the period of time from January, 1982, through December, 1982. Did your business have occasion to sell goods to a company known as Tri-County Wholesale Produce, Incorporated?

A. The dates I don't remember but we did do business with Tri-County.

Q. In 1982, sir?

A. I really don't remember the dates, the years.

Q. I'd like to show you a document that you signed and ask if this will refresh your recollection?

A. If I made a statement and signed it, then it was the fact then.

* * * * * * *

Q. Have you read the statement that you've been handed, sir?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Do you recognize it?

A. Yes.

Q. And what is it?

A. It's a statement of December 12, '82 to March, '83.

Q. And does that refresh your recollection with regard to sales to Tri-County Produce?

A. Yes. If I signed that, and I did, then that was the case at the time. That was over a year ago.

Q. Now, sir, with whom did you deal in Tri-County?

A. Bob Ferwerda.

Q. And do you recognize Bob Ferwerda when you see him?

A. Yes, I do.

* * * * * * *

Mr. McCarron: We'll stipulate as to Bob Ferwerda. It is the Bob Ferwerda that we're here about.

Frederick Rohlfing, owner of Jet Fresh Produce, signed an affidavit on March 23, 1983, written in his own handwriting in which he states that he sold produce to Tri-County Produce which was ordered by "Bob" (Cx 3). His testimony supports his affidavit (Tr. 46–56). He testified (Tr. 48–49):

Q. Think back in your dealing with Tri-County Produce. Who did you talk to in that business, that place of business?

A. The person who would call me for the order.

Q. Did somebody call you?

A. Well, sometimes call or . . .

Q. Sometimes he called you? Or sometimes you?

A. No, I never called him.

Q. Who would that person be?

A. I had Bob Ferwerda call me.

Q. How do you know it was Bob Ferwerda?

A. Well, I've met him before.

Mr. Becker: Will counsel stipulate that it was Bob Ferwerda?

Mr. McCarron: Yes.

BY MR. BECKER:

Q. Did you sell to Tri-County Wholesale Produce Company in 1983?

A. In the beginning of the year.

Q. And with whom did you deal?

A. With Bob.

Q. With Bob Ferwerda?

A. Yes.

Q. How do you know it was Bob Ferwerda?

A. Well, he was there in person.

Q. Okay. How about from July 1st, 1982 to December 31, 1982, with whom did you deal?

A. In '82 with Bob Ferwerda.

Q. How about January 1, 1982 through June 30, 1982?

A. I'm sorry.

Q. January of '82 through June of '82?

A. Yeah. June of '82. I started doing business in May of '82 so before then—it couldn't have been before May.

Q. It couldn't have been before May?

A. Yes, it couldn't have been.

Q. Did you ever deal with anybody else from Tri-County Wholesale other than Bob Ferwerda?

A. Sometimes a driver would come by and pick up an order.

Q. How about on the telephone, in terms of selling things to that company?

A. Did anybody else besides Bob call me?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I don't believe so. Maybe the driver would have called me somewhere in the market and told me to save something for him, something like that. I get a call from the driver or from him telling me to hold it.

On March 22, 1983, Guy Romagni, a salesman for International A&G Produce Company, signed an affidavit written in his own handwriting stating that during the past 2 years to the present, he sold fresh fruits and vegetables to Tri-County through Robert Ferwerda (CX 2). At first his testimony fully supported his affidavit (Tr. 32–33), but he then had a lapse of memory as to the exact times when these transactions took place (Tr. 34–42).

Robert Ferwerda's testimony was quite evasive and contradictory, but along with his denials that he bought for Tri-County after March 25, 1982, were significant admissions that, in fact, he did deal with a number of suppliers on behalf of Tri-County in purchasing produce for Tri-County from the suppliers. In addition, he admitted that he gave his opinion to Roger, Tri-County's dock man, as to whether produce was of acceptable quality for retention by Tri-County. However, he stated that he was merely relaying orders from Roger or someone else to the suppliers, and that Roger made the actual decisions as to what produce should be kept by Tri-County. Examples of Robert Ferwerda's significant admissions are as follows:

[Tr. 107] Q. Have you ever had occasion to engage in the purchase or sell of produce in the year 1983 for Tri-County Wholesale Produce?

A. I don't understand exactly what you mean. Do you mean like buying a dozen bunches of dill when I was picking something else up?

Q. Did you pick up the telephone and call a produce house and say: Hi, this is Bob from Tri-County. I'd like to purchase whatever, or words to that effect?

A. What I would tell them when I would call them, I would say: This is Bob calling for Tri-County to pick up and I'd go down, look at the stuff and inspect it and bring it back.

* * * * * * *

[Tr. 109] Q. Did you ever make a purchase on behalf of Tri-County, on behalf of——

A. I told you: Yes, I did, sir. I bought dill for them. I might have bought coleslaw for them if they ran short of coleslaw or something like that.

* * * * * * *

[Tr. 111-13] Q. Did you ever while in the offices of Tri-County in 1983, did you ever receive calls from suppliers that were made to Tri-County?

A. I don't understand what you mean.

* * * * * * *

Q. Did you ever negotiate a purchase on behalf of Tri-County?

A. Back then I did. I can't say I didn't because I did. I know I've done it. I know I've bought coleslaw.

* * * * * * *

A. Yes, sir. Oh, no, back again for odds and ends. I want to be honest completely if I can; do you understand what I mean? And I have bought odds and ends.

Q. Did you ever talk with Harold Brick of Central American Produce with regard—with respect to the purchase and sale of produce in 1982?

A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * * *

Q. How about Guy Romagni?

A. Who?

Q. Of International A and G.

A. What is his name?

Q. I guess it's Guy Romagni.

A. Oh, yes. I know Guy very well and I have picked up a lot of stuff for Tri-County up and through—I'm a hauler for Tri-County now.

Q. But you never negotiated a sale?

A. I have told them the stuff was no good. I wouldn't put it on the truck.

Q. You made that decision when you picked it up?

A. Because I wasn't going to haul it back to Pompano and have to haul it back to Miami for nothing.

* * * * * * *

[Tr. 122-23] Q. All right. And you say you didn't do any purchasing and selling other than an occasional purchase or sell after March 25th, 1982; isn't that true?

A. I said I didn't do any sales. I said I purchased occasional, like your coleslaw or dill or odd item that they didn't have ready, lined up. I just knew where it was and it's always the same.

* * * * * * *

[Tr. 582-87] A. When I was told I couldn't work for my father anymore. Terry [Polcyn] and I are fairly good friends. Mark [Levigne], I know well enough. When he was having a baby I got to know him that way. His wife was having a baby. And so we got to talking about it on a personal basis, then on a last [first; sec Tr. 568] name basis because the first time I heard his [last] name is when you mentioned it to me. But he asked me, he said, Bob, as long as you're not going to be with Tri-County and so on there are good accounts that pay all their bills on time. It's really a pleasure dealing with them. I would hate to take the chance on losing them. Would you represent me to your father and make sure we get the mushroom business. And I said I would do it, and I would talk to him and make sure that they got the business. I owe him a moral obligation. I owe the man. I don't owe him money legally, but I owe him $31,000.

Q. So you would talk to your father. How often did you talk to your father about C & G Mushroom?

A. Primarily I talked to my father about C & G Mushroom just one time. And he said, Bob, he said, as long as you owe him a moral obligation do whatever you need to do to make sure that Terry is right, not right, but taken care of.

Q. Well, during the period March, 1982, to December, 1982, did Terry call you seeking business orders?

A. Yes, sir. He would call me up on the phone—well, it was either him or Mark would call me on the telephone almost every day. In fact it was, I would say it was every day. And I would tell them hold on. You know, he'd call up and ask for me on the phone. And I was there most of the time, so they would page me. I would talk to them and say, hey, how are you doing, Mark. How are you doing, Terry. What's going on today, and so on and so forth. And I'd put them on hold. I'd walk out on the dock. I'd say, Roger, it's C & G on the phone, which is the dock man over there. Said he'd like to know how many mushrooms that you need. And Roger would tell me what it was. I'd say, Terry, Mark, they need that many.

* * * * * * *

Q. And this was done on a regular basis, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, I'd say at least five days a week, if not more.

Q. Now, there's testimony as to, from both Mr. Lavigne and Mr. Polcyn, that on, after C & G Mushroom ceased to exist it actually kind of became New Garden, and that was physically in December, 1982, and August, 1983. Did that same practice continue?

A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * * *

Q. Did you ever receive mushroom messages that either Terry or Mark would call you, and please call back?

A. Upon occasion, yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever make phone calls to either of those two individuals with respect to the mushrooms?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why?

A. Because they asked me to call them. And I thought it could be something for the flea market or they might want an order or something else.

Q. They might want an order? For whom?

A. For Tri-County.

Q. For Tri-County.

A. In other words, I was taking Tri-County's order to give it to Terry, to make sure it got placed where it was supposed to do, like he had asked me to do. It had become a habit over the years. I still talk to Mark on the phone now. If I'm there he'll call up and ask for Bob. And I'll say, how are you doing, Mark? What's going on today? What kind of mushrooms do you need? I'll say, I'll find out what Tri-County needs. And I walked out, asked Roger, Roger, how many mushrooms do you need? Walked back in, Mark, they need this many mushrooms. It really sounds dumb. And I didn't think I was doing anything wrong for doing this.

* * * * * * *

A. The secretary always answered the phone.

Q. And would that secretary then seek to find you so that you could talk with either Mark or Terry?

A. They have a page system. And let's put it this way, the secretary is aware that I know Mark and Terry and we've been friends, and I enjoy talking to them.

Q. Now, eventually apparently Mr. Polcyn seeked [ceased] to work with mushrooms, but Mr. Lavigne went on working for Florida Mushroom Company. And I have found dates of August, 1983, to the present.

A. That's correct.

Q. Have you been dealing with Mark Lavigne since that time?

A. Yes, sir. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. And have you been entering into the same kind of arrangement with respect to the purchase of mushrooms by Tri-County by talking to him?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you see him on the dock in the mornings when he's delivering things?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you ever have occasion to have a sales ticket or invoice handed to you?

A. Yes, sir. He handed it to me on several occasions. I said, Mark, you know I don't work for Tri-County; I'm not authorized to sign any tickets. And if you want to drop them put your ticket in the box of mushrooms. And when Roger gets here I'll tell him where it's at.

Q. Would you tell him you'd keep an eye on it.

A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * * *

[Tr. 593-96] Q. In dealing with Mark Lavigne on Florida Mushroom since August of 1983, or approximately that time, have you ever had occasion to be consulted by Mr. Lavigne or anybody affiliated with Tri-County concerning the quality of the mushrooms that were delivered?

A. I don't understand what you mean. In other words—rephrase that. I can't understand that.

Q. Let me try again. Remember since August of 1983 to whenever you stopped, or maybe to the present actually, and Mark Lavigne comes and delivers the mushrooms to Tri-County?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have questions ever been asked of you concerning whether they are acceptable because of quality problems?

A. Roger [Tri-County's dock man] would ask me at times, sir, yes, sir. And I'd look at him and I'd say, ah, Rog, come on. They ain't that bad. Go ahead and use them.

Q. Ah, Rog, come on. They look terrible, and you better tell him to take them back.

A. I tell you what, you don't tell Roger anything. When he makes up his mind it goes back.

Q. Did he ever say, hey, I got problems with these; what do you think, stuff like that?

A. Yes, sir. He did ask me. He asked my opinion.

Q. And you'd give him your opinion, would you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And was that also true with respect to both Mr. Polcyn and Mr. Lavigne with New Garden Supply from time to time?

A. Do you mean sending something back or whatever? Yeah, yeah. Giving your opinion as it goes to quality, yes, sir.

Q. And how about the C & G Mushroom, with respect to both Mr. Polcyn and Mr. Lavigne and whoever delivered?

A. The particular C & G, just the end of it, just before they were going out of business their quality was getting absolutely atrocious. In fact, I called Terry on a couple of occasions. I, I said, Terry, I can't recommend you anymore if you don't pick up this quality. I'm going to have to recommend to Roger that he go somewhere else because I can't put my reputation on the line for you sending garbage into this place.

The COURT: Just a moment, please, sir.

Mr. Ferwerda, if you were representing the individual whom we'll call Terry in these transactions to obtain his disposition of his mushrooms why would you be concerned with whether they were good mushrooms or not good mushrooms, inasmuch as if you represented Terry in an—why should you care whether Tri-County got some bad mushrooms?

The WITNESS: Because it's my father's business. I look after my father even more than I would Terry.[17]

[17] Robert Ferwerda was clearly acting for Tri-County—not the suppliers—in ordering produce (or, as Robert contends, relaying orders for produce). Robert testified (Tr. 75) that when Tri-County started business on August 1, 1981—

> The first thing that I did was explain to the customers that we wanted to keep that Four Seasons was no longer in business. It was now—had become Tri-County Produce. Also explained to the people that I was buying for [from] that I was no longer buying for Four Seasons, Four Seasons was out of business. And explained to them I would try to pay them as quick as I could and if I could and so on, but I would be buying for Tri-County to help my father and so on.

Robert Ferwerda's admissions prove that he continued to buy for Tri-County after March 26, 1982.

In view of Robert Ferwerda's strong bias in this case (i.e., he is the son of respondent's owner), I give more weight to the testimony of the trade witnesses than to that of Robert Ferwerda, notwithstanding the fact that the ALJ stated that Robert Ferwerda was a credible witness. But even if I were to accept Robert Ferwerda's version that he merely relayed information between Roger (Tri-County's dock man) and the suppliers as to Tri-County's produce needs, and that he merely gave his opinion to Roger as to what produce should be rejected, that would be sufficient affiliation with respondent's business operations to constitute "employment," as defined in the Act (see § I(A), supra).

In addition, Robert Ferwerda's admitted trucking activities for respondent's business operations are sufficient, by themselves, to constitute "employment," as defined in the Act. Part of respondent's produce was delivered by the suppliers to respondent's place of business, but other produce was bought f.o.b. the suppliers' dock, making it respondent's responsibility to pick up the produce and deliver it to respondent's dock. About 20% to 35% of respondent's hauling was done by Robert Ferwerda, i.e., Bob's Transfer Service, under an arrangement with Arend Ferwerda (Tr. 646–47). About 70% to 75% of Bob's Transfer Service's trucking activities were for respondent (Tr. 100–01). Even though Bob's Transfer Service was an independent contractor in these transactions, this continuous, daily affiliation with respondent's business operations constitutes "employment," as defined in the Act.[18]

For the foregoing reasons, it is quite clear that respondent continued to "employ" Robert Ferwerda after he was notified that such employment without a bond could lead to the loss of respondent's license, and that such employment continued after the formal complaint was issued in this case—even up to the time of the hearing in this proceeding!

III.

Respondent contends that no sanction can be imposed in this case because the administrative officials delayed too long in setting the exact amount of the required bond, and arbitrarily and capriciously set the bond at too high a level. This defense is an afterthought raised by respondent's present attorney. Respondent's original attorney filed an Answer and Affirmative Defenses on [18] We need not decide here whether a licensee that utilized Bob's Transfer Service on an occasional basis would be regarded as violating the "employment" restrictions. It is enough to decide here that the continuous, daily use of the trucking service of a restricted individual is sufficient "affiliation" with respondent's "business operations" to constitute "employment."

June 29, 1983, in which a number of affirmative defenses are set forth, but nothing is said with respect to respondent's bond.

Respondent challenged the amount of the bond and the procedure in setting the bond for the first time in a prehearing statement filed November 8, 1983, by respondent's present attorney. Respondent's present attorney moved to amend the answer to incorporate affirmative defenses relating to the bond on January 18, 1984, and the motion was granted on January 26, 1984, less than 3 weeks before the hearing.

Even if respondent's criticism as to the bond were correct, they would not be a defense here.

First, as to the alleged delay in setting the bond amount, although the bond matter was first mentioned in the Department's letter of February 16, 1982, and was not concluded until 7 months later, September 24, 1982, there are many intervening circumstances that explain much of the delay. In a telephone conversation on April 15, 1982, Arend Ferwerda stated that Robert was not currently working for him, and that the reparation complaints against Robert might be satisfied within 3 months (which would make a bond unnecessary). The Department wrote to respondent on April 15, 1982, requesting respondent to "Please keep us advised of your intentions," but respondent failed to do so. After the Department reminded respondent on May 19, 1982, that it had not received a reply to the April 15, letter, Arend Ferwerda replied on June 4, 1982, that he would like to reemploy Robert as soon as he secured the additional information as to the bond and was able to obtain a bond. Hence half of the elapsed time period can be attributed to respondent's uncertainties as to whether the reparation awards would be paid and delay in advising the Department of its intentions. In addition, at no time did respondent press the Department for a quicker determination.

Even if the failure to exercise due diligence in setting a bond were a defense in a disciplinary action (which is not the case, since there is nothing in the Act to suggest that the employment restrictions can be ignored if the Secretary is dilatory in setting the amount of the bond), the record here shows no unreasonable delay that would constitute a good defense. (And even if it did, and even if a delay were a valid defense, the defense would not be applicable to the time period after September 24, 1982, when the bond amount was set.)

As to the amount of the bond, the ALJ correctly concluded that it "cannot be determined from the evidence in this proceeding whether the $125,000.00 for the amount of the bond requested is arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable, agency action" (Initial Decision at 23). Although Arend Ferwerda seemed shocked at the estimated $100,000 bond figure, he did not complain at any time to any Department official or to any court as to the final bond determination.

No opinion is expressed in this decision as to whether the Secretary's bond determination is judicially reviewable if the issue is raised before a violation occurs. The Act states that the bond shall be "in form and amount satisfactory to the Secretary" (7 U.S.C. § 499h(b)). Assuming, without deciding, that arbitrary action could be set aside, the obvious remedy is to complain either to the administrative officials or to the appropriate court—not to ignore the statutory restrictions and continue to employ a restricted individual without obtaining a bond. There is nothing in the Act to support respondent's attorney's "afterthought" that respondent can violate the statutory restrictions and collaterally attack the bond determination by way of defense in a disciplinary proceeding.

Respondent also complains that the factors considered in setting the amount of the bond are not published in the Federal Register, but, here again, that issue is not a defense here. Even if that issue could appropriately be raised here, publication of the bond determination factors is not required. The factors considered in determining a bond are not "substantive rules of general applicability adopted as authorized by law," or "statements of general policy or interpretations of general applicability formulated by the agency" (5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(1)(D)), and, therefore, they are not required to be published in the Federal Register.

Even if the bond determination factors were required to be published, respondent received actual notice in the Department's letter of February 16, 1982, as to the significant factors that are considered in determining a bond, and respondent received actual notice of the Department's internal instructions relating to bond determinations at the hearing in this case (RX C and D). Respondent's actual notice of the factors would preclude reliance on any failure to comply with publication requirements. Giles Lowery Stockyards, Inc. v. USDA, 565 F.2d 321 (1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 957 (1978).

IV.

Respondent's conduct in continuing to "employ" Robert Ferwerda after notice completely thwarted the congressional purpose to provide assurance that respondent's business would be conducted in accordance with the Act and that respondent would pay all reparation awards, notwithstanding its potential contamination from Robert Ferwerda's affiliation with the firm.

Arend Ferwerda advised the Department orally and in writing that Robert Ferwerda's employment ended the week of March 25, 1982. If the Department had not heard rumors from the trade that Robert Ferwerda's employment continued during the restricted period, the Department would probably have not learned that the congressional purpose had been defeated. Hence advertently or inadvertently, Arend Ferwerda misled the Department as to an important matter.

Respondent's violation of the employment restrictions is a very serious violation of the Act that could have caused great damage to the industry irrespective of whether Arend Ferwerda knew that Robert Ferwerda's affiliation with respondent constituted "employment," within the meaning of the Act. Although the ALJ concluded that Arend Ferwerda did not intentionally violate the Act, he knew, or should have known, that he was operating dangerously close to the borderline of illegality. It would not be a mitigating circumstance even if Arend Ferwerda did not know that he had overstepped the borderline.

Arend Ferwerda had been a licensee under the Act for many years. It was his duty to know the statutory requirements. He was operating in an industry subject to pervasive federal regulation because of its great national importance. The definition of "employment" in the Act is very clear, even to a layman. If Arend Ferwerda did not want to bother to read the Act, he could easily have asked any PACA employee as to whether Robert Ferwerda's affiliation with respondent constituted "employment." [19]

If we were to reduce the sanction in this case on the ground that Arend Ferwerda did not actually know that he was violating the Act, it would place a premium on maintaining ignorance as to the statutory requirements. That policy would defeat the congressional purpose, and will not be followed here.

Since respondent committed a very serious violation of the Act continually during a period of approximately 2 years, respondent's license should be revoked to serve as an effective deterrent not only to respondent but to other potential violators (see § I(C), supra).

Under the Administrative Procedure Act, a revocation or suspension order cannot be issued unless the violations were willful or a prior warning letter was sent. Specifically, the Act provides (5 U.S.C. § 558(c)):

[19] It would have been better practice for the Department to have quoted the definition of employment in the letter of February 16, 1982. But it is respondent's duty to know the law, or, if not, to ask questions of the administrative officials.

> Except in cases of willfulness or those in which public health, interest, or safety requires otherwise, the withdrawal, suspension, revocation, or annulment of a license is lawful only if, before the institution of agency proceedings therefor, the licensee has been given—
> (1) notice by the agency in writing of the facts or conduct which may warrant the action; and
> (2) opportunity to demonstrate or achieve compliance with all lawful requirements.

In the present case, respondent received a prior warning letter, with an opportunity to achieve compliance with all lawful requirements. Hence it is not necessary to show that the violations were willful.

But even if it were necessary to show that the violations were willful, respondent's violations were willful, within the meaning of that term in the Administrative Procedure Act. In re Shatkin, 34 Agric. Dec. 296, 297-314 (1975). "Under PACA, an action is willful if a prohibited act is done intentionally, irrespective of evil intent, or done with careless disregard of statutory requirements." American Fruit Purveyors, Inc. v. United States, 630 F.2d 370, 374 (5th Cir. 1980) (per curiam), cert. denied. 450 U.S. 997 (1981); accord Finer Foods Sales Co. v. Block, 708 F.2d 774, 778 (1983).[20]

It should be noted in passing that the ALJ's cease and desist order is unlawful in two respects. First, there is no statutory authority in the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act for the issuance of a cease and desist order. Second, the statutory restriction as to the employment of a person against whom there is an unpaid reparation award is applicable only "within two years" after the issuance of the award (7 U.S.C. § 499h(b)(3)). Accordingly, the ALJ's order could not have been issued in this case, even if such a mild sanction were appropriate for the serious violations found here.

V.

Respondent seeks to reopen the hearing to take further evidence with respect to the meaning of "employment," and as to the determination of respondent's bond. The meaning of "employment" is a matter of statutory interpretation—not evidence—and, as set forth above, the bond issue is not an appropriate issue in this disciplinary proceeding. Hence the petition to reopen is denied.

[20] The definition of willful in TWA v. Thurston, 105 S. Ct. 613, 624-26 (1985), is based on the legislative history of the Age Discrimination Employment Act, which is quite different from the legislative history of the term willful under the Administrative Procedure Act. Accordingly, the Court's holding in Thurston as to the meaning of "wilful" is not appropriate for use in our Department's disciplinary proceedings.

For the foregoing reasons, the following order should be issued.

ORDER

Respondent's license is revoked.

The facts and circumstances as set forth herein shall be published.

This order shall take effect on the 30th day after service thereof on respondent.

In re: TOP QUALITY FRUIT & PRODUCE DISTRIBUTORS, INC. PACA Docket No. 2-6910. Decided January 27, 1986.

Failure to pay—Revocation of license.

The Judicial Officer affirmed Administrative Law Judge Weber's order revoking respondent's license for failure to pay for produce. Respondent's admitted failures to make payment constitute willful, flagrant and repeated violations of the Act.

Andrew Stanton, for complainant.
Robert B. McLeaish, for respondent.
William J. Weber, Administrative Law Judge.

Decision by Donald A. Campbell, Judicial Officer.

DECISION AND ORDER

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.),[1] in which Administrative Law Judge William J. Weber (ALJ) filed an initial Decision and Order on November 8, 1985, revoking respondent's license for failure to pay 20 sellers $86,847.18 for 55 lots of produce purchased and accepted in interstate commerce from June 1984 through December 1984.

[1] See generally Campbell, "The Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act Regulatory Program," in 1 Davidson, Agricultural Law, ch. 4 (1981 and Aug. 1985 Supp.), and Becker and Whitten, "Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act," in 10 Harl, Agricultural Law, ch. 72 (1980).

On December 10, 1985, respondent appealed to the Judicial Officer, to whom final administrative authority to decide the Department's cases subject to 5 U.S.C. §§ 556 and 557 has been delegated (7 CFR § 2.35).[2] On December 31, 1985, the case was referred to the Judicial Officer for decision.

Oral argument before the Judicial Officer, which is discretionary (7 CFR § 1.145(d)), was requested by respondent, but is denied inasmuch as the issues are not novel or difficult, the case has been thoroughly briefed, and oral argument would seem to serve no useful purpose.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Respondent, Top Quality Fruit & Produce Distributors, Inc., is a Texas corporation whose address is P.O. Box 6208, McAllen, Texas.

2. Pursuant to the licensing provisions of the PACA, license number 831550 was issued to respondent on September 16, 1982. This license has been renewed annually and was subject to renewal on or before September 16, 1985. The Department has, to date, not received a renewal application from the respondent.

3. The Secretary has jurisdiction in this proceeding.

4. As more fully set forth in complainant's Motion for Decision on the Pleadings and Supporting Memorandum, during the period June 1984 through December 1984, respondent purchased from 20 sellers and accepted, in interstate and foreign commerce, 55 lots of perishable agricultural commodities, but failed to make any payment of the agreed purchase prices, which total $86,847.18.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent has admitted in its answer that it failed to make payment for the produce alleged in the complaint. Respondent's admitted failures to make payment constitute willful, flagrant and repeated violations of § 2(4) of the PACA (7 U.S.C. § 499b(4)). In re B. G. Sales Co., Inc., 44 Agric. Decision by Dorothea A. Baker, Administrative Law Judge.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.) hereinafter referred to as the "Act", instituted by a complaint filed on September 26, 1985, by the Acting Director, Fruit and Vegetable Division, Agricultural Marketing Service, United States Department of Agriculture. It is alleged in the complaint that during the period June through December 1984, respondent purchased, received, and accepted, in interstate commerce, from 36 sellers, 160 lots of fruits and vegetables, all being perishable agricultural commodities, but failed to make full payment promptly of the agreed purchase prices, in the total amount of $283,497.91.

A copy of the complaint was served upon respondent which complaint has not been answered. The time for filing an answer having run, and upon the motion of the complainant for the issuance of a Default Order, the following Decision and Order is issued without further investigation or hearing pursuant to section 1.139 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 1.139).

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Respondent, East Tennessee Produce, Inc., is a corporation, whose address is 2221 Forest Avenue, Knoxville, Tennessee 37916.

2. Pursuant to the licensing provisions of the Act, license number 821694 was issued to respondent on August 10, 1982. This license was renewed annually, but terminated on August 10, 1985, pursuant to Section 4(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. 499d(a)) when respondent failed to pay the required annual license fee.

3. As more fully set forth in paragraph 5 of the complaint, during the period June through December 1984, respondent purchased, received, and accepted in interstate commerce, from 36 sellers, 160 lots of fruits and vegetables, all being perishable agricultural commodities, but failed to make full payment promptly of the agreed purchase prices, in the total amount of $283,497.91.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent's failure to make full payment promptly with respect to the 160 transactions set forth in Finding of Fact No. 3, above, constitutes willful, repeated and flagrant violations of Section 2 of the Act (7 U.S.C. 499b), for which the Order below is issued.

ORDER

A finding is made that respondent has committed willful, flagrant and repeated violations of Section 2 of the Act (7 U.S.C. 499b), and the facts and circumstances set forth above, shall be published.

This order shall take effect on the 11th day after this Decision becomes final.

Pursuant to the Rules of Practice governing procedures under the Act, this Decision will become final without further proceedings 35 days after service hereof unless appealed to the Secretary by a party to the proceeding within 30 days after service as provided in sections 1.139 and 1.145 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 1.139 and 1.145).

Copies hereof shall be served upon parties.

Decided December 17, 1985.

Decision by Edward H. McGrail, Administrative Law Judge.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a combined show cause and disciplinary proceeding brought pursuant to the provisions of the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.), hereinafter the "PACA", the regulations promulgated pursuant to the PACA (7 CFR 46.1 through 46.45), and the Rules of Practice Governing Formal Adjudicatory Administrative Proceedings Instituted by the Secretary (7 CFR 1.130 through 1.151), hereinafter the "Rules of Practice". The proceeding was instituted by a Notice to Show Cause and a complaint filed on May 15, 1985, by the Acting Director, Fruit and Vegetable Division, Agricultural Marketing Service, United States Department of Agriculture. It is alleged in the Notice to Show Cause and complaint that Fonseca Foods Distributors, Inc., hereinafter "respondent", violated Section 2(4) of the PACA (7 U.S.C. 499b(4)) during the period July 1984 through November 1984, by failing to make full payment promptly of the agreed purchase price of 120 lots of perishable agricultural commodities which it purchased and received in interstate and foreign commerce from five sellers of perishable agricultural commodities, in the total amount of $229,661.80. It was further alleged that respondent's license terminated on January 31, 1985, pursuant to Section 4(a) of the PACA (7 U.S.C. 499d(a)), when respondent failed to pay the required annual license fee; and that respondent should be denied a license sought pursuant to an application received April 15, 1985, because it has engaged in practices of the character prohibited by the PACA. Complainant duly withheld the issuance of this license pursuant to Section 4(d) of the PACA, which requires that respondent be given an opportunity for hearing within sixty days of the date of the application.

An oral hearing was set for June 4, 1985. Respondent filed an answer on May 30, 1985, in which it admitted the jurisdictional allegations of the complaint and the filing of a voluntary petition on November 8, 1984, pursuant to Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code (11 U.S.C. 1101 et seq.); denied that its license had terminated on January 31, 1985; and denied, in part, the failure to make full payment promptly allegation. Respondent affirmatively asserted that its actions did not constitute wilful, flagrant and/or repeated violations of section 2(4) of the PACA, and that it was acting in conformity with various provisions of the Bankruptcy Code with the agreement of the perishable agricultural produce sellers named in the complaint. Respondent requested that the oral hearing set for June 4, 1985, be continued to July 3, 1985.

A rescheduled oral hearing was held on July 2, 1985, before the undersigned in Los Angeles, California. Complainant was represented by Eric Paul, Esq., Office of the General Counsel, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250-1400. Respondent was represented by Alan Ross, Esq., Los Angeles, California 90012. Complainant presented two witnesses and nine exhibits which were received into evidence. Respondent cross-examined complainant's witnesses but presented no testimony or exhibits. The parties were provided opportunity to submit simultaneous briefs by August 23, 1985, however, only complainant took advantage of submitting such brief. Reference to complainant's exhibits and to specific pages in the transcript will hereafter be by the prefix "Ex." and the prefix "Tr.", respectively.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

The evidence adduced at hearing showed that respondent failed to pay five produce firms $229,661.80 owed with respect to 120 lots of tropical fruits purchased in interstate or foreign commerce. It does not appear that the financial condition of respondent, as set forth in its bankruptcy filings, is such as will permit the full payment for these purchases at any time in the future and operations are now being conducted without a PACA license in effect, although an application for a PACA license has been filed. It is the position of complainant that this case presents nothing more than a normal disciplinary proceeding brought against a produce debtor that has failed to pay for produce purchased and received in interstate or foreign commerce and a normal show cause proceeding with respect to an applicant that is unfit to be licensed by virtue of having engaged in conduct of a character that is prohibited by the PACA. The commencement of a Chapter 11 proceeding in bankruptcy does not excuse such flagrant and repeated violations of the PACA as have been established, and the appropriate sanction, in accordance with sections 4 and 8 of the PACA (7 U.S.C. §§ 499d, 499h) and the sanction policy of this Department, is the issuance and publication of findings that respondent has engaged in flagrant and repeated violations and is unfit to be licensed under the PACA.

Respondent has totally failed to pay for perishable agricultural commodities worth $229,661.80. Failure to pay for produce is a very serious violation of the PACA which requires revocation of the license of the offender, whenever a valid license is in effect. See In re Bananas, Inc., 42 Agric. Dec. 588, 590 (1983). In the present case no license remains in effect to be revoked since the respondent's former license terminated on January 31, 1985.

No attempt had been made by respondent to renew this license. Rather, an inadequate fee was tendered in connection with the submission of an application for the issuance of an entirely new license on November 29, 1984. Even assuming that this submission could have been handled as a payment of an annual license renewal fee, it would not have effected a renewal since section 4(a) of the PACA (7 U.S.C. § 499 d(a)) and section 46.6 of the regulations (7 CFR § 46.6) require payment of the prescribed fee and set the amount of such fee at $180.00, respectively. The correct amount was not submitted until March 21, 1985, a date well beyond the thirty day statutory limit set for a late filing of the prescribed annual license fee (7 U.S.C. 499d(a)).

Complainant, therefore, has sought publication of a finding that respondent has engaged in repeated and flagrant violations of the Act. Such a finding has the same effect on respondent and on those responsibly connected with respondent as revocation of a license under the PACA. In re V.P.C., Inc., 41 Agric. Dec. 734, 748-49 (1982); In re Pappas Produce, Inc., 36 Agric. Dec. 684, 695 (1977). Respondent's failures to make full payment promptly with respect to the 120 designated transactions clearly constitute repeated and flagrant violations of section 2 of the PACA (7 U.S.C. § 499b). The large number of transactions alone establishes that the violations were repeated. Reese Sales Co. v. Hardin, 458 F.2d 183, 187 (9th Cir. 1972); Zwick v. Freeman, 373 F.2d 110, 115 (2d Cir.), cert denied, 389 U.S. 835 (1967); In re Bananas, Inc., 42 Agric. Dec. 588, 593 (1983). Respondent's violations were also flagrant. In the Bananas case, which involved 26 sellers and $54,045.43, the Department's Judicial Officer concluded that the number of transactions and the large amount involved made the violations flagrant. They were also found to be flagrant because, just as in the present case, the respondent continued to make new purchases over a period of several months, without being able to make payment for produce purchased earlier. Id. Also see Wayne Cusimano, Inc. v. Block, 692 F.2d 1025, 1029 (5th Cir. 1982); George Steinberg & Son, Inc. v. Butz, 491 F.2d 988, 994 (2d Cir. 1973) cert denied, 419 U.S. 830 (1974). The 120 transactions in the present case called for full payments to be made on numerous dates falling within a four month period, July 9, 1984 through November 6, 1984, as scheduled in paragraph 6 of the complaint (Ex. 9; Tr. 31). Each of these transactions required payment prior to respondent's filing for relief under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code on November 8, 1984.

Accordingly, respondent's plead defense that the five sellers named in paragraph 6 of the complaint had received substantial payments since July 1984, and had consented to the payment of current purchases first in accord with required Chapter 11 procedure would not have been relevant, even had respondent submitted supporting evidence. Moreover, even if payments had not been due prior to the filing of the Chapter 11 petition, the violations would not have been either excused or mitigated. All excuses, including bankruptcy, are routinely rejected in disciplinary proceedings involving payment violations since "the Act calls for payments not excuses." In re Melvin Beene Produce Co., 41 Agric. Dec. 2422, 2428, 2442-44 (1982) affirmed Melvin Beene Produce Company v. Agricultural Marketing Service, 728 F.2d 347 (6th Cir. 1984).

It was alleged and denied that these violations were wilful. A violation of the PACA is wilful if, irrespective of evil motive or erroneous advice, a person intentionally does an act prohibited by the statute or a person carelessly disregards the requirements of the statute. Finer Foods Sales Co., Inc. v. Block (708 F.2d 774, 778 (D.C. Cir. 1983); American Fruit Purveyors, Inc. v. United States, 630 F.2d 370, 374 (5th Cir. 1980) (per curiam), cert denied, 450 U.S. 997 (1981); In re Henry S. Shatkin, 34 Agric. Dec. 296 (1975); In re G. Steinberg & Sons, Inc., 32 Agric. Dec. 236, 263-269 (1973) aff'd sub nom., George Steinberg and Sons, Inc. v. Butz, 491 F.2d 988 (2d Cir.); cert denied, 419 U.S. 830 (1974). Respondent's violations were clearly wilful. However, no finding to this effect need be made since there is no license to be revoked. See Fava & Company, Inc., 43 Agric. Dec. ___ (PACA Docket No. 2-6547, December 4, 1984) (Ruling on Certified Question); In re Bananas, Inc., 42 Agric. Dec. 588, 594 (1983).

A finding that respondent is unfit to be licensed under the PACA in that it has engaged in practices of a character prohibited by the PACA is required. Section 4(d) of the PACA (7 U.S.C. § 499d(d)) provides, inter alia, that the Secretary may refuse to issue a license when, after hearing, the Secretary finds that the applicant "prior to the date of the filing of the application engaged in any practice of the character prohibited by this Act . . . ." The repeated and flagrant failures of respondent to make full payment promptly constitute a practice expressly prohibited by section 2(4) of the PACA (7 U.S.C. § 499b(4)). In re Pappas Produce, 36 Agric. Dec. 684, 691 (1977); In re Ludwig Casca, 34 Agric. Dec. 1917 (1975). As a direct consequence of respondent's engaging in this prohibited practice produce purchases in the total amount of $229,661.80 remain unpaid as of the date of hearing.

It has been recognized by respondent that its status as a debtor in possession under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code does not affect the jurisdiction of the Secretary to enter the requested finding and deny issuance of a new license (Respondent's Answer, paragraph 9; 11 U.S.C. § 525). Moreover, as Mr. James R. Frazier, head of the trade practice section of the PACA branch, Agricultural Marketing Service, explained in connection with the presentation of sanction testimony supporting the entry of finding of repeated and flagrant violations and denial of a license:

> It would make no difference to us whether the firm was in bankruptcy or not in bankruptcy. As a matter of fact for us not to take an action against a firm first because they filed bankruptcy, would be to discriminate against firms which don't file bankruptcy . . . .(Tr. 20-21)

The Department has consistently enforced the PACA in an even-handed manner to insure that only financially responsible persons should be engaged in businesses subject to the Act even when, as herein, the respondent is a debtor seeking to reorganize in bankruptcy. In re Veg-Mix, Inc., PACA Docket No. 2-6612, 44 Agric. Dec. ____ (August 21, 1985). In re Melvin Beene Produce Co., 41 Agric. Dec. 2422, 2433-40 (1982); In re Finer Foods Sales Co., 41 Agric. Dec. 1154, 1176-82 (1982) aff'd, 708 F.2d 774, 782 (D.C. Cir. 1983); Zwick v. Freeman, 373 F.2d 110, 117 (2d Cir.). cert denied, 389 U.S. 835.

A finding should be published as to the respondent's violations as authorized by section 8a of the PACA (7 U.S.C. § 499h(a)) in order to serve as an effective deterrent to future similar violations by respondent or other potential violators. In re Pappas Produce, Inc., 36 Agric. Dec. 684, 695 (1977).

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Respondent is a California corporation whose sole officers, directors and shareholders are Jose Fonseca, Carmen Fonseca and Javier Fonseca.

2. Respondent's mailing address is 1308 East 7th Street, Los Angeles, California 90021 (Respondent's Answer, paragraph 1).

3. Pursuant to the licensing provision of the PACA, license number 840644 was issued to respondent on January 31, 1984. This license terminated on January 31, 1985, pursuant to Section 4(a) of the PACA (7 U.S.C. 499d(a)), when respondent failed to pay the required annual license fee (Ex. 1, 5; Tr. 10-13).

4. On November 8, 1984, respondent filed a petition seeking relief pursuant to Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code (11 U.S.C. § 1101 et seq.), in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Central District of California, Case No. LA 84 422325 (Respondent's Answer, paragraph 1, Ex. 8).

5. On November 29, 1984, respondent applied for the issuance of a new license and enclosed a check in the amount of $108.00 (Ex. 3; Tr. 10).

6. This application was returned on March 4, 1985, after efforts made by telephone to obtain the proper license fee, $180.00, had proved fruitless. Respondent was advised that the incorrect fee submitted was being refunded and that it could reapply for a license (Ex. 4; Tr. 11-12).

7. On March 15, 1985, a notice was served on respondent that its license under the PACA had terminated on January 31, 1985 (Ex. 5; Tr. 12).

8. On March 21, 1985, a license application accompanied by the proper fee was received (Ex. 6; Tr. 13).

9. On April 1, 1985, this application was returned for additional information relevant to the determination of the amount of surety bond that was posted because of the bankruptcy and for a completion of the application form with respect to the bankruptcy (Ex. 7; Tr. 13-14).

10. A resubmitted application to which a copy of the Chapter 11 petition was attached was received on April 15, 1985 (Ex. 8; Tr. 14).

11. The Notice to Show Cause why this April 15, 1985, license application should not be denied was filed with the Hearing Clerk on May 15, 1985, within the thirty day period required by section 4(d) of the PACA (7 U.S.C. § 499d).

12. An oral hearing set for June 4, 1985, within the sixty days required by section 4(d) of the PACA (7 U.S.C. § 499d) was continued to July 2, 1985, after respondent had waived its right to early hearing by motion filed May 30, 1985.

13. An investigation was ordered performed to determine whether the respondent was in violation of section 2 of the PACA (7 U.S.C. § 499b) by reason of failures to make full payment promptly with respect to purchases of perishable agricultural commodities after it had been determined that the respondent's bankruptcy schedules listed debts in excess of $400,000.00 owed to creditors that were known to be produce companies (Ex. 8; Tr. 16-19).

14. Mr. Barry Flick, a marketing specialist employed by the complainant examined respondent's unpaid invoices on May 2, 1985 (Tr. 27-28).

15. Respondent's Vice-President, Carmen Fonseca, provided Mr. Flick with five folders containing unpaid invoices received from the five produce sellers named in paragraph 6 of complaint (Tr. 28-29).

16. Mr. Flick excluded all unpaid invoices that pertained to perishable agricultural commodities that could have been intrastate in origin, leaving invoices covering 120 lots of bananas, mangoes and pineapples—fruits subject to the PACA that are not grown commercially in California and, therefore, were of foreign origin (Tr. 29-31).

17. The 120 lots of perishable agricultural commodities scheduled in paragraph 6 of the complaint were received with invoices that appear in complainant's Exhibit 9, marked as to lot, Transaction 1-Transaction 120A. Although payments totalling $229,661.80 were due on these purchases prior to respondent's filing of it's Chapter 11 petition on November 8, 1984, they remained unpaid as of the date of the investigation, May 2, 1985 (Tr. 31-32).

ORDER

1. Respondent, Fonseca Foods Distributors, Inc., has committed flagrant and repeated violations of section 2 (4) of the PACA (7 U.S.C. § 499b(4)).

2. Respondent is unfit to be licensed under the PACA in that it has engaged in practices of the character prohibited by the PACA.

3. Respondent's application for a license is denied.

4. The facts and circumstances of such violations shall be published.

This Order shall take effect on the 11th day after the Decision becomes final.

Pursuant to the Rules of Practice, this Decision will become final without further proceedings 35 days after service hereof unless appealed to the Secretary by a party to the proceeding within 30 days after service as provided in section 1.145 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.145).

Copies hereof shall be served upon the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.), hereinafter referred to as the Act, instituted by a complaint filed on August 12, 1985, by the Director, Fruit and Vegetable Division, Agricultural Marketing Service, United States Department of Agriculture. It is alleged in the complaint that during the period February, 1984, through August, 1984, respondent purchased and accepted, in interstate and foreign commerce, from 13 sellers, 66 lots of fruit and vegetables, all being perishable agricultural commodities, but failed to make full payment promptly of the agreed purchase prices, in the total amount of $403,790.52.

A copy of the complaint was served upon respondent on August 24, 1985, which complaint has not been answered. The time for filing an answer having run, and upon the motion of the complainant for the issuance of a default order, the following Decision and Order is issued without further investigation or hearing pursuant to section 1.139 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.139).

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Respondent, Max Kaufman, Inc., is a corporation whose address is 750 South Central Avenue, Los Angeles, California.

2. Pursuant to the licensing provisions of the Act, license number 681818 was issued to respondent on April 19, 1968. This license was renewed annually, but terminated April 19, 1985, when respondent failed to renew it.

3. As more fully set forth in paragraph 5 of the complaint, during the period February, 1984, through August, 1984, respondent purchased and accepted in interstate and foreign commerce from 13 sellers, 66 lots of fruit and vegetables, all being perishable agricultural commodities, but failed to make full payment promptly of the agreed purchase prices, in the total amount of $403,790.52.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent's failure to make full payment promptly with respect to the 66 transactions set forth in Finding of Fact No. 3 above, constitutes wilful, repeated and flagrant violations of section 2 of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 499b), for which the Order below is issued.

ORDER

A finding is made that respondent has committed wilful, flagrant and repeated violations of section 2 of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 499b), and the facts and circumstances set forth above, shall be published.

This order shall take effect on the 11th day after this decision becomes final.

Pursuant to the Rules of Practice governing proceedings under the Act, this decision will become final without further proceedings 35 days after service hereof unless appealed to the Secretary by a party to the proceeding within 30 days after service as provided in sections 1.139 and 1.145 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR §§ 1.139, 1.145).

Copies hereof shall be served upon parties.

Revocation of license—False and misleading application for license.

The Judicial Officer affirmed Administrative Law Judge Weber's decision revoking respondent's license because the application for the license was false and misleading. Complainant need only prevail by a preponderance of the evidence. The ALJ, who saw and heard the witnesses testify, was in the best position to resolve conflicts in testimony. The Judicial Officer may, when necessary, take official notice of a license on file in the Department. The corporate veil may be pierced when one person is the beneficial owner of 100% of the stock of the corporation. A license which has been allowed to expire can, nonetheless, be revoked or suspended.

in which Administrative Law Judge William J. Weber (ALJ) filed an initial Decision and Order on Reconsideration on October 17, 1985, revoking respondent's license because the application for the license was false and misleading.

On November 20, 1985, respondent appealed to the Judicial Officer, to whom final administrative authority to decide the Department's cases subject to 5 U.S.C. §§ 556 and 557 has been delegated (7 CFR § 2.35). On December 16, 1985, the case was referred to the Judicial Officer for decision.

Based upon a careful consideration of the entire record, the initial Decision and Order on Reconsideration is adopted as the final Decision and Order in this case (with a few trivial changes), except that the effective date of the order is changed in view of the appeal. Additional conclusions by the Judicial Officer follow the ALJ's conclusions.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE'S INITIAL DECISION

DECISION AND ORDER ON RECONSIDERATION [a]

Phillip R. Weller ("Weller") operated a number of business entities,[1] some in Canada. He held a Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act handler's license for a number of years and was one of the larger dealers in potatoes.

In January 1984, Weller allowed his Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act license to expire by his failure to renew it.

Weller agreed to entry of an administrative disciplinary decision in August 1984, finding that between October 1981 and August 1983, Weller had "failed to make full payment promptly (for pota-

 The position of Judicial Officer was established pursuant to the Act of April 4, 1940 (7 U.S.C. §§ 405c-405g), and Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1953, 18 Fed. Reg. 3219 (1953), reprinted in 5 U.S.C. app. at 1068 (1982). The Department's present Judicial Officer was appointed in January 1971, having been involved with the Department's regulatory programs since 1949 (including 3 years' trial litigation; 10 years' appellate litigation relating to appeals from the decisions of the prior Judicial Officer; and 8 years as administrator of the Packers and Stockyards Act regulatory program).

[a] Respondent filed a motion to reconsider the decision and order. It mainly focuses on two points: first, what respondent characterizes as "the basis of the decision"—finding of fact #35, page 15—and secondly, a partially exculpatory comment on the lack of criminal intent to cheat and defraud those whom Weller owed money (decision and order, page 26).

Respondent isolates these two points from the clear context in which they are imbedded, and misconstrues them.

The basic decision remains the same except for supplemental material added in footnotes [a] (page 1),[35] (page 15), and [b] (page 26).

toes he purchased) . . . in the total amount of $823,611.38 * * * [in] repeated and flagrant [violation] . . . of the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act." Complainant's Exhibit 19, pages 2 and 3.

Weller's businesses and financial status faced serious cash flow problems and threats of litigation by May 1983. Three reparation complaints were pending against him under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities reparation procedures for failure to promptly pay.

Weller, in May 1983, seized upon the idea of forming a new corporation—Perfect Potato Packers, Inc.—using some of his loyal and dedicated employees as the incorporators, directors, officers and stockholders through which he could continue potato operations and insulate some funds from growing financial delinquencies.

An application for a Perishable Agricultural Commodities license was filed by Perfect Potato Packers, Inc., in May 1983, listing employees of various Weller controlled entities as the directors, officers and stockholders of Perfect Potato Packers, Inc. ("PPP") No mention was made of Weller in any capacity with the corporation. Nothing indicated Weller's relationship to the applicant corporation, its reported directors, officers or shareholders.

That application of PPP, on its face, appeared to be proper. There was no apparent reason to raise suspicions or doubts. It was approved and a license was issued.

Complainant now seeks to revoke that license on the grounds that it was fraudulently obtained through false and misleading statements in willful violation of sections 3 and 8(c) of the PACA (7 USC §§ 499c and 499h(c)) and section 46.4 of the Regulations (7 CFR § 46.4).

Respondent denied any violation of the Act or Regulations.

Trial of the issues took place November 14, 15, 1984 in Hartford, Connecticut. The last brief was filed April 5 1985. Much of this decision is taken from complainant's detailed, annotated record-supported brief. Generally, the testimony of witnesses Myrna Sterin, Philip Tatoian, Marc Benoit, and Salvatore Julian was persuasive, sincere and worthy of controlling probative value concerning disputed operative facts here.

Complainant clearly has presented reliable, probative, persuasive, credible evidence in support of the Complaint allegations.

While only a preponderance of the evidence is necessary to support the Complaint allegations, in many instances here, the evidence is clear and convincing that the operations of the central figure here, Phillip R. Weller ("Weller"), were dominated by him with little regard for legal distinctions between his various enterprises and activities. Many of his businesses were administratively supported by a central corps of clerical personnel who were a seminal pool to be utilized for the various businesses as needed. This basic concept is key to evaluating the evidence here.

Respondent also argues, inter alia, that Complainant never established that respondent PPP held a PACA license. The evidence here establishes a prima facie case that respondent PPP did hold a PACA license at all material times here. Respondent, in fact, does not actually deny it was licensed, as alleged in the Complaint (it neither admits nor denies that allegation based on its claimed lack of knowledge).

Several witnesses testified concerning the license and much of their testimony was premised on the existence of a license. If respondent had not been licensed at the time of the incidents described in the testimony, then much of the evidence from both complainant and respondent would be utterly without basis or foundation. All of respondent's behavior, statements and position during the investigation is premised on the respondent holding a current, active PACA license.

There can be no question whatsoever on this record that respondent corporation held the PACA license that it applied for during the events covered by this record.

1. Respondent is a Connecticut corporation whose mailing address is P. O. Box 408, East Windsor, Connecticut 06088, and whose business address is North Road, East Windsor, Connecticut 06088.[1]

2. On May 19 1983, respondent submitted a completed application for license under the PACA in which Marc G. Benoit (hereinafter "Benoit") was reported as its president, director and 100% stockholder. The application also listed Francis Sedar (hereinafter "Sedar") as the respondent's vice president and secretary, and Charles Frascona (hereinafter "Frascona") as its treasurer. This application was signed by Benoit, Sedar, and Frascona, each of whom certified that the information contained therein was true.[2]

3. Based on the information provided in respondent's application for license under the PACA and pursuant to the licensing provisions of the PACA, license no. 831032 was routinely issued to respondent on May 26 1983 and was next subject to renewal on or before May 26 1984.[3]

4. Although respondent's PACA license application reflected that Benoit was its president and a director, that Sedar was its vice president and secretary, and that Frascona was its treasurer, no organizational meetings were ever held, and no directors or officers were ever elected.[4]

5. From at least January 29 1973 through January 29 1984, one Phillip R. Weller, who sometimes traded as Richard Weller, was a potato dealer licensed under the PACA. During May 1983, Weller told Benoit, who was one of his employees, that he wished to start a new company because of problems which his (Weller's) then existing business entities were having. This new entity, first called "Windsor Potato Company, Inc.," eventually became the respondent corporation, Perfect Potato Packers, Inc.[5]

6. The paperwork creating the respondent corporation was prepared by Philip E. Tatoian, Jr., Esq., an attorney who, at least during the period January 1 1983 through December 31 1983, represented Weller. Mr. Tatoian performed the legal services at Weller's request. As noted above, Weller was in the business of buying and selling potatoes. During 1982 and 1983, Weller found himself suffering from a cash shortage, and was being pressed by his creditors for payment. In order to prevent his creditors' actions from impeding his business operations, Weller formed respondent, and caused respondent to secure a PACA license, to allow him to continue to conduct his potato business. Respondent merely was an extension of Weller's previous business activities, and he was in sole control of its operations. Neither Benoit nor Sedar gave Mr. Tatoian directions with regard to forming the new corporation, and had no say in its formation.[6]

7. Benoit was never asked by Weller or anyone else to have a financial interest in the new company, and never contributed capital towards it. Moreover, although respondent's license application reflected that Benoit owned 100% of the corporation's stock, no stock was ever issued to him, nor to anyone else. However, Weller owned a beneficial interest in 100% of the corporate stock, and at all times controlled the entities' business affairs.[7]

8. During at least the period January 1971 through August 1983, Benoit was employed by Weller directly or indirectly through a company owned by Weller. He was employed as a truckdriver, a potato salesman, and also helped operate Weller's trucking business.[8]

9. Benoit was chosen to be "president" of respondent by Weller and Frascona.[9]

10. During the period 1979 to the date of the hearing, Frascona was continually employed by Weller, or by a company which Weller controlled. Frascona also assisted Weller in operating companies in which he (Frascona) was not employed. In all instances he served Weller's interests.[10]

11. Although Frascona was its treasurer, he received no remuneration, in any form, from Perfect Potato Packers. During the time he worked on matters on behalf of PPP, he was on Weller's payroll.[11]

12. Frascona owned no stock in Perfect Potato Packers.[12]

13. Frascona invested no capital into Perfect Potato Packers.[13]

14. During the period 1964 through the present, Sedar was employed by one of the Weller companies. At various times he worked for Dick Weller, Inc., Nurserymen's and Farmer's Shipping Association, and/or Action Brokerage.[14]

15. Although he was listed on the application for its PACA license as the vice president and secretary of Perfect Potato Packers, Sedar was not aware that he held such offices; he was never paid by or performed any significant services for PPP.[15]

16. Perfect Potato Packers used space in a building owned by Weller as its place of business. No lease agreement was ever signed, nor was any payment ever made for this use.[16]

17. In order to repack potatoes, Perfect Potato Packers used equipment owned by Weller, but no lease agreement was signed nor was any payment made to Weller for the use of this equipment. Moreover, the persons who operated the machinery were Weller employees.[17]

18. Perfect Potato Packers had no telephone of its own, but used Weller's telephones. No payment was made for this use.[18]

19. Weller's office was located in the same room as respondent's in Weller's building.[19]

20. Weller maintained one clerical staff, operating under the name Nurserymen's and Farmer's Shipping Association, in order to provide the clerical requirements for his various entities (including Perfect Potato Packers) through which he operated, such as payroll, insurance, etc. Thus, respondent's "employees" were paid for their work by Nurserymen's and Farmer's Shipping Association.[20]

21. Perfect Potato Packers did not have its own payroll.[21]

22. At Weller's direction, Perfect Potato Packers paid Weller for the potatoes by bank cashier's check payable to Weller.[22]

23. Payment by cashier's check was done to allow Weller to "selectively" pay obligations and favor his solar heating businesses.[23]

24. Weller had opened two solar heating companies; Northeast Solar Resources (also operated out of Weller's office facilities on Shoham Road, East Windsor, Connecticut) and New York Solar Resources.[24]

25. Creditors of Weller were sometimes paid directly by Perfect Potato Packers through the use of its corporate checks.[25]

26. The Weller potato operation included at least the following companies in addition to Perfect Potato Packers: Weller International (sole stockholder was Weller's wife, Patricia); Weller Potatoes, 1982, Inc. (stockholders were Benoit and Sedar); Nurserymen's and Farmer's Shipping Association (a nonstock corporation whose directors were Weller, R. S. Vanderbourn, and Russell Kellum); Weller Farms, Inc. (Weller is sole stockholder); Dick Weller, Inc.

(David Black is sole stockholder).[26]

27. All but the Canadian companies were physically located in the facility owned by Weller at Shoham Road in East Windsor, Connecticut.[27]

28. As cash flow or other circumstances required, money was shuffled back and forth among the several businesses, credits to one company assigned to another, or debts of one company directly paid by another.[28]

29. Perfect Potato Packers paid Weller for the potatoes it purchased from him.[29]

30. Weller gave a creditor of Perfect Potato Packers (Jerome Distributors) a personal note to cover the corporation's indebtedness of $76,347.75.[30]

31. Northeast Solar Resources paid a debt on behalf of Perfect Potato Packers in the amount of $5,300.00. When the amount was repaid to Northeast Solar Resources, it was repaid in the amount of $10,000.00. Respondent's books reflect that $5,300.00 was credited to the debt owed Northeast Solar Resources, and $4,700.00 was credited to its Weller account.[31]

32. Weller was issued a PACA license on January 29 1973. This license terminated on January 29 1984, when Weller failed to renew it in accordance with the requirements of section 4(a) of the PACA (7 USC 499d(a)). By a Consent Decision filed August 28 1984, (In re Phillip R. Weller d/b/a Richard Weller, PACA #2-6604) a finding was made that Weller committed willful, flagrant and repeated violations of the PACA by failing, during the period October 1981 through August 1983, to make full payment promptly to 15 sellers of the agreed purchase prices, or balances thereof, in the total amount of $823,611.38 for 387 lots of potatoes purchased, received, and accepted in interstate and foreign commerce.[32]

33. On May 19 1983, three reparation complaints under the PACA, including one for $275,000, were pending against Weller.[33]

The acts of Benoit, Sedar, and Frascona in making false and misleading statements on respondent's application for a PACA license, and Weller's act of soliciting such false and misleading statements, are willful violations of sections 3 and 8(c) of the PACA (7 USC §§ 499c and 499h(c)) and section 46.4 of the Regulations (7 CFR § 46.4)

Respondent, in its motion for reconsideration, inaccurately characterizes this comment as the "basis for the decision against respondent . . ." Page 1, respondent's motion for reconsideration [of the decision and order] filed September 16 1985.

The record establishes that the individuals were all aware of the serious financial problems besetting Weller and his various businesses. These financial difficulties gravely threatened Weller's license as a Perishable Agricultural Commodity handler so Weller allowed his license to lapse, and agreed to entry of a consent decision concerning failure to promptly pay over $800,000 for potatoes he purchased.

Respondent corporation was formed for the precise, clear and primary purpose as a "front" to hold a PACA license and continue Weller's extensive potato business.

This conspiracy-like arrangement to conceal Weller's control and participation is clearly in violation of the spirit of the law and regulations.

In essence, respondent corporation was formed for the purpose of evading federal regulatory control over licensees and those "responsibly connected" with licensees.

The creation of a new business entity with a different legal form or structure, while the people play musical chairs, is prohibited. Diane Mattes d/b/a Diane Mattes Livestock, et al. v. USDA, 721 F2d 1125, 1131 (CA 7 1983). See also § 3.28 in 1 Davidson, Agricultural Law, Ch. 3 (1981 and August 1984 Supp.) In re George Townsend, et al. 35 Agric. Dec. 1604, 1605, 1607, 1609, 1610-1615, 1617 (1976).

Here, respondent corporation Perfect Potato Packers was formed by Weller from bits and pieces of his other business operations to enable him to continue dealing in potatoes even though his PACA license had expired and several reparations proceedings pending against him could remain unsatisfied. (Unsatisfied final reparations decisions automatically suspend a PACA license.) Weller attempted to avoid these problems by forming the respondent corporation.

This action, brought pursuant to section 8(c) of the PACA (7 USC § 499h(c)), seeks revocation of respondent's PACA license because the license was obtained through the use of false and misleading statements in its application. The PACA was enacted to regulate and control the handling of fresh fruits and vegetables. 71 Cong. Rec. S-2163 (May 29 1929). Its passage was occasioned by the severe losses that shippers and growers were suffering due to unfair practices on the part of commission merchants, dealers, and brokers. H.R. Rep. 1041, 71 Cong., 2d Sess. (1930). Its primary purpose was to provide a practical remedy to small farmers and growers who were vulnerable to the sharp practices of financially irresponsible and unscrupulous brokers in perishable agricultural commodites. Chidsey v. Guerin, 443 F2d 584 (6th Cir. 1971); O'Day v. George Arakelian Farms, Inc., 536 F2d 856 (9th Cir. 1976). "Accordingly, certain conduct by commission merchants, dealers, or brokers [was] declared to be unlawful. 7 USC § 499b." Id. at 858. Enforcement is effectuated through a system of licensing with penalties for violations. H.R. 1041, 71st Cong., 2d Sess. (1930) 3. See, also George Steinberg & Son, Inc. v. Butz, 491 F2d 988 (2nd Cir.), cert. denied, 419 US 830 (1974).

As noted above, the instant case is brought pursuant to section 8(c) of the PACA, 7 USC 499h(c). Since there have been few cases brought pursuant to that section of the Act, it is one which is virtually unique in the annals of the Department. Section 8(c) of the Act prohibits an applicant from obtaining a PACA license through the use of a false or misleading statement in the application therefor, or through a misrepresentation, concealment, or withholding of facts respecting any violation of the PACA by any officer, agent, or employee of the applicant. Licenses obtained in violation of this section may be revoked. At first passage, the PACA did not include such a prohibition. The purpose of amending the PACA to include it was to close a loophole in the original legislation which might have allowed a violator of the Act to obtain a license through some kind of subterfuge. H. Rep. No. 489, 73d Cong., 2d Sess. (1934).

A review of the reported decisions in cases brought pursuant to the PACA discloses that only two decisions on the merits have been entered in cases brought pursuant to section 8(c).[36] In the first case, United Fruit Distributors, Inc., 24 Agric. Dec. 1234 (1965), the applicant falsely named a person who was not the corporation's president, treasurer and holder of 50% of its stock. In view of the false and misleading statements on the application, and in view of the testimony that, had the Department been informed of the identity of the person who truly was the corporation's president, treasurer and 50% stockholder that a bond pursuant to section 4(e) of the PACA (7 USC 499d(e)), would have been required of the applicant before the corporation's license would have been issued, the corporation's license was revoked. In the second case, Clara DeVault, 25 Agric. Dec. 1389 (1966), the respondent, an individual, used a new name in applying for a PACA license without disclosing that she had been formerly licensed under a different name. In view of the fact that the new license which was issued to her would not have been issued without the posting of a surety bond had she disclosed in answer to the questions on the application that she had been previously licensed under another name, her new license was revoked.

[36] See, also Latin-American Frt. and Shipping Corp., 14 Agric. Dec. 763 (1955), a case brought pursuant to § 8(c) in which the respondent failed to file an answer, and a default judgment was entered.

It is alleged by the complainant that in applying for its license under the PACA, Perfect Potato Packers failed to disclose Weller's dominating control of and interest in all aspects of respondent's affairs. Had Weller's control and direction of respondent's affairs been revealed to the Department at the time that the corporation applied for its license, the license would not have been issued. Thus, under the two cases discussed above, Perfect Potato Packers' license should be revoked. The issues raised are discussed below.

A. Perfect Potato Packers, Inc., was merely an alter ego of Weller.

The evidence is clear that Weller was a potato dealer who had been licensed under the Act for a number of years. It is also clear that Weller's potato business was conducted through a bevy of corporate entities, and that, in the 1982-1983 time period, his businesses were having financial difficulties. In order to enable him to continue to function in the industry, Weller established Perfect Potato Packers as an alter ego through which he could sell potatoes to other dealers in the industry and conceal the proceeds from his creditors.[37] In addition, the establishment of PPP also enabled Weller to avoid problems with transportation companies arising out of his potato operation.[38]

The evidence clearly establishes that, in applying for its PACA license, Perfect Potato Packers did not indicate that Weller had any involvement in the corporation. Rather, three other individuals (Benoit, Frascona and Sedar) were listed as responsibly connected with it. These three individuals were employees of Weller. They were operating pursuant to his direction and control at all times. Further, the record clearly establishes that Perfect Potato Packers was incorporated as a result of contacts which Weller or Mr. Salvatore Julian (a Weller employee) had with Philip E. Tatoian, Jr., Esq., who was the attorney who prepared the paperwork by which the corporation was formed.

[38] Hearing Transcript pages 174-177.

At no time was the corporate respondent ever operated independently of Weller's potato business. It operated from his building; indeed it shared his offices; none of its employees or agents were ever independent of Weller; it used his telephones; and another of Weller's business entities controlled all of the clerical work (including its payroll) involved in the operation of Perfect Potato Packers. All of the documentary evidence submitted into the record in this case supports the above assertions. None of the evidence submitted on behalf of the respondent supports the assertions of Weller and Frascona that Weller was not involved in the operation of Perfect Potato Packers.

The only conclusion which can be reached on the basis of the record adduced in this proceeding is that Perfect Potato Packers was merely an extension of Weller's potato enterprise. In fact, it was the alter ego through which he hoped to be able to continue to operate while he personally was under attack by his suppliers.

B. The respondent's PACA license contained a false and misleading statement in that Benoit and not Weller was reported as the owner of 100% of the corporation's stock.

The gravamen of the PACA violation with which respondent is charged is that it obtained its PACA license through the use of false and misleading statements on its application.

The application listed Marc G. Benoit as president, director and 100% stockholder.[39]

In fact, no stock had been issued to anyone. Throughout this time, the corporate records were wrapped in the printer's sealed cellophane package and kept at Attorney Tatoian's office. No one has requested or instructed Attorney Tatoian to issue any of the stock.

The evidence here establishes that beneficial ownership of PPP's stock rested in Weller. Weller recognized this when he made his petition to the United States Bankruptcy Court for the District of Connecticut, certifying under penalty of perjury that he did business as Richard Weller, Richard Weller Potatoes and Perfect Potato Packers.[40]

In testimony here, Weller denied owning Respondent's stock. However, in the bankruptcy proceeding, Weller certified under penalty of perjury that he was owner of 100% of the outstanding stock of Perfect Potato Packers, Inc., a corporation which he told the court "was originally activated to handle Richard Weller Potato." [41]

In addition, in a sworn statement given to Complainant's investigator, Weller said that—

> Perfect Potato Packers, Inc. was in reality only an extension of the Richard Weller operation and was under my sole control, functioning at my direction and upon my instructions.
> Although in applying for a license under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, it was shown that Marc Benoit held 100% of the stock, in reality no stock was issued to any individual, no organizational meeting was held and no officers or directors were ever elected.[42] (emphasis added)

The record establishes beyond doubt that Benoit was not a stockholder of Respondent and that Weller held the primary beneficial interest in respondent's stock, activities, and existence.

Respondent's application for a PACA license was false in listing Benoit as 100% stockholder.

Further, respondent's application for a PACA license was misleading in that it failed to disclose in any way the dominating and controlling interest of Weller. Weller, without question, was the primary beneficiary of Respondent's existence and affairs, and dominated its every move.

At the time respondent submitted its application for a PACA license, there were three open reparation complaints pending against Weller.[43] Just one of these would have been fatal—Weller's alleged failure to pay for $275,000.00 worth of potatoes.

The evidence establishes that had Complainant's licensing authorities been aware of Weller's relationship to Perfect Potato Packers, Inc., an investigation would have been conducted into this application. Had Weller's dominating control and interest in the respondent corporation been known, the license application would have been carefully examined and checked.

The evidence establishes that had the full circumstances been known to complainant's licensing authorities, no license would have been issued to Respondent corporation.

Respondent's application for a license contained false and misleading statements which concealed Weller's domination and control of respondent's affairs. No license clearly would have been issued to respondent had complainant known the facts.

In deference to separate and independent proceedings to determine who are persons "responsibly connected [44] with a PACA licensee, this decision is narrowly based on the false and misleading statements made in the license application.

There appears to be no need here to now decide whether the corporate entity ought to be disregarded or whether it ever properly began to do business.

Further, for the same reasons, it is not intended to be decisive of any issue concerning the validity or occupancy of any reputed directors, officers or stockholders status or relationship to the respondent corporation.

It is sufficient here to determine that the application, as filed, falsely listed Marc Benoit as 100% stockholder and was misleading in the sense that it concealed the role of Weller in the corporate affairs.

Further, nothing in this decision should suggest that anyone here was a man of evil heart deliberately setting out to cheat and defraud. [b] Serious business difficulties existed for Weller which threatened the continued viability of the businesses.

[44] § 4(b) of the Act (7 USC 499d(b)); 7 CFR 47.47.

[b] Respondent, on motion to reconsider, notes this lack of intent "to cheat and defraud." This was perhaps a too generous effort to prevent people from jumping to conclusions that a criminal-style conspiracy was established by this evidence. Perhaps it was, but this decision should not imply that possibility to a casual reader.

The effort to exonerate the individuals from this type of implication should not be read out of context wherein the behavior here is described as "a desperate effort" intended to have the effect of making it more difficult, if not impossible, for people to collect money owed by Weller or his various businesses.

Respondent contends that in the absence of an "intent to defraud" no finding of "false and misleading statements" is possible. (emphasis added)

The statute permits any license obtained through "a false or misleading statement in the application . . . " to be revoked. § 8(c) of the Act, 7 USC 499h(c), emphasis added.

It is respectfully submitted that the evidence here more than establishes the application as literally "false" and "misleading" to the complainant agency.

As a desperate effort to buy time and more operating room, the actions here were taken on a step-by-step basis. Filing the false application for a PACA license was one of those steps. It seems clear that each action and each individual participated in this matter with the idea that personal and business successes would follow, leading ultimately to full payment of all obligations. However, licensees under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act are not allowed to engage in such practices.

Respondent violated sections 3 and 8(c) of the PACA (7 USC §§ 499c and 499h(c)) and § 46.4 of the regulations (7 CFR § 46.4).

The only appropriate sanction under the binding precedents is revocation of the license.

ADDITIONAL CONCLUSIONS BY THE JUDICIAL OFFICER

Respondent contends on appeal that the ALJ's key findings are not adequately supported by the record, but the record abundantly supports the ALJ's findings and conclusions. In fact, the proof here far surpasses the preponderance of the evidence, which is all that is required.[45]

In addition, the ALJ, who saw and heard the witnesses testify, was in the best position to resolve the conflicts in testimony, and the conflicts between the testimony of certain witnesses, including Weller, and their prior contrary statements made under oath or penalty of perjury.[46] For example, in Fairbank v. Hardin, 429 F.2d 264, 268 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 943 (1970), the court, in affirming a decision by USDA's Judicial Officer, stated:

> When the trier of the facts, as here, expresses a doubt on the validity of oral testimony, the reviewing authority should not substitute its own judgment for that of the Examiner unless his findings are hopelessly incredible or flatly contradict either a "law of nature" or undisputed documentary evidence. Respondent urges that there is no proof that a license was issued to respondent, or that the license number was 831032, as found by the ALJ. However, there is adequate evidence in the record to support the ALJ's finding of fact as to the issuance of the license, particularly in the absence of any evidence to the contrary (see the citations in note 3, supra). For example, respondent's APPLICATION FOR LICENSE filed May 16, 1983, has a block on the upper right-hand corner of the first page stating "FOR USDA USE ONLY," in which the figure 831032 is stamped, along with "05/26/84." I infer that the stamped number "831032" is the number of the license issued to respondent, and that the date of May 26, 1984, is the anniversary date on which the license was subject to renewal.[47]

The ALJ properly held that there was no need to determine whether the corporate entity should be disregarded (Initial Decision at 25). But if such a determination were necessary, the issue would not be decided under Connecticut law, as contended by respondent (Appeal Petition at 12), but, rather, under Federal law. Under Federal law, the fact that Weller was the beneficial owner of 100% of the stock of respondent would be enough to invoke the doctrine of piercing the corporate veil.[48]

Respondent argues that there was no intent to defraud, but intent to defraud is not at issue here. Respondent's license may be [47] Complainant has belatedly attached a copy of PACA license no. 831032 issued to Perfect Potato Packers Inc., with an anniversary date of May 26, 1984, to its response to respondent's appeal filed December 16, 1985. If it were not for the fact that the record contains sufficient evidence to support the ALJ's finding as to the issuance of the license, I would have complainant file a copy of the license certified by the custodian thereof with the Hearing Clerk, and I would take official notice of the license, pursuant to the Department's rules of practice (7 CFR § 1.145(i)). (The Judicial Officer has, in a number of prior cases, taken official notice of records on file in the Department (see, e.g., In re Saylor, 44 Agric. revoked if "the license was obtained through a false or misleading statement in the application therefor" (7 U.S.C. § 499h(c)). As shown by the ALJ, the license application was false and misleading. In addition, if it were necessary to show intent to defraud, that was shown here. The record here warrants the inference that respondent corporation was created to defraud creditors (in the short run)[49] and to defraud the Secretary by concealing Weller's ownership on the application for a license (because of his payment difficulties that would have prevented him from obtaining a new license in his own name).

Respondent argues that its license expired and, therefore, it cannot now be revoked. But the congressional authorization to revoke a license obtained through a false or misleading statement in the application therefor is not limited to revoking a license in effect when the final order is issued (see 7 U.S.C. § 499h(c)).[50] The license was subject to renewal on May 26, 1984 (CX 1, p. 1), and, therefore, it was in effect when the complaint was filed on May 16, 1984. But irrespective of whether it was still in effect when the complaint was issued, a license which has been allowed to expire can, nonetheless, be revoked or suspended in appropriate circumstances.[51]

For the foregoing reasons, the following order should be issued.

ORDER

Respondent's license is revoked.

[49] This defrauding of creditors in the short run was undertaken to shield respondent's cash flow from creditors so that, hopefully, in the long run, respondent would be able to pay all creditors in full.

[50] If there were such a limitation in the Act, it would seriously undermine the congressional purpose in this respect since licenses expire on their anniversary date each year, unless renewed, and it takes longer than a year to complete a revocation proceeding.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.) hereinafter referred to as the "Act", instituted by a complaint filed on July 23, 1985, by the Acting Director, Fruit and Vegetable Division, Agricultural Marketing Service, United States Department of Agriculture. It is alleged in the complaint that during the period February 1984 through January 1985, respondent purchased, received, and accepted, in interstate and foreign commerce, from 10 sellers, 25 lots of fruits and vegetables, all being perishable agricultural commodities, but failed to make full payment promptly of the agreed purchase prices, in the total amount of $287,959.60.

A copy of the complaint was served upon respondent which complaint has not been answered. The time for filing an answer having run, and upon the motion of the complaint for the issuance of a Default Order, the following Decision and Order is issued without further investigation or hearing pursuant to section 1.139 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.139).

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Respondent, Stanley & Joe Russo, is a partnership comprised of Joe N. Russo and Stanley Russo, whose address is 1168 East 37th Street, Brooklyn, New York 10474.

2. Pursuant to the licensing provisions of the Act, license number 771200 was issued to respondent on May 3, 1977. This license was renewed annually, but terminated on May 3, 1985, pursuant to Section 4(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 499d(a)), when respondent failed to pay the required annual license fee. However, respondent's license was automatically suspended on January 2, 1985, pursuant to Section 7(d) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 499g(d)), when it failed to satisfy a reparation award issued by the Secretary. See PACA Docket No. RD-85-24 (44 Agric. Dec. ____).

3. As more fully set forth in paragraph 5 of the complaint, during the period February 1984 through January 1985, respondent purchased, received, and accepted in interstate and foreign commerce, from 10 sellers, 25 lots of fruits and vegetables, all being perishable agricultural commodities, but failed to make full payment promptly of the agreed purchase prices, in the total amount of $287,959.60.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent's failure to make full payment promptly with respect to the 25 transactions set forth in Finding of Fact No. 3, above, constitutes willful, repeated and flagrant violations of Section 2 of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 499b), for which the Order below is issued.

ORDER

A finding is made that respondent has committed willful, flagrant and repeated violations of Section 2 of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 499b), and the facts and circumstances set forth above, shall be published.

This order shall take effect on the 11th day after this Decision becomes final.

Pursuant to the Rules of Practice governing procedures under the Act, this Decision will become final without further proceedings 35 days after service hereof unless appealed to the Secretary by a party to the proceeding within 30 days after service as provided in sections 1.139 and 1.145 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR # 1.139 and 1.145).

Copies hereof shall be served upon parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks an award of reparation against respondent in the amount of $3,571.20 in connection with the shipment in interstate commerce of one truckload of cucumbers.

A copy of the report of investigation made by the Department was served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto denying liability to complainant.

The amount claimed in the formal complaint does not exceed $15,000.00, and the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to this procedure, the verified pleadings of the parties are considered a part of the evidence in the case, as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition, the parties were given an opportunity to file evidence in the form of sworn statements, however, neither party did so. Both parties filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Mission Fruit & Vegetables Distributors, Inc., is a corporation whose address is P.O. Box 1268, Nogales, Arizona.

2. Respondent, Cal-Mex Distributors, Inc., is a corporation whose address is P.O. Box 1717, Chula Vista, California. At the time of the transaction involved herein respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On or about November 18, 1983, complainant consigned to respondent and shipped to respondent in Chula Vista, California, from loading point in the state of Arizona, one truckload containing 648 crates of select cucumbers, and 144 crates of small cucumbers. It was agreed that respondent would be paid $.15 per crate as a sellig fee.

4. Respondent accepted the cucumbers on arrival, and on February 23, 1984, issued the following accounting to complainant:

2/23/84	36	CUCUMBERS	5.50	198.00
	684	CUCUMBERS (RETURNED)	0	0
	792	HANDLING CHARGES	.15	-118.80

5. On October 3, 1984, a personal investigation was conducted by an employee of this Department of Agriculture at the place of business of respondent in Chula Vista, California. This investigation showed that the 684 crates of cucumbers shown on respondent's accounting as returned were shipped to the Los Angeles area on December 3, 1983. Other than in the bill of lading showing the above shipment there was no documentation in respondent's records showing the disposition of the 684 crates of cucumbers. Mr. Villalobos, respondent's president, stated that the entire lot of 684 crates of cucumbers had been dumped by the ultimate receiver in Los Angeles. The Department's investigator constructed an accounting based upon Market News Service reports for Los Angeles on December 5, 1983. It was assumed that 144 of the 684 crates shipped to Los Angeles were the small cucumbers, and these cucumbers were assigned a value of the basis of the Market News reports of $3.00 per crate. The remaining 612 crates were assigned a value on the basis of the Market News reports of $5.00 per crate, and the investigator's accounting showed a total due, after a deduction of $.15 per crate as a handling charge, of $3,571.20 for all the cucumbers consigned to respondent.

6. Respondent issued complainant a check in the amount of $439.20 along with its accounting on February 24, 1984. Complainant never cashed this check. Respondent issued complainant an additional check along with its answer on February 9, 1985, in the amount of $360.00. Complainant never cashed this check.

7. An informal complaint was filed on May 10, 1984, which was within nine months after the cause of action herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

In its answer to the formal complaint respondent admitted that the accounting rendered to complainant in February of 1984, was incorrect. Respondent stated that it inadvertently failed to report 360 cucumbers sold to Milton Poulos on November 28, 1983, at $1.00 per crate for a total of $360.00. According to documentation submitted along with respondent's answer the remaining 324 crates of cucumbers were sent to Caballero Produce Company in Los Angeles on December 3, 1983, and were subsequently dumped. A federal inspection dated December 5, 1983, covering 324 crates of cucumbers at the place of business of Caballero Produce Company in Los Angeles was also included as an exhibit to the respondent's answer. This inspection report showed condition factors as follows: "Mostly fresh and firm. From 10 to 40%, average 26% yellowing. From 6 to 16%, average 12% various decays in various stages."

We are not favorably impressed with respondent's efforts, well over one year after having been consigned the subject cucumbers, to render an accounting for the 648 crates of cucumbers which it had first reported to have been returned, and subsequently reported orally to the Department's investigator to have been dumped. Regardless of the fact that this last accounting of the cucumbers by respondent may in fact be true, such accounting shows that respondent was dilatory in its dealing with the cucumbers. Perishable produce should not be allowed to sit in a warehouse for 10 to 15 days before it is shipped to another state for the purpose of being resold. See Collins Bros. Produce Co. v. Dixieland Produce, 38 Agric. Dec. 1031 (1979). We accept the constructed accounting of the Department's investigator as the most accurate indication available to us of the true value of the cucumbers. We find that respondent's failure to pay complainant the sum of $3,571.20 is a violation of section 2 of the Act for which reparation should be awarded to complainant with interest.

Respondent's attempted defense based on the allegation that the cucumbers were sent to it without its authorization after it had been contacted by complainant with a request to receive the cucumbers on consignment has been considered by us and is deemed inadequate. Respondent was not required to accept the cucumbers when they arrived at its place of business if it had not contracted previously to take them. When respondent did accept the cucumbers it incurred an obligation to deal with them in an expeditious and reasonable manner.

ORDER

Within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $3,571.20, with interest thereon at the rate of 13 percent per annum from January 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

Delivered sale—breach of contract as to condition and variety—Damages—failure to prove—Federal inspection—failure to prove produce covered by inspection same as produce received from complainant.

Complainant sold three truckloads of potatoes to resondent on a delivered basis. Respondent accepted the potatoes and proved a breach of contract as to two loads but failed to prove damages as to either load. Respondent failed to prove a breach as to the remaining bulk load of potatoes because such potatoes could not be identified with those covered by a federal inspection report submitted by respondent. DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks an award of reparation against respondent in the amount of $14,959.87 in connection with the shipment in interstate commerce of three truckloads of potatoes.

A copy of the report of investigation made by the Department was served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto denying liability to complainant and asserting a set-off in the amount of $12,000 arising out of the same transactions as those alleged in the formal complaint. Complainant filed a reply to the set-off denying any liability to respondent.

The amount claimed in neither the formal complaint nor setoff exceeds $15,000.00, and the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to this procedure, the verified pleadings of the parties are considered a part of the evidence in the case, as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition, the parties were given an opportunity to file evidence in the form of sworn statements. Complainant filed an opening statement. Respondent did not file an answering statement. Neither party filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, H. Smith Packing Corporation, is a corporation whose address is P.O. Box 189, Blaine, Maine.

2. Respondent is an individual, Chris Spiridis, doing business as Eastern Farmers Exchange Company, whose address is 11 Runyan Street, Bayshore, New York. At the time of the transactions involved herein respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. 10. The formal complaint was filed on December 24, 1984, which was within nine months after the causes of action alleged herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

Complainant brings this action to recover the purchase price of the three truckloads of potatoes accepted by respondent totalling $14,959.87, no part of which has been paid. Respondent alleges that complainant breached the contract of sale in regard to each of the loads of potatoes, and that instead of owing complainant any part of the purchase price, complainant is indebted to respondent for losses on the three loads of potatoes in the total amount of $12,000.00.

First, we note that as to the first load and third load of potatoes respondent admits that the 50 lb. bags of round white potatoes were received in good condition. Respondent asserts that the remaining master containers of poly bags were received in an abnormally deteriorated condition. Complainant alleges that the high temperatures shown by the federal inspection of these potatoes is responsible for the excessive decay, which amounted to an average of 13% in the 10 lb. poly bags and 6% in the 5 lb. poly bags. One portion of the master containers arrived on June 11, at 6:00 a.m., and other portion arrived on June 12, at 6:00 a.m. Both portions of potatoes were jointly inspected at 2:15 p.m. on June 13, 1984. In view of the fact that this was a delivered sale, making complainant responsible for the potatoes during transit and requiring delivery in good condition, we find that the length of time between arrival and inspection was not long enough to account for the excessive decay shown by the federal inspection even though temperatures were high. We find that complainant breached the contract of sale as to the master containers of potatoes. In addition it is obvious that complainant breached the contract of sale as to the variety of potatoes delivered in the master containers.

Although respondent alleged a loss resulting from complainant's breach of contract, and submitted a statement of expenses in an attempt to document such loss, respondent nowhere submitted an accounting covering the resale of any of the potatoes which are the subject of this proceeding. Respondent's "statement of expenses" contains no data whatsoever showing the amount for which the potatoes were resold. In the absence of this data we are unable to award respondent any damages for complainant's breach. See Anthony Brokerage, Inc. v. The Auster Company, Inc., 38 Agric. Dec. 1643 (1979); Relan Produce Farms v. Rushton & Co., Inc., 38 Agric. Dec. 1636 (1979); and Genbroker Corp. v. Super Food Services, 38 Agric. Dec. 83 (1979).

In an effort to prove a breach of contract as to the second load of potatoes respondent submitted the federal inspection referred to in finding of fact 8. Complainant objected strenuously to this inspection on the grounds that the potatoes covered by the inspection could not be identified with the bulk load of potatoes shipped by complainant. Although respondent submitted documentation in an effort to show that no potatoes other than complainant's were on hand during the time period in question, such documentation does not cover bulk potatoes, but only potatoes in poly bags or 50 lb. paper bags. We conclude that respondent has failed to prove a breach of contract in regard to the bulk load of potatoes. In addition we note that even had respondent proved a breach in regard to the bulk load of potatoes respondent also failed to prove damages as to these potatoes.

Respondent accepted the three loads of potatoes shipped by complainant, and has failed to prove any damages with respect to any of the loads. Consequently, respondent is liable to complainant for the full purchase price thereof, or $14,959.87. Respondent's failure to pay complainant such amount is a violation of section 2 of the Act for which reparation should be awarded to complainant with interest. Respondent's set off, of course, cannot be allowed.

ORDER

Within thirty days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $14,959.87, with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from July 1, 1984, until paid.

REPARATION ORDER

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $144,377.00 in connection with a shipment of produce in interstate commerce. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto.

In paragraph 3 of its answer, respondent denied complainant's allegations that it failed to pay for the produce and currently owes $144,377.00, but qualified such denial by adding "in that respondent did not willfully or knowingly commit any violations" of the Act. Respondent qualified its denial even further in paragraph 3A, stating that "it intends to remain current in its obligations to complainant in the future and is currently in the process of arranging to make payment to complainant." In a letter to respondent's counsel dated November 5, 1985, the Presiding Officer noted that the answer appeared to admit liability, and gave respondent's counsel 10 days from its receipt of the letter to show cause why a reparation order against respondent should not be issued in the amount alleged in the complaint. No response was received by the Department. Accordingly, the issuance of an order without further procedure is appropriate, pursuant to section 47.8(d) of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 47.8(d)).

Complainant, H. Schnell & Company, Inc. is a corporation whose address is 243 New York City Terminal Market, Bronx, New York. Respondent, Green Village Fruit & Vegetable Co., Inc., is a corporation whose address is 220A New York City Terminal Market, Bronx, New York. At the time of the transaction involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

The facts alleged in the formal complaint are hereby adopted as findings of fact of this order. On the basis of these facts, we conclude that the actions of respondent are in violation of section 2 of the Act (7 U.S.C. 499b) and have resulted in damages to complainant of $144,377.00. Accordingly, within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $144,377.00, with interest thereon at the rate of 13 percent per annum from April 1, 1985, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

A failure to pay this amount within 30 days will constitute a violation of section 2 of the Act. 7 U.S.C. 499b.

Respondent's liability for payment of the disputed amount is left for subsequent determination in the same manner and under the same procedure as if no order for the payment of the undisputed amount had been issued.

REPARATION ORDER

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $1,850.00 in connection with a shipment of apples in interstate commerce. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto, admitting the material allegations of the complaint, including the indebtedness claimed by complainant. Accordingly, the issuance of an order without further procedure is appropriate, pursuant to section 47.8(d) of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 47.8(d)).

Complainant, Tree Fruit Marketing, Inc., is a corporation whose address is P. O. Box 1707, Wenatchee, Washington 98801. Respondent, West Coast Produce Sales, Inc., is a corporation whose address is P. O. Box 3072, Visalia, California 93278. At the time of the transaction involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

The facts alleged in the formal complaint are hereby adopted as findings of fact of this order. On the basis of these facts, we conclude that the actions of respondent are in violation of section 2 of the Act (7 U.S.C. 499b) and have resulted in damages to complainant of $1,850.00. Accordingly, within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $1,850.00, with interest thereon at the rate of 13 percent per annum from October 1, 1984, until paid.

Probative value of prompt invoice—Failure to secure neutral inspection—Accord and satisfaction-express notice that proffered payment is conditioned upon acceptance as full satisfaction, necessary element of.

Where respondent failed to make timely objection to complainant's invoice, respondent's evidence was found insufficient to show contract price different from that shown on invoice or to show consignment rather than f.o.b. sale. Respondent's failure to secure neutral inspection precluded proof of chilling injury to bananas, and words on payment check cashed by complainant—"if incorrect please return", did not show that profferred payment was conditioned upon acceptance of check as full satisfaction of indebtedness.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks an award of reparation against respondent in the amount of $5,292.00 in connection with the shipment in interstate commerce of five truckloads of bananas.

A copy of the report of investigation made by the Department was served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto denying liability to complainant. Respondent's answer included a counterclaim in the amount of $13,919.43 arising out of the same transactions. Complainant filed a reply to the counterclaim denying any liability thereunder.

Since amount claimed in both the formal complaint and the counterclaim does not exceed $15,000.00, the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to this procedure, the verified pleadings of the parties are considered a part of the evidence in the case, as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition, the parties were given an opportunity to file evidence in the form of sworn statements. Complainant filed an opening statement, respondent filed an answering statement, and complainant filed a statement in reply. Respondent also filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Pacific Fruit, Inc., is a corporation whose address is 19 Rector Street, New York, New York.

2. Respondent, Peter J. Bonafede, is an individual doing business as J. Bonafede & Sons, whose address is 15–16 New England Produce Center, Chelsea, Massachusetts. At the time of the transactions involved herein respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On or about September 30, 1983, complainant sold to respondent, and shipped from loading point at the port of Newark, New Jersey to respondent in Chelsea, Massachusetts, three truckloads of bananas, each containing 950 boxes at $8.00 per box, plus a handling charge of $.36 per box, and a fuel surcharge of $.37 per box, for a total invoice price for the three truckloads of $24,880.50, f.o.b.

4. On or about December 24, 1983, complainant sold to respondent, and shipped from loading point in the port of Newark, New Jersey to respondent in Chelsea, Massachusetts, two truckloads of bananas, one containing 920 containers at $6.00 per container, and the other containing 814 containers at $6.00 per container, plus $.40 per container for a handling charge, and $.37 per container for a fuel surcharge, or a total invoice price for the two truckloads of $11,739.18, f.o.b.

5. Respondent accepted the three truckloads of bananas shipped on September 30, 1983, and has paid complainant $22,030.50, leaving a balance still due and owing of $2,850.00.

6. Respondent accepted the two truckloads of bananas shipped on December 23, 1983, and has paid complainant $9,297.18, leaving a balance still due and owing of $2,442.00.

7. The informal complaint was filed on February 7, 1984, which was within nine months after the causes of action herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent has raised a number of defenses to complainant's action. First, respondent claims that two of the truckloads sold on September 30, 1983, were not sold at $8.00 per box, but rather were to be priced at $1.00 per box less than the prevailing market price for a different brand of bananas. Second, respondent contends that the third load shipped on September 30, 1983, was not sold, but was consigned by complainant to respondent. Respondent lays great stress upon the fact that "complainant did not issue a confirmation of sale stating the quality of the bananas to be shipped or the prices agreed upon for the bananas shipped etc." We are frankly at a loss to understand why this point was raised by respondent as a defense. The record clearly establishes that complainant promptly issued invoices stating the quantities and prices of the bananas, and nowhere does respondent deny receiving such invoices. Neither does the record show that respondent objected promptly to the invoices received. The duty to issue a "confirmation of sale" is placed by the regulations upon brokers. In any event the invoices sent by complainant accomplished the same purpose as a "confirmation of sale". We have carefully considered all of the evidence submitted by both parties in regard to the two shipments in question and have no hesitation in finding that respondent has failed to meet its burden of proof in regard to his allegation of a different pricing arrangement than that reflected in the invoice sent by complainant.

As to the third load of bananas shipped on September 30, 1983, respondent contends that such bananas were not sold, but rather were consigned to respondent by complainant. This load was, of course, also included on the same invoice as the other two loads, and such invoice clearly shows this load was sold at the same price as the other two loads. Again, we have examined all of the evidence submitted by the parties, and we conclude that respondent has failed to meet its burden of proving that this load was consigned by complainant.

As to the two loads shipped on December 23, 1983, complainant also promptly invoiced respondent for the prices shown in the findings of fact. Respondent again contends that there was a different pricing agreement. However, respondent has not shown that it objected promptly to complainant's invoice, and we find the other evidence submitted by respondent in an effort to prove a separate pricing agreement to be unconvincing.

Respondent also alleges that some of the bananas which it received had been damaged by chilling injury. However, respondent submitted no inspection by a neutral party to establish the extent or fact of such injury. Consequently this defense can be given no credence. See Mutual Vegetable Sales v. Select Distributors, 38 Agric. Dec. 1359 (1979).

Respondent raises as an additional defense the allegations that there was an accord and satisfaction between the parties as a result of complainant's acceptance of the two checks sent by respondent in payment of the two invoices. In National Produce Distributors, Inc. v. Stewart Produce Company, 21 Agric. Dec. 955 (1962) we stated ". . . to establish an accord and satisfaction, payment should be offered in full satisfaction of the demand, and be accompanied by acts and declarations amounting to express notice that the payment is conditional, and, if accepted, must be received in satisfaction of the claim." Respondent asserts that because the checks had the printed words "if incorrect please return", complainant's acceptance of such checks accomplished an accord and satisfaction. This is clearly not the case. The elements of an accord and satisfaction have not been proven by the respondent.

Respondent accepted the five truckloads of bananas, and thus became liable to complainant for the full purchase price thereof, or $36,619.68. Of this amount respondent has already paid complainant $31,327.68, which leaves a balance still due and owing of $5,292.00. Respondent's failure to pay complainant this amount is a violation of section 2 of the Act for which reparation should be awarded to complainant with interest. The counterclaim, since it arose out of the same transactions which were the subject of the complaint, should be dismissed.

ORDER

Within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation $5,292.00, with interest thereon at the rate of 13 percent per annum from January 1, 1984, until paid.

The counterclaim is dismissed.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

F.O.B. sale—Unloading and resale constitutes acceptance—Condition of produce on arrival must be established by neutral inspection showing exact extent of damage—Modification of contract allowing produce to be handled on consignment must be shown by clear and unambiguous language.

In a f.o.b. sale of bananas respondent accepted by unloading and reselling the produce. Respondent did not secure a neutral inspection of the bananas and thus failed to prove that they did not make good delivery. Respondent also failed to establish that the contract was modified to allow it to handle the bananas on a consignment basis. Complainant awarded reparation in the full amount of the purchase price, or $4,320.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks an award of reparation against respondent in the amount of $4,320.00 in connection with the shipment in interstate commerce of one truckload of bananas.

A copy of the report of investigation made by the Department was served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto denying liability to complainant. Respondent's answer included a counterclaim arising out of the same transaction as that which was the subject of the complaint. Complainant filed a reply to respondent's counterclaim denying any liability thereunder. The amount claimed in neither the formal complaint nor counterclaim exceeds $15,000, and the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to this procedure, the verified pleadings of the parties are considered a part of the evidence in the case, as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition, the parties were given an opportunity to file evidence in the form of sworn statements, however, neither party did so. Neither party filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Chiquita Brands, Inc., is a corporation whose address is 15 Mercedes Drive, Montvale, New Jersey.

2. Respondent, J. Williams, Jr. Co., Inc., is a corporation whose address is 116 Harrison Road, Wallingford, Connecticut. At the time of the transaction involved herein respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On or about March 1, 1984, complainant sold to respondent one truckload containing 900 boxes of bananas at four dollars per box, plus a fuel surcharge of $360, and handling charges of $360, for a total amount of $4,320.00, f.o.b.

4. On or about March 1, 1984, complainant shipped the bananas from loading point in the state of New York to respondent in the State of Connecticut. The bananas were imported from the country of Costa Rica.

5. The bananas arrived at respondent's place of business on or about March 2, 1984, and were unloaded by respondent. Respondent has not paid complainant any part of the purchase price of the bananas.

6. The formal complaint was filed on October 15, 1984, which was within nine months after the cause of action herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

Although respondent denies acceptance of the 900 boxes of bananas it is evident that respondent unloaded such bananas from the truck, and resold a portion of the bananas. We have held many times that such actions constitute sufficient exercise of dominion and control over produce so as legally to amount to an acceptance. See Santa Clara Produce v. Caruso Produce Inc., 41 Agric. Dec. 2279 (1982) and Crown Orchard Co. v. Mid-Valley Prod. Corp., 34 Agric. Dec. 1381 (1975). Having accepted the bananas respondent became liable to complainant for the full purchase price thereof less any damages caused by any breach of contract proved by respondent.

Respondent alleges that complainant breached the contract of sale by shipping bananas of extremely poor quality. Respondent's president, Joseph Williams, III, stated in a sworn affidavit that he personally inspected the bananas after their arrival and found that they were "of very poor quality in that they were of poor color, old, scarred and generally unsalable." We have often discounted testimonial evidence concerning the condition of perishable commodities, and stated the necessity of obtaining a neutral inspection showing the exact extent of damage. See Mutual Vegetable Sales v. Select Distributors, 38 Agric. Dec. 1359 (1979); G. J. Albert, Inc. v. Salvo, 36 Agric. Dec. 240 (1977); Salt Lake Produce Co., Inc. v. Butte Produce Co. Inc., 32 Agric. Dec. 1732 (1973); B. G. Anderson Company, Inc. v. Mountain Produce Co., 29 Agric. Dec. 513 (1970); and O. D. Huff, Jr., Inc. v. Pagano & Sons, 21 Agric. Dec. 385 (1962). We conclude that respondent has not met its burden of proving that the bananas failed to make good delivery on arrival.

Respondent's president also asserted that after noting the poor quality of the bananas he contacted complainant's area sales representative who stated that respondent "should keep the shipment, do with it what respondent could and he, the sales representative, would deal with it later." Assuming that this allegation by respondent's president is true, there is nothing in the alleged statement of respondent's sales representative from which we could construe a settlement of any dispute between the parties, or which would authorize respondent paying for the bananas at less than contract price. Words such as "do the best you can", "the buyer should work it out", "handle best possible", or "handle to best advantage" do not constitute permission to handle a shipment on a consignment basis. See Relan Produce Farms v. Rushton & Co., Inc., 38 Agric. Dec. 1636 (1979); Barkley Company of Arizona v. Ifsco, Inc., 31 Agric. Dec. 279 (1972); Frank Gaglione & Son v. Theron Hooker Co., 30 Agric. Dec. 528 (1971); and Ralph Samsel v. L. Gillarde Sons Co., 19 Agric. Dec. 374 (1960).

Respondent accepted the bananas and has not proved a breach of contract on the part of complainant, nor has respondent proved that the contract was modified after acceptance. Accordingly, respondent is liable to complainant for the full purchase price of the bananas, or $4,320.00. Respondent's failure to pay complainant such amount is a violation of section 2 of the Act for which reparation should be awarded to complainant with interest. Respondent's counterclaim, since it arose out of the same cause of action as alleged in the complaint, should be dismissed.

ORDER

Within thirty days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $4,320.00, with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from April 1, 1984, until paid. Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks an award of reparation against respondent in the amount of $556.00 in connection with the shipment in interstate commerce of one truckload of potatoes.

A copy of the Report of Investigation made by the Department was served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto denying liability to complainant.

The amount claimed in the formal complaint does not exceed $15,000, and the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to this procedure, the verified pleadings of the parties are considered a part of the evidence in the case, as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition, the parties were given an opportunity to file evidence in the form of sworn statements. Complainant filed an opening statement, and respondent filed an answering statement. Complainant did not file a statement in reply. Neither party filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Harvest Fresh Produce, Inc., is a corporation whose address is P.O. Box 510, 1246 South Broadway, Othello, Washington.

2. Respondent, Alsum Produce, Inc., is a corporation whose address is P.O. Box 188, Friesland, Wisconsin. At the time of the transaction involved herein respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On or about July 13, 1984, complainant sold to respondent, through H. L. Newland, of Pacific Sun Marketing, acting as broker, one truckload containing 450 100 pound new burlap sacks of U.S. No. 1, size A, Round Red potatoes, at the agreed price of $14.25 per hundredweight, f.o.b., with market protection through July 17, 1984.

4. On or about July 13, 1984, complainant shipped from loading point in Othello, Washington to respondent in Friesland, Wisconsin, the potatoes described in Finding of Fact 3 above, except that the truck was short 8 sacks of potatoes. Respondent accepted the potatoes on arrival.

5. Complainant invoiced respondent on the basis of 450 sacks of potatoes at $14.25 per hundredweight, or $6,412.50. Respondent paid complainant for 442 sacks of potatoes on the basis of $1.00 per sack adjustment for market decline, or $5,856.50.

6. The formal complaint was filed on January 17, 1985, which was within nine months after the cause of action herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

The parties to this proceeding agree that their communication with each other was only through the broker, H.L. Newland of Pacific Sun Marketing. Complainant alleges that the sale of the potatoes was f.o.b. with no provision for adjustment due to market decline. Respondent asserts that the sale was on a delivered basis at a price of $18.00 per hundredweight with a provision for market protection to be measured against potatoes which respondent was purchasing out of Alabama. The broker states that the sale of the potatoes was for $14.25 per hundredweight, f.o.b., with market protection through July 17, 1984, but that the market protection was to be based on f.o.b. prices of potatoes originating in Washington state.

We have carefully assessed the evidence presented by both parties to this proceeding and find that although there was a provision for market protection, such protection was to be based on f.o.b. shipping point prices, and not on the prices of potatoes originating in the state of Alabama. It should be noted that even had we found in respondent's favor in regard to the question of where the market protection was to be measured, respondent failed to submit evidence demonstrating any decline in price of potatoes originating in Alabama. Respondent also did not demonstrate a decline in market price of potatoes originating in Washington state.

Respondent is liable to complainant on the basis of the invoice price of $14.25 per hundredweight for the 442 sacks of potatoes received, or a total of $6,298.50, less the $5,856.50 which it has already paid complainant, or a net amount of $442.00. Respondent's failure to pay complainant such amount is a violation of Section 2 of the Act for which reparation should be awarded to complainant with interest.

ORDER

Within thirty days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $442.00, with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from August 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.). A timely informal complaint was filed on July 27, 1984 and a formal complaint was filed on November 15, 1984. Complainant seeks to recover $4,935.35, which amount is alleged to be the outstanding balance for two loads of cantaloupes sold to, respondent and shipped in interstate commerce during the period June 7 through June 13, 1984.

A copy of the Department's report of investigation was served upon the parties. Respondent filed an answer to the complaint denying liability and claiming a breach of warranty by complainant.

The amount claimed in the formal complaint does not exceed $15,000.00, and the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20), is, therefore, applicable. Pursuant to this procedure the verified pleadings of the parties are considered part of the evidence in this case, as is the Department's Report of Investigation. In addition, the parties were given an opportunity to file evidence in the form of sworn statements. Complainant filed an opening statement, with two verified statements by witnesses, to which respondent filed an answering statement, and to which complainant filed a statement in reply. Neither party filed briefs.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Vale Mayes & Company, Inc., is a corporation whose address is P.O. Box 966, Edinburg, Texas 78540. At the time of the transactions involved herein complainant was licensed under the Act.

2. Respondent, Louis Kaleck, is an individual doing business as Kaleck Distributing Company, whose business mailing address is P.O. Box 1432, McAllen, Texas 78501. At the time of the transactions involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On June 7, 1984, complainant sold to respondent for delivery to his customer in interstate commerce 1,095 cartons of cantaloupes, made up of 168 cartons of #12's at $7.00 per carton f.o.b.; 504 cartons of #16's at $7.00 per carton f.o.b.; and 423 cartons of #23's at $5.50 per carton f.o.b. One ryan recording instrument cost $22.50. Thus, the total cost of the shipment was $7,053.00.

4. Prior to the produce being shipped, it was federally inspected and found to grade U.S. No. 1 and have "good internal quality".

5. The produce described in paragraph 3 was shipped June 7, 1984, and arrived in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania on June 11, 1984, where it was received and accepted by Gullo Produce, Inc.

6. On June 13, 1984, complainant sold to respondent for delivery to his customer in interstate commerce 1,119 cartons of cantaloupe, made up of 199 cartons of #9's at $6.50 per carton f.o.b.; 130 cartons of #12's at $7.50 per carton f.o.b.; 112 cartons of #15's at $8.00 per carton f.o.b.; 616 cartons of #18's at $7.50 per carton f.o.b.; and 112 cartons of #23's at $5.50 per carton. One ryan recording instrument cost $22.50. Thus, the total cost of the shipment was $8,098.00

7. Prior to the produce described in paragraph 6 being shipped, it was federally inspected and found to grade U.S. No. 1 and have "good internal quality".

8. The produce described in paragraph 5 was shipped June 13, 1984, and arrived in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania on June 17, 1984, where it was received and accepted by Gullo Produce, Inc.

9. Although the total invoiced price of the two shipments was $15,142.00, respondent paid complainant a total of $10,215.65.

10. The complaint was filed on November 15, 1984, which was within nine months after the cause of action herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent's defense to complainant's action herein is the allegation that complainant breached the contract of sale by supplying cantaloupe which arrived in a deteriorated condition. In other words, respondent alleges a breach of contract based upon the alleged violation of the warranty of suitable shipping condition applicable in f.o.b. sales. There is one problem which precludes us from finding such a breach of contract on the part of complainant. Complainant has introduced credible evidence that both shipments of cantaloupes met the grade U.S. No. 1 prior to shipment. The evidence indicates that the June 7, 1984 purchase arrived in Pittsburgh on either June 10 or 11th, and the purchase of June 13th arrived in Pittsburgh on June 17th. Respondent, in its answering statement, submitted one abridged report of federal inspection which respondent contends shows the product to be in poor condition. The inspection report, B99276, is dated June 15, either four or five days after the arrival and acceptance of the first load, and two days before the arrival of the second load. Since it is obvious that the proffered inspection report cannot relate to the second load, we must determine whether it constitutes an inspection of the first load which arrived on either June 10th or 11th.

Three statements within the proffered document make us conclude that the inspection report dated June 15th does not relate to either of the transactions at issue here. The first statement concerns the total number of cartons contained on the truck. Complainant's evidence shows 1,095 cartons were shipped on June 7th. The June 15th inspection report indicates 1,064 cartons, a difference of 31 cartons. Nowhere in respondent's evidence or pleadings is this discrepancy explained. In addition, the evidence shows that the June 7th shipment contained on ly size 12's, 18's, and 23's cantaloupes, yet the inspection report of June 15th indicates that the truck which was inspected contained cantaloupes in sizes 9's and 15's in addition to the sizes shipped. Even if we were to disregard this significant inconsistency, the final, conclusive discrepancy is the number of cartons of each size. The inspection report of June 15th indicates 392 cartons of #9's and #12's and 672 cartons of #15–18 and 23's. There is no way to match this with the 168 cartons of #12's, the 504 cartons of #18's, and the 423 cartons of #23's shipped to respondent by complainant on June 7, 1984. The only conclusion we can come to after our examination of the proffered inspection report of June 15th is that the report apparently does not relate to either of the two shipments at issue here.

Respondent's only remaining evidence relating to the cantaloupe's condition is its testimonial evidence.

We have often discounted testimonial evidence concerning the condition of perishable commodities, and asserted the necessity of obtaining a neutral inspection showing the exact extent of damage. See Mutual Vegetable Sales v. Select Distributors, 38 A.D. 1359 (1979), and cases there cited. The problem with such evidence is that it is self-serving, and is almost never based on adequate and randomly selected samples as well as the failure to state the exact percentage of damage based on precisely defined criteria. For us to accept this type of testimony it would be necessary that it first be proved by substantial evidence that no federal or private inspection was available and secondly, that the commodity was inspected by several neutral parties who took a significant number of samples, randomly selected, from the entire lot of produce, and examined each fruit in each sample and accurately recorded the exact percentage of damaged fruit from each sample, with what was considered as "damage" being precisely defined. Produce Specialists of Arizona, Inc. v. Gulfport Tomatoes, Inc., 42 A.D. 1194 (1979).

Respondent accepted the subject cantaloupes, and has failed to prove a breach on the part of complainant. Respondent is, therefore, liable to complainant for the full purchase price of the cantaloupes, or $15,142.00 less the $10,215.65 which respondent already paid to complainant on July 16, 1984, or a net amount of $4,926.35. Respondent's failure to pay complainant such amount is a violation of section 2 of the Act for which reparation should be awarded to complainant with interest.

ORDER

Within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation $4,926.35 with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from July 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks an award of reparation against respondent in the amount of $2,512.00 in connection with the shipment in interstate commerce of a truckload of broccoli.

A copy of the report of investigation made by the Department was served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto denying liability to complainant.

The amount claimed in the formal complaint does not exceed $15,000.00, and the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to this procedure, the verified pleadings of the parties are considered a part of the evidence in the case, as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition, the parties were given an opportunity to file evidence in the form of sworn statements. Complainant filed an opening statement. Respondent did not file an answering statement. Complainant filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant is a partnership composed of Bennett W. Brown, Reno D. Costella, Lael C. Lee, and Halbert Moller, doing business as Associated Produce Distributors, whose address is P.O. Box 1155, Castroville, California.

2. Respondent, Kurt Van Engel Commission Co., Inc., is a corporation whose address is 115 South Second Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. At the time of the transactions involved herein respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On or about September 25, 1984, complainant sold to respondent, through a broker, Tracy Willis Co. of Salinas, California, one truckload containing 1,056 cartons of size 14 broccoli, Green Glen label, at $6.00 per carton, plus $.65 per carton for cooling, $.15 per carton for palletization, and $65.00 for top ice, or a total price for the truckload of $7,245.80. The terms of sale were stated to be "FOB. A second load to be shipped Thursday at same price."

4. On or about September 26, 1984, complainant advised the broker that it had light supplies of broccoli for the week, and it was questionable whether complainant could make the second load as contracted. The broker advised complainant that both loads were committed at $6.80, and that if the second load was not shipped respondent would have to buy a replacement load, and complainant would be responsible for any additional cost over the agreed $6.80 price.

5. On or about September 28, 1984, complainant shipped to respondent a partial truckload of broccoli consisting of 288 cartons of size 14, Green Glen label at $6.00 per carton, plus $.65 per carton for cooling, $.15 per carton for palletization, and $19.50 for top ice, or a total price of $1,977.90.

6. Respondent accepted the first load of broccoli and the second partial load of broccoli, and made cover purchases to supply the 772 cartons of broccoli not shipped by complainant. Respondent purchased 196 cartons of size 14 broccoli on September 29, 1984, from California Artichoke and Vegetable Growers Corporation of Castrolville, California at a f.o.b. price of $10.80 per carton including cooling and palletization, or a total price of $2,116.80. Respondent purchased an additional 576 cartons of size 14 broccoli from Tom Bengard Ranch, Inc., of Salinas, California on September 29, 1984, at $9.80 per carton, or a total price of $5,644.80. The total cover price for the 772 cartons of broccoli was $7,761.60. Respondent paid complainant in full for the 288 cartons of broccoli shipped on September 28, 1984, and after deducting its cover cost of $2,512.00, respondent paid complainant $4,733.00 of the original $7,245.80 invoice price on the first load of broccoli.

7. The formal complaint was filed on March 11, 1985, which was within nine months after the cause of action alleged herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

Complainant asserts that the terms of its contract of sale in regard to the first shipment of broccoli only required that it ship a second load of broccoli at the same price if it had sufficient supplies to do so. However, the memorandum of sale issued promptly by the broker does not state any such qualification in regard to complainant's duty to ship a second load at the same price. We conclude that complainant was obligated to ship an entire load of broccoli at the same price as the first load.

Complainant also asserts that it never received any communication either from the broker or from the respondent, that respondent would make cover purchases due to complainant's failure to ship the entire 1,060 cartons of broccoli on the second load. However the broker clearly states in a letter to this Department, which was included as an exhibit to the Department's report of investigation, that he verbally informed complainant that respondent would buy replacement broccoli if the second load were not shipped at the agreed $6.80 price.

In addition complainant calls our attention to the fact that a second broker's memorandum of sale was issued as to the shipment of 288 cartons of broccoli from complainant to respondent, and that this confirmation nowhere states that respondent would be buying against the contract of complainant. We do not consider this to be at all significant. Complainant is somehow under the mistaken notion that respondent had a legal duty to give complainant notice prior to making the cover purchases. However, there is no such duty where, as here, there is a failure to ship produce which a shipper is contractually bound to ship. See Uniform Commercial Code §§ 2-711 & 2-712. Complainant knew without being told that it had failed to ship to respondent the broccoli which it had previously obligated itself to ship. Complainant also should have known that respondent had a legal right to make cover purchases as a consequence of complainant's failure.

We find on the basis of all of the evidence that the cover purchases made by respondent were prompt and proper and that the cost of such cover was properly deducted by respondent when it made payment to complainant. The complaint should be dismissed.

ORDER

The complaint is dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 999a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks an award of reparation against respondent in connection with the sale of 421 cartons of Idaho potatoes in interstate commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation prepared by the Department was served upon each of the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto admitting liability, but claiming that an extension of credit was agreed to by the parties. The amount claimed as damages in the formal complaint does not exceed $15,000.00, and, therefore, the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Under this procedure, the verified pleadings of the parties are a part of the evidence in this case as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition, the parties were given the opportunity to file evidence in the form of verified statements, but neither party did. On December 2, 1985, complainant filed a two sentence brief stating that respondent still owed complainant the entire amount for the potatoes, $4,455.00.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant is a corporation whose address is 195 West Broadway, Ucon, Idaho 83454. At the time of the transaction involved herein complainant was licensed under the Act.

2. Respondent, Ben Vasquez Produce, Inc., is a corporation whose address is 800 Booth Street, 2548 Airline Drive, Houston, Texas 77009. At the time of the transaction involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On or about November 29, 1984, complainant sold to respondent 225 50 pound cartons of U.S. No. 1-70 count Idaho potatoes at $21.00 per carton, 100 50 pound cartons of U.S. No. 1-80 count Idaho potatoes at $21.00 per carton, 75 50 pound cartons of U.S. NO. 1-90 count Idaho potatoes at $19.00 per carton; and 22 100 pound burlap sacks of U.S. No. 1 Idaho (bakers) potatoes at $15.00 per sack. The terms of the sale were "f.o.b. prices".

4. The sale was negotiated by C. H. Robinson Company, a broker located in Houston, Texas.

5. On or about November 29, 1984, beginning at 8:00 a.m. and concluding on November 30, 1984 at 3:00 p.m., the potatoes which were the subject of the contract between complainant and respondent were federally inspected at complainant's place of business in Ucon, Idaho, with the potatoes grading U.S. No. 1 and meeting the size as marked.

6. On November 30, 1984, complainant shipped the said potatoes to respondent in Houston, Texas. Upon arrival, respondent accepted said potatoes.

7. Respondent has made no payment to complainant in connection with the potatoes which were invoiced at $4,455.00.

8. The complaint was filed on May 30, 1985, which was within nine months from the date the cause of action arose.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent has failed to pay complainant $4,455.00, the entire amount of the contract price of the potatoes. Respondent received and accepted the potatoes, and is thus liable for the contract price less damages due to any breach of warranty by complainant. Respondent made no allegation regarding the quality of the potatoes, and is thus liable for the contract price, absent other valid defenses.

Respondent did allege that it had originally ordered fewer potatoes than were shipped and accepted. Under section 2-601 of the Uniform Commercial Code, respondent had the right, upon improper delivery of the extra "unordered" potatoes to accept the units it had ordered and reject the rest. U.C.C. § 2-601(c) (1978). Had respondent rejected the excess potatoes, it would have had no further obligation for those "extra" potatoes. U.C.C. § 2-602(2) (1978). By not properly rejecting the potatoes, respondent accepted them, and thus became liable for their cost. U.C.C. § 2-606 (1978).

Respondent also alleges that as a result of the delivery of the extra potatoes, the parties agreed to an unspecified extension of credit. Such claim by respondent is not, in the least, credible. Since respondent failed to pay for the amount of potatoes it did order promptly—nor had it made any effort to make even partial payment to complainant by the time it filed its answer nine months later, respondent's claims are of no value.

Respondent is, therefore, liable to complainant for the contract price of $4,455.00. Its failure to pay such sum is a violation of section 2 of the Act, for which reparation should be awarded, with interest.

ORDER

Within thirty days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $4,455.00, with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from January 1, 1985, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

Acceptance-partial unloading—Inspection-timely—Notice of breach-timely—F.O.B.-suitable shipping warranty—Damages-need not be calculable with mathematical accuracy—Damages-deviation from normal method of computation allowed.

In a F.O.B. sale of strawberries respondent was found to have accepted by unloading. Complainant's breach of warranty of suitable shipping condition was demonstrated by a Federal inspection made 30 hours after arrival showing an average of 35% soft and leaking berries and an average of 14% Gray Mold Rot. Notice of the breach given 2 to 3 days after arrival was found to be timely. Respondent dumped approximately one half of the berries and paid for the remainder at the contract rate plus Tectrol and cooling expenses for the entire load. This was found to be an adequate approximation of respondent's damages. Respondent's counterclaim arising out of the same transaction was denied because respondent failed to establish its contention that the berries were sold as U.S. No. 1, and because respondent failed to account in the normal manner by showing the gross proceeds of the resale of the berries less expenses of the resale.

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks an award of reparation against respondent in the amount of $1,930.00 in connection with the shipment in interstate commerce of one trucklot of strawberries.

A copy of the report of investigation made by the Department was served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto denying liability to complainant and asserting a counterclaim arising out of the same transaction in the amount of $953.99. Complainant filed a reply to the counterclaim denying any liability thereunder.

The amount claimed in the formal complaint or counterclaim does not exceed $15,000, and the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to this procedure, the verified pleadings of the parties are considered a part of the evidence in the case, as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition, the parties were given an opportunity to file evidence in the form of sworn statements. Complainant filed an opening statement, and respondent filed an answering statement. Complainant also filed a statement in reply and a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Well-Pict, Inc., is a corporation whose address is P.O. Box 973, Watsonville, California. At the time of the transaction involved herein complainant was licensed under the Act.

2. Respondent, Sam Wang Food Corp., Inc., is a corporation whose address is 1258 5th Street N.E., Washington, D. C. At the time of the transaction involved herein respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On or about May 30, 1984, complainant sold to respondent 768 flats of strawberries at $5.00 per flat, plus $.60 per flat for cooling, $148.00 for Tectrol and $11.15 for a Ryan temperature recorder, for a total price for the lot of $4,460.05.

4. Complainant shipped the trucklot of strawberries from loading point in California on May 30, 1984, at 9:15 p.m. local time, to respondent in Washington, D. C. The strawberries arrived in Washington, D. C., and were unloaded at approximately 1:00 a.m. on June 5, 1984, into respondent's warehouse. Respondent made notations on the bill of lading indicating that the strawberries were in poor condition.

5. The Ryan temperature tape showed temperatures throughout the trip which ranged generally from 34 to 36 degrees, but included a few short term excursions into the 45 to 48 degree range.

6. On June 6, 1984, at 6:10 a.m., the strawberries were federally inspected at respondent's warehouse. The inspection showed the temperatures to range from 35 to 38 degrees Fahrenheit, and showed the condition to be as follows:

> Berries mostly ripe and firm. Mostly dull, some fairly bright. 15 to 75% in most, none in some, average 35% soft and leaking berries. Decay ranges 5 to 40%, in most, none in some, average 14% Gray Mold Rot, mostly nested some scattered throughout pack.

7. Respondent notified the broker, M & M Brokerage Company of Watsonville, California, on June 6, 1984, that 386 flats of the strawberries were in unsalable condition. The broker notified complainant of the condition of the strawberries on or about June 7, to June 9, 1984.

8. On June 11, 1984, at 9:45 a.m., 386 flats of the strawberries were federally inspected in respondent's warehouse. The inspection showed the temperatures to range from 40 to 42°F and stated the condition to be as follows:

> Generally 35 to 75%, in few none, average 44% Soft and leaking berries. Decay ranges 25 to 100% Average 46% Gray Mold Rot in well developed stages.

It was noted on the certificate that respondent stated to the inspector that the lot of strawberries was to be dumped.

9. Respondent dumped 386 flats of the strawberries, and paid complainant at the contract rate for the remaining strawberries, plus cooling, Tetrol, and temperature recorder charges for the entire load, or a total of $2,530.05.

10. The informal complaint was filed on July 3, 1984, which was within nine months after the cause of action alleged herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

Complainant brings this action to recover the balance of the purchase price of the 768 flats of strawberries accepted by respondent. Respondent contends that it rejected 386 flats of the strawberries, and only conditionally accepted the remaining strawberries. However, it has been consistently held that even a partial unloading of a shipment of perishable produce is an exercise of sufficient control over the entire load to constitute an acceptance thereof. See Crown Orchard Co. v. Mid-Valley Produce Corporation, 34 Agric. Dec. 1381 (1975). Respondent is deemed to have accepted the entire load of strawberries, and consequently became liable to complainant for the full purchase price thereof less any damages shown to have been incurred due to any breach of contract by complainant. The burden of proving both breach and damages rest upon respondent. The Grower-Shipper Potato v. Southwestern Produce Co., 28 Agric. Dec. 511 (1969).

Respondent also contends that the contract between the parties called for the strawberries to grade U.S. No. 1. Although the sale of the strawberries was negotiated through a broker, neither party submitted a copy of a broker's memorandum of sale. Also the record does not contain any statement from the broker. The only documentation of this sale is complainant's invoice which does not show that the strawberries were sold with any grade designation. Respondent used the bottom of the invoice to render its accounting to complainant, and made no objection thereon to the terms of the sale. Complainant has consistently denied that the strawberries were sold as U.S. No. 1, and accordingly we find that the strawberries were sold without any designation as to grade.

Both parties admit that the strawberries were sold on a f.o.b. basis. Consequently under the applicable regulations (7 CFR § 46.43(i) & (j)) the suitable shipping condition warranty was in effect as to this shipment. Under the terms of the warranty complainant was obligated to ship strawberries which would arrive at contract destination without abnormal deterioration provided transportation services and conditions were normal. The Ryan temperature tape, as well as the pulp temperatures disclosed by the federal inspection of June 6, 1984, indicate that transportation service and conditions were normal. Complainant, however, contends that the federal inspection on June 6, some thirty hours after arrival of the berries, should be discounted as being too late. Certainly we would prefer to see inspections made as soon as possible after the arrival of perishable produce. Nevertheless the inspection of these berries showed that temperatures had been kept within an acceptable range, and consequently the results of the inspection showing an average of 35% soft and leaking berries, plus an average of 14% Gray Mold Rot, are clearly indicative of a failure of the strawberries to make good delivery at time of arrival. See Rala Singh Farms v. E. Armata, Inc., 32 Agric. Dec. 679 (1973.)

Complainant also vigorously maintains that it was not given notice of a breach within a reasonable time. The requirement for notice of a breach of warranty within a reasonable time is set forth in section 2-607(3)(a) of the Uniform Commercial Code. Its purpose, as stated in a comment to that section, is to prevent commercial bad faith. See Spudco v. Yick Lung Co., 36 Agric. Dec. 715 (1977). Complainant maintains in its brief and in its statement in reply, that it was not notified of any condition problems in the strawberries either director through the broker until "some ten days after shipment." However, complainant's representative in filing the informal complaint in this proceeding stated that "according to Well-Pict's salesman, Mr. Dan Murphy, his notes reflect that approximately eight to ten days after shipment, his office was notified of apparent arrival problems with the strawberries. Eight days after shipment would be on June 7, 1983. Consequently, by complainant's own admission it may have been notified of the breach as early as one day following the federal inspection of the strawberries, or two to three days after arrival. We do not feel that this time length, under the circumstances of this case, is excessive or unreasonable. See Eli Smith v. Hy Fisher, 16 Agric. Dec. 1008 (1957). In summary, we find that respondent has adequately shown that complainant breached the contract of sale by shipping strawberries which were not in suitable shipping condition at time of shipment, and that respondent gave adequate and timely notice of the breach to complainant.

Since respondent accepted the trucklot of strawberries it became liable to complainant for the full contract price thereof less damages resulting from complainant's breach. The measure of damages is the difference at the time and place of acceptance between the value of the goods accepted and the value they would have had if they had been as warranted. See UCC § 2-714. Respondent segregated out of the total 768 flats of strawberries, 382 flats which it deemed to be salable. Respondent paid complainant the full contract price for these berries. The remaining 386 flats of berries were stated by respondent, when it gave notice to the broker of complainant's breach, to be unsalable. Respondent on June 11, 1984, secured a federal inspection of these berries which showed an average of 44% soft and leaking berries and an average of 46% Gray Mold Rot in well developed stages. Respondent submitted this inspection certificate as a dump certificate, and it clearly qualifies as such. We conclude that the 386 flats of strawberries had no commercial value.

The proper method for respondent to have shown the value of the strawberries which it accepted would have been to have submitted the results of the resale of the berries not dumped. Instead of doing this respondent paid for these berries at the contract rate. In view of the overall poor condition of the berries as shown by the federal inspection on June 6, we will accept respondent's method of showing damages in this proceeding. The Uniform Commercial Code, Section 1-106, states in relevant part that "The remedies provided by this Act shall be liberally administered to the end that the aggrieved party may be put in as good a position as if the other party had fully performed . . ." The comments to this section state that one purpose thereof was "to reject any doctrine that damages must be calculable with mathematical accuracy." As stated earlier in this proceeding respondent not only paid for the berries not dumped at the contract price, but also paid complainant for the Tectrol and cooling expenses for the total shipment of berries. Respondent only deducted from the invoice the contract price of $5.00 per flat for the 386 flats of strawberries dumped, or $1,930.00. We will accept this amount as respondent's damages.

Respondent's counterclaim requested $1.50 per flat for all of the berries on the grounds that they failed to meet the alleged contract requirements of grading U.S. No. 1. We have already disposed of this contention by our finding that the contract did not call for the strawberries to grade U.S. No. 1. The remainder of respondent's counterclaim is an effort to recoup the cooling, Tectrol and USDA inspection costs relative to the shipment of strawberries. However, in view of respondent's failure to account in the normal manner by showing the gross proceeds of the resale of the berries less expenses of the resale, we cannot award respondent this amount. The counterclaim should be dismissed.

Burden of proof as to breach and damages-upon respondent—Answer not verified-no evidentiary value—Breach of warranty and damages-not proven.

Respondent held liable for the contract prices of 9 of the 15 lots of lettuce it received and accepted without objection. Respondent failed to sustain its burden of proving a breach of warranty and damages with regard to the 6 remaining lots, as its answer and supporting documents were not in evidence because the answer was unverified, and the documents did not support respondent's position.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended 7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $85,939.04 in connection with the sale of 15 truckloads of lettuce in interstate commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation prepared by the Department was served upon each of the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto denying liability.

Although the amount claimed as damages is in excess of $15,000.00, the parties waived oral hearing. Therefore, the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to such procedure, the report of investigation is considered to be part of the evidence, as is the verified complaint. The answer, since it is unverified, is not considered a part of the evidence. The parties were given an opportunity to submit additional evidence in the form of verified statements and to file briefs. Complainant submitted an opening statement, but respondent elected not to submit any additional evidence. Complainant also filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Action Produce, is a partnership whose address is P.O. Box 1712, Glendale, Arizona.

2. Respondent, Corgan & Son Inc., is a corporation whose address is 161-162 N.Y.C. Terminal Market, Bronx, New York. At the times of the transactions involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. In August and September 1984, complainant sold to respondent 15 truckloads of lettuce, as follows:

Complainant's Invoice No.	Date Shipped	Contract Price
1202	8/2/84	$7,100.90
1286	8/13/84	8,299.50
1333	8/17/84	5,763.30
1356	8/18/84	6,094.50
1417	8/30/84	4,677.50
1422	8/31/84	4,412.90
1428	9/4/84	4,677.50
1445	9/5/84	4,412.90
1470	9/6/84	4,422.50
1487	9/7/84	6,425.70
1522	9/12/84	7,996.90
1525	9/13/84	7,227.30
1560	9/18/84	6,094.50
1576	9/19/84	2,128.24
1607	9/21/84	6,204.90
Total		$85,939.04

4. Complainant shipped the 15 trucklots of lettuce to respondent, which accepted them but has failed to make any payment therefor.

5. A formal complaint was filed on January 10, 1985, which was within nine months from when the causes of action herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent does not deny receiving and accepting the 15 lots of lettuce, and therefore is liable for the full contract price, less damages due to any breach of warranty on the part of complainant. Respondent bears the burden of proving the breach and damages by a preponderance of the evidence. Rogelio C. Sardina d/b/a Sardinas Farms v. Caamano Bros., Inc., 42 Agric. Dec. 1275 (1983).

In its unsworn answer, respondent offers no defense to nine of the 15 trucklots which complainant alleges it received and accepted, but claims that six of the trucklots were in poor condition, and has enclosed along with its answer six inspection reports purportedly evidencing this poor condition. However, neither the answer nor the inspection reports can be given any consideration as evidence, since the answer was not verified. H. & M. Fujishige v. Mike Phillips Enterprises, Incorporated, 30 Agric. Dec. 1095 (1971).

Even if we were to give evidentiary value to these documents, they would not be sufficient to sustain respondent's burden of proof. The inspection report alleged to apply to complainant's invoice number 1333 covers only 350 cartons out of the 832 cartons shipped, and therefore, its findings of 10% damage by discoloration and 7% decay in the head leaves are not representative of the condition of the entire load. Similarly, the inspection applicable to complainant's invoice number 1356 was taken on only 120 of the 880 cartons shipped, and the inspection pertaining to complainant's invoice number 1560 was taken on 300 cartons of the 880 cartons shipped. Neither of these inspections are representative of the condition of the lettuce when it arrived at respondent's place of business. The inspection of complainant's invoice number 1576 shows 93% decay, but it was taken on October 3, 1984, which was 12 days after the lettuce was shipped on September 21, 1984. That inspection cannot, therefore, be given any weight. The inspections pertaining to complainant's invoice numbers 1522 and 1525 appear to show that the lettuce was in unsuitable shipping condition, in breach of warranty (7 CFR 46.46(j)). However, even if complainant did commit a breach of warranty with respect to these two loads, the burden is still upon respondent to show the difference between the value of the lettuce if it had been as warranted, and its actual value. The actual value of the lettuce for invoice numbers 1522 and 1525 cannot be determined because respondent has not submitted any evidence of resale. Salinas Marketing Cooperative v. Ed A. Keil Produce, Inc., 42 Agric. Dec. 1237 (1983). Therefore, it is clear that with respect to the six loads of lettuce which respondent asserts were abnormally deteriorated, respondent has failed to sustain its burden of proving a breach of warranty and damages resulting from the breach.

Respondent has offered no defense to liability for nine of the trucklots of lettuce which it admittedly accepted, and we have found that respondent has failed to sustain its burden of proving a breach and damages with respect to the six lots of lettuce it contends were abnormally deteriorated. Therefore, respondent is liable for the entire contract price for the 15 trucklots of $85,939.04, and its failure to pay this sum to complainant is a violation of section 2 of the Act, for which reparation should be awarded, with interest.

ORDER

Within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $85,939.04, with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from October 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks an award of reparation against respondent in the amount of $6,075.15 in connection with the shipment of a truckload of peaches.

A copy of the report of investigation made by the Department was served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto denying liability to complainant.

The amount claimed in the formal complaint does not exceed $15,000, and the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to this procedure, the verified pleadings of the parties are considered a part of the evidence in the case, as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition, the parties were given an opportunity to file evidence in the form of sworn statements. The respondent filed a verified answering statement, and the complainant filed a verified statement in reply. Also, complainant filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, United Distributors, Inc., is a corporation whose mailing address is 746 South Central Avenue, Los Angeles, California 90021.

2. Respondent, Mike Fierro, is an individual doing business as Fierro Enterprises whose mailing address is 1847 Michigan Avenue, Fresno, California 93705. At the time of the transaction involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On or about July 21, 1983, respondent purchased 1203 cartons of peaches from the complainant at an agreed f.o.b. price of $4.45 per carton for a total agreed f.o.b. price of $5,353.35. The truckload of peaches was shipped to the complainant in care of Valley Fruit & Produce, San Julien Street, Los Angeles, California. Upon arrival, on July 22, 1983, the truckload of peaches was the subject of a federal inspection. The inspection certificate issued subsequent thereto (Certificate No. F 070781) indicates that the condition of the peaches was as follows "Firm and ground color turning yellow. All cartons generally show ⅓ to entire surface damage by brown to black discoloration. No decay."

4. On August 15, 1983, subsequent to an inspection by the Los Angeles County Agricultural Commissioner which showed that the peaches had 90% mold and decay, Valley Fruit & Produce dumped the 1,203 cartons of peaches.

5. On October 3, 1983, the complainant issued a check to respondent in payment for multiple loads of produce in the amount of $17,159.40. Complainant claims that within that total was payment of $5,353.35 to respondent with regard to the subject shipment of peaches. On or about November 11, 1983, complainant requested reimbursement for this payment. Respondent refused to do so.

6. On or about November 22, 1983, the complainant billed the respondent for the subject shipment, as follows: 1203 cartons of peaches at $4.60 per carton ($5,533.80), and 45 cents per carton freight ($541.35), for a total billing of $6,075.15.

7. The informal complaint was filed on July 3, 1984, which was within nine months after the cause of action herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

The dispositive issued in this case is whether or not the peaches were shipped in interstate commerce, or even in contemplation thereof. It is only such produce as is shipped in interstate commerce, or in contemplation thereof, over which we have jurisdiction in this forum. See Dave Mendrin & Son v. Nick Delis Co., 28 Agric. Dec. 1555 (1969). The complainant, in its complaint, pleaded that the peaches involved here were shipped in "interstate commerce." After the Presiding Officer gave the complainant notice to show cause why the complaint should not be dismissed for want of jurisdiction due to its failure to allege either that the peaches were shipped in interstate commerce or that the shipment was made in contemplation of interstate commerce, the complainant replied it had intended to ship the peaches to Hawaii. In view of this, the Presiding Officer permitted the case to proceed to judgment. The respondent, however, in its answering statement, denied that these peaches were sold in contemplation of interstate commerce, and indicated that these peaches were not purchased in a condition which would have allowed them to be shipped to Hawaii. The complainant did not respond to these allegations. We must hold, therefore, that the complainant failed to carry its burden of proving that the subject shipment was made in contemplation of interstate commerce, and we must hold that we have no jurisdiction over the matter. P. C. Kellam v. Virginia Tomato Corp., 29 Agric. Dec. 835 (1970). Therefore, the complaint must be dismissed.

In any event even had we jurisdiction over this matter, we would have to hold that the complainant failed to prove, by substantial evidence, all of the material aspects of its allegations. For example, in order satisfy its burden of proof, the complainant would have to have shown that the respondent breached their contract by shipping goods which were not in conformance with their contractual agreement, and that it was damaged thereby. However, the complainant has failed to provide any evidence that the peaches were not in compliance with the parties' agreement when they were received. The inspection on July 22, 1983, did show a significant amount of discoloration, but there is evidence that the peaches were sold at below market prices because of their maturity and that they were not suitable, when sold, for shipping beyond local markets. In view of this evidence, which was not satisfactorily disputed by complainant, there is insufficient evidence for us to have concluded that there was a breach of contract by the respondent. Moreover, the complainant has failed to prove any damages whatsoever because, apparently, the peaches in the subject shipment sat at Valley Distributors from their July 22, 1983, arrival until they were dumped in August 15, 1983. There is no allegation nor any proof that the peaches were totally unsaleable when received. Nor is there any evidence that the complainant attempted to sell the peaches prior to their being dumped. Complainant's failure to show either that the peaches were unmerchantable upon receipt, or the value of the peaches received through a prompt and proper resale, renders its ability to prove damages impossible since it cannot show the value of the peaches as received. We would therefore have to have concluded that the complainant failed to establish any damages caused by the alleged breach committed by the respondent. Ralph Samsel Co. v. L. Gillarde Sons Co., 19 Agric. Dec. 324 (1960). Under these circumstances too, the complaint would have been dismissed. New England Grape v. Crane, 30 Agric. Dec. 992 (1971).

ORDER ON RECONSIDERATION

In this reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.), an order was issued on November 21, 1985, requiring respondent to pay complainant $2,904.00 plus interest from April 1, 1984, until paid. On December 6, 1985, respondent moved for reconsideration of that decision based on "new evidence."

The "new evidence" submitted by respondent is inadmissible at this time. In order to gain admission of evidence into the instant record, respondent would have to have filed a petition to reopen. However, petitions to reopen the record in a reparation case can only be entertained prior to the issuance of the final order. 7 CFR § 47.24(b). In this case, the final order was issued on November 21, 1985. Thus, even had respondent filed a petition to reopen at this time, it would have to have been denied. Moreover, since respondent did not show that its failure to adduce the evidence in a timely fashion was not the result of its failure to use due diligence the petition, even if filed before the issuance of the November 21, 1985, Decision and Order, would have been denied. See Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 401 U.S. U.S. 321 (1971); and Reconstruction Finance Corp. v. Commercial Union, Etc., 123 F. Supp. 748 (S.D. N.Y. 1954).

In any event, the "new evidence" offered by respondent has been reviewed, and it does not aid respondent's cause at all because the "new evidence" does not relate to the 480 cartons of lettuce shipped to it by complainant on February 20, 1985, which are the subject of the complaint filed herein. Further, on reconsideration, respondent appears to be arguing that the broker (Taylor-Byers Co., Inc.) sold it the lettuce. The record, including respondent's admissions in its verified answer, does not support this allegation. Rather, the record reflects that the broker performed its duties as a broker, and was not the seller of these cartons of lettuce to respondent.

On the basis of all of the evidence in the record, we find that the November 21, 1985, Decision and Order is amply supported by the evidence and by the law applicable thereto. Accordingly, respondent's petition for reconsideration is dismissed without prior service upon complainant.

The order of November 21, 1985, is reinstated except that the reparation awarded therein shall be paid within 30 days from the date of this order.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

RULING ON RECONSIDERATION

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et. seq.), in which a Decision and Order was issued by the Judicial Officer on July 12, 1985, awarding reparation to complainant in the amount of $5,337.50, plus interest. Respondent filed a timely petition for reconsideration and a Stay Order was issued on September 25, 1985.

Respondent alleges in its petition that it purchased the potatoes at issue from Trademark Produce & Sales, Kennewick, Washington, and that the Decision and Order erred in concluding that respondent purchased the potatoes from complainant, with Trademark acting only as the broker. However, Finding of Fact 3 of the Decision and Order states that Trademark sent a confirmation of sale to both parties clearly revealing that the sale was made from complainant to respondent, with Trademark as the broker. Respondent admits in paragraph 4 of its petition that it received this confirmation and has never alleged having objected to it. Therefore, respondent's allegation that it purchased the potatoes from Trademark is not supported by the record.

Respondent also contests the conclusion of the Decision and Order that it accepted the potatoes. Respondent alleges that it gave notice of rejection to Trademark at 3:28 p.m. on February 28, 1983, which was 43 minutes after the potatoes were inspected at 2:45 p.m. that same date, and denies that it first notified Trademark of its desire to reject at 8:50 a.m. the next day, as found by the Decision and Order. There is some evidence that notice of rejection was given to the broker at 3:28 p.m., as respondent's telephone bill shows a call made at that time. However, a different time for notification was asserted by the broker who, in a letter to the Department, said that it was not notified until 6:50 a.m. the day after the inspection, or 8:58 a.m. in respondent's time zone. Resolution of this conflicting evidence is not necessary, since, as the Decision and Order concluded, it is clear from the record that at the time of the inspection, respondent accepted the potatoes by unloading them, and any subsequent attempt at rejection would, therefore, have been unreasonable. Respondent argues that unloading was necessary to make the truckload of potatoes accessible for inspection. However, the inspection report does not support respondent, as it states after "Remarks" only that "Inspection made during unloading process." If the unloading had occurred solely to permit the potatoes to be inspected, such would have been clear from the inspection report.

There is no merit to respondent's allegations of error. Therefore, the September 25, 1985, Stay Order is hereby vacated and the July 12, 1985, Decision and Order is hereby reinstated. The amount awarded in the July 12, 1985, Decision and Crder, including interest, shall be paid within 30 days from the date of this order.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

DENIAL OF PETITION TO REOPEN

In this reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.), an order was issued July 1, 1985, awarding reparation to complainant against respondent in the amount of $10,324.33. On July 10, 1985, respondent filed a petition for reconsideration. On August 12, 1985, the order of July 1, 1985, was stayed. On November 25, 1985, the respondent's petition was denied and the order of July 1, 1985, was reinstated except that the reparation awarded therein was ordered paid within thirty (30) days from November 25, 1985. On December 17, 1985, the respondent moved to reopen this matter. Under the Rules of Practice, such motions can only be entertained prior to the issuance of a final order. 7 CFR § 47.24. Since the order in this case was issued on July 1, 1985, respondent's motion to reopen must be denied. In any event, the evidence, which consists of documents related to a transaction which took place two months after the transaction at issue, is not relevant or material to the issues in this case.

It is noted that the November 25, 1985, order was not stayed by the filing of the respondent's motion to reopen, and that the respondent is expected to have complied therewith.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

STAY ORDER

In this reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499 et seq.), a Decision and Order was issued on December 11, 1985, awarding reparation to the complainant in the amount of $8,227.10. By letter received December 26, 1985, respondent has moved that this matter be reconsidered and reopened.

Accordingly, the order of December 11, 1985 is hereby stayed. Complainant may have ten days from receipt of this order to file an answer to the petition to reconsider and reopen.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties. A copy of respondent's petition shall be served upon the complainant, along with this order.

ORDER OF DISMISSAL

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks reparation against respondent in the amount of $52,268.30 in connection with a transaction involving the shipment of mixed vegetables in interstate commerce.

A copy of the formal complaint was served on respondent, which filed an answer thereto, denying liability.

In a letter dated July 19, 1985, respondent moved to dismiss the complaint, claiming that complainant had filed suit in the Supreme Court of the State of New York, County of Bronx, No. 18654/84, involving the same parties and issues as the reparation complaint. In a letter dated August 5, 1985, complainant was given five days from its receipt of such letter to show cause why the reparation complaint should not be dismissed, pursuant to 7 U.S.C. 499e(b). Complainant was given several extensions to respond to the notice to show cause and eventually was told that its requested extension until January 6, 1986, would be its last. Counsel for complainant, in a letter dated January 6, 1986, indicated that it has been unable to obtain a voluntary dismissal of the court action. We must thus conclude that complainant has made an election of remedies under 7 U.S.C. 499e(b). Respondent's motion to dismiss is, therefore, granted.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

A copy of the formal complaint was served on respondent. By motion filed on December 23, 1985, complainant authorized dismissal of its complaint filed herein.

Accordingly, the complaint is hereby dismissed.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

ORDER OF DISMISSAL

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks reparation against respondent in the amount of $12,150.00 in connection with a transaction involving the shipment of onions in interstate commerce.

A copy of the formal complaint was served on respondent. By letter dated December 13, 1985, complainant notified the Department that respondent tendered to complainant a check in full settlement of complainant's claim. Complainant, in its letter of December 13, 1985, authorized dismissal of its complaint filed herein.

Accordingly, the complaint is hereby dismissed.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

FURUKAWA SALES CO., INC., v. CANINO PRODUCE CO., INC., and/or BENCHMARK BROKERAGE, INC. PACA Docket No. 2-7007. Order issued February 6, 1986.

Thomas R. Oliveri, Newport Beach, Calif., for complainant.
Respondents, pro se.

Decision by Donald A. Campbell, Judicial Officer.

ORDER OF DISMISSAL

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks reparation against Canino Produce Co., Inc. (hereinafter, "Canino"), and in the event Canino is found not to be liable, against Benchmark Brokerage, Inc. (hereinafter, "Benchmark"), in the amount of $1,728.00 in connection with a transaction involving the shipment of strawberries in interstate commerce.

A copy of the formal complaint was served upon each respondent. Neither respondent filed an answer, and a Default Order was issued on September 17, 1985, against Canino in the amount of $1,728.00. As Canino was found liable for the full amount of the complaint, the complaint against Benchmark was dismissed, in accordance with complainant's allegation of liability. Canino later moved to reopen after default, and such motion was granted as to Canino only. The Default Order's dismissal of Benchmark remained unaffected by the reopening of the complaint against Canino.

In a letter dated December 2, 1985, complainant authorized dismissal of the complaint against Canino, asserting that Benchmark was solely liable. The complaint against Canino is, therefore, dismissed. However, as Benchmark is no longer subject to a reparation order, since the complaint against Benchmark was dismissed in the September 17, 1985, Default Order, no order of reparation can now be issued against Benchmark.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

ORDER OF DISMISSAL

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks reparation against respondents, jointly and severally, in the amount of $10,689.25 in connection with a transaction involving the shipment of mixed vegetables in interstate commerce.

In a letter dated December 6, 1985, the Department informed complainant that respondent Melon Produce had provided evidence that complainant had filed suit in the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts (No. 85-3019-W) against both respondents, involving the same issues as the reparation complaint. Complainant was given 15 days from its receipt of such letter to provide evidence that the court suit had been dismissed without prejudice, or the reparation complaint would be dismissed, pursuant to 7 U.S.C. § 499e(b). Complainant did not file a response. Therefore, the complaint herein is hereby dismissed.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

ORDER OF DISMISSAL

On November 4, 1985, the parties filed a release in the above-captioned case giving notice that they had reached a settlement in the above-captioned case. The settlement provided, inter alia, that complainant would promptly notify the Department of Agriculture that his claim was settled once he received the agreed-upon payments. MISCELLANEOUS REPARATION DEFAULT ORDERS ISSUED BY DONALD A. CAMPBELL, JUDICIAL OFFICER

BUD ANTLE INC. v. SEVEN SEAS TRADING CO., INC., a/t/a VALLEY VIEW FARMS. PACA Docket No. RD-86-37. Decided January 15, 1986.

DENIAL OF MOTION FOR STAY ORDER

In this reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499 et seq.), a Default Order was issued on November 27, 1985, awarding reparation to the complainant in the amount of $749.80. By letter received on November 22, 1985, but not processed until after the Default Order was issued, respondent has moved that this matter be stayed to give it an opportunity to secure evidence of its absence of liability to complainant. However, this is not sufficient reason for staying the Default Order. Therefore, respondent's motion for a stay is denied.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

APPLEWOOD ORCHARDS, INC., v. BENCHMARK BROKERAGE, INC., and/or FLEMING COMPANIES, INC. PACA Docket No. RD-86-72. Order issued January 15, 1986.

ORDER DENYING MOTION TO REOPEN AFTER DEFAULT

In this proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.), the respondents failed to file timely answers. However, prior to the issuance of a Default Order, respondent Fleming Companies Inc. filed a motion to reopen the proceeding after default and allow the filing of an answer pursuant to section 47.25 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 47.25(e)).

The record has been carefully considered and it is concluded that respondent Fleming Companies Inc. has failed to present a good reason why it failed to file a timely answer. The record contains a return receipt card which shows that the formal complaint was received by Fleming Companies Inc. on September 26, 1985. The return receipt card bears a signature of a person purporting to sign on behalf of Fleming Companies Inc. Fleming Companies Inc. claims in its motion that the complaint was not received by its "Produce Operations" unit. However, such internal distribution problems are not a good reason for the failure of Fleming Companies Inc. to submit a timely answer. Therefore, the motion to reopen after default is hereby denied.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

STANDARD FRUIT and STEAMSHIP COMPANY v. ASTRO MEAT TRADING, INC. PACA Docket No. RD-85-164. Order issued January 15, 1986.

ORDER DENYING MOTION TO REOPEN AFTER DEFAULT

In this proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.), the respondent failed to file a timely answer. A Default Order was issued on March 25, 1985, ordering respondent to pay $48,669.50, with interest. On November 12, 1985, respondent filed a motion to reopen the proceeding after default and allow the filing of an answer.

Respondent's motion must be denied. The March 25, 1985, Default Order ordered respondent to pay reparation "within 30 days from the date of this order." Therefore, payment was due no later than April 24, 1985. After that date the Default Order is considered to have become final, and the Secretary is without jurisdiction to consider motions such as that made by respondent. See Lasky v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 235 F.2d 97 (9th Cir. 1956), aff'd per curiam 352 U.S. 1027 (1956); Southland Produce Co., a/k/a Keystone Produce Co. v. Caamano Brothers Wholesale, 39 Agric. CONSUMERS PRODUCE CO., of Pittsburgh v. CENTRAL PRODUCE CO. INC. PACA Docket No. RD-85-391. Order issued January 17, 1986.

ORDER OF DISMISSAL

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks reparation against respondent in the amount of $637.70 in connection with a transaction involving the shipment of produce in interstate commerce.

A copy of the formal complaint was served on respondent. By letter dated September 27, 1985, complainant was notified by the Department that respondent had tendered to complainant a check in full settlement of complainant's claim. Complainant was sent such check and informed that an order would be issued dismissing the complaint. Complainant, in a letter dated November 21, 1985, agreed to the proposed dismissal.

Accordingly, the complaint is hereby dismissed.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

THE CROSSET COMPANY v. KEVIN J. RE d/b/a J.M.J. PRODUCE. PACA Docket No. RD-86-46. ORDER issued January 22, 1986.

ORDER VACATING PRIOR ORDER AND ORDER STAYING PROCEEDING

In this reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1920, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.), a Default Order was issued against respondent on December 3, 1985, requiring him to pay complainant $4,825.25 with interest thereon from July 1, 1985, until paid. Unknown to the Department however was that respondent had filed a petition in Chapter 7 before the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of Ohio, Western Division, designated Case No. 1-85-03049, on November 7, 1985. The filing of such a petition automatically stays proceedings such as those involved here. 11 U.S.C. 362(a). The Default Order of December 3, 1985, thus should never have been issued. In view of this, it is now vacated.

It is unknown as to whether the respondent's debts have been discharged by the Bankruptcy Court under 11 U.S.C. 727. Upon receiving notice of such a discharge, we will dismiss the complaint. Until such time as the Department is notified that such a discharge has been ordered, this matter is stayed.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties. In addition, copies shall be served on Nicholas J. Pantel, Esq., Assistant United States Attorney, 220 United States Post Office & Courthouse, 100 East Fifth Street, Cincinatti, Ohio 45202, and Robert A. Goering, Esq., Wilke & Goering, 128 E. 6th Street, Cincinatti, Ohio 45202.

JONES FAMILY FARM v. SUN ROOT FOODS, INC. PACA Docket No. RD-86-125. Order issued January 24, 1986.

ORDER CORRECTING PRIOR ORDER

In this reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.), a Default Order was issued on January 6, 1986, ordering respondent to pay complainant $7,793.61, plus interest at the rate of 13 percent per annum from May 1, 1985. However, the interest should have been from May 1, 1984. Therefore, the January 6, 1986, Default Order is hereby corrected to require respondent to pay complainant, $7,793.61, plus interest at the rate of 13 percent per annum from May 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies hereof shall be served upon the parties.

CHIQUITA BRANDS, INC., v. AL NAGELBERG & CO. INC. PACA Docket No. RD-86-28. Order issued February 13, 1986.

ORDER REOPENING AFTER DEFAULT

In this proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.), the respondent failed to file a timely answer. However, after the issuance of a Default Order on November 15, 1985, respondent filed a motion to reopen the proceeding after default and allow the filing of an answer pursuant to section 47.25 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 47.25(e)). The November 15, 1985, Order was stayed on December 10, 1985, and respondent's motion was served upon complainant which filed an opposition thereto.

The record has been carefully considered and it is concluded that the motion to reopen was filed within a reasonable time, and that good reason has been shown why the relief requested in the motion should be granted. Mendelson-Zeller Co. v. United Fruit Distributors, 16 Agric. Dec. 790 (1957). Accordingly, respondent's default in the filing of an answer is set aside.

Respondent has ten days from service hereof to file an answer. Failure to file an answer in that time will result in reinstitution of the Default Order against it. No extensions of time will be granted. In order to be considered part of the evidence in this proceeding, the answer must be verified.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

C.H. ROBINSON COMPANY v. WHIZPAC, INC. PACA Docket No. RD-86-105. Order issued February 13, 1986.

STAY ORDER

In this reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499 et seq.), a Default Order was issued on January 2, 1986, awarding reparation to the complainant in the amount of $5,128.80. By letter received January 9, 1986, respondent has moved that this matter be reopened after default.

Accordingly, the order of January 2, 1986, is hereby stayed. Complainant may have fifteen (15) days from receipt of this order to file an answer to the petition to reopen after default.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties. A copy of respondent's petition shall be served upon the complainant.

E&S GRAPE GROWERS & SHIPPERS v. SANTA FE-WEST SIDE GRAPE DISTRIBUTORS. PACA Docket No. RD-86-110. Order issued February 13, 1986.

ORDER DENYING MOTION TO REOPEN AFTER DEFAULT

In this proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.), the respondent failed to file a timely answer. A Default Order was issued on January 3, 1986, for $1,500.00 plus interest. Subsequent to the issuance of a Default Order, respondent filed a motion to reopen the proceeding after default and allow the filing of an answer pursuant to section 47.25 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 47.25(e)).

The record has been carefully considered and it is concluded that the that a good reason has not been shown why the relief requested in the motion should be granted. Respondent claims that it operated only from September 20, 1985 to November 1, 1985, and that it was closed on November 1 and could not receive any mail. However, the return receipt card in the file shows that the complaint was received and signed for by respondent on October 30, 1985. Even if respondent was not operating after November 1, 1985, it could have responded to the complaint, as it allegedly was not operating in January 1986 as well, but nonetheless submitted a motion to reopen after default after receiving the January 3, 1986, Default Order. The motion to reopen is, therefore, denied.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

Ronald A. Cipolla, for complainant.
Respondent, pro se.

Decision by Victor W. Palmer, Administrative Law Judge.

DEFAULT DECISION AND ORDER

This proceeding was instituted under the Act of February 2, 1903, as amended, (Act) (21 U.S.C. §§ 111 and 120) by a complaint filed by the Administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, United States Department of Agriculture. The complaint alleged that the respondent violated section 92.2(a) of the regulations promulgated thereunder (9 CFR § 92.2(a)). Copies of the complaint and the Rules of Practice Governing Proceedings Under the Act were served by the Hearing Clerk, by certified mail, upon respondent.

Pursuant to section 1.136 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.136) applicable to this proceeding, respondent was informed in the complaint and the letter of service that an answer should be filed with the Hearing Clerk within twenty (20) days after service of the complaint, and that failure to file an answer to, or plead specifically to, any allegation in the complaint would constitute an admission of such allegation pursuant to section 1.141 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.141), and a waiver of such hearing. The letter also advised the respondent that failure to request an oral hearing within the time for filing an answer would constitute a waiver, on his part, of oral hearing. Respondent has failed to respond in any manner to allegations in the complaint and respondent has not requested an oral hearing.

Respondent's failure to deny or otherwise respond to the allegations in the complaint constitutes an admission of such allegations, pursuant to section 1.136(c) of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.136(c)). Respondent's failure to request a hearing constitutes a waiver of such hearing. There being no basis for a hearing, the material allegations of fact in the complaint are adopted and set forth as the Findings of Fact.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Candido Sanchez, herein referred to as respondent, is an individual whose address is 202 Calle Arzuaga, Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico.

2. On or about October 29, 1984, the respondent violated section 318.58–2 of the regulations (7 CFR § 318.58–2) in that the respondent offered for shipment to a common carrier, for movement to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, three (3) cases of jobo (Spondias duclis), a prohibited fruit, at International Airport, Isla Verde, Puerto Rico.

CONCLUSION

Respondent has failed to respond in any manner to the allegation of the complaint. By reason of the Findings of Fact set forth above the respondent has violated the Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder. Therefore, the following order is issued.

ORDER

Respondent Candido Sanchez is hereby assessed a civil penalty of seven hundred fifty dollars ($750). Dopp, Office of the General Counsel, Room 2422, South Building, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. 20250, not later than thirty (30) days from the effective date of this order. This order shall have the same force and effect as if entered after full hearing and shall be final and effective 35 days after service of this Decision and Order upon respondent, unless there is an appeal to the Judicial Officer pursu-

In re: ANDREA LEO. P.Q. Docket No. 114. Decided January 27, 1986.

Importation of not fully cooked salamis.

The Judicial Officer affirmed Judge McGrail's order assessing a $250 civil penalty against respondent for importing pork salamis that had not been fully cooked as required from Italy to the United States. Respondent's violation, although inadvertent, was a very serious violation warranting a $250 civil penalty.

Sherrie Kopka Kennedy, for complainant.
Respondent, pro se.
Edward H. McGrail, Administrative Law Judge.

Decision by Donald A. Campbell, Judicial Officer.

DECISION AND ORDER

This is a proceeding under the Act of February 2, 1903, as amended (21 U.S.C. §§ 111 et seq.), in which Administrative Law Judge Edward H. McGrail (ALJ) filed an initial Decision and Order on October 10, 1985, assessing a civil penalty of $250 against respondent for importing pork salamis that had not been fully cooked by a commercial method in a container hermetically sealed promptly after filling, but before such cooking, as required, from Italy to the United States in violation of the Act and regulations.

On October 30, 1985, respondent appealed to the Judicial Officer, to whom final administrative authority to decide the Department's cases subject to 5 U.S.C. §§ 556 and 557 has been delegated (7 CFR § 2.35).[1] The case was referred to the Judicial Officer for decision on November 15, 1985.

Based upon a careful consideration of the record, the initial Decision and Order is adopted as the final Decision and Order in this case, except that the effective date of the order is changed in view of the appeal. Additional conclusions by the Judicial Officer follow the ALJ's conclusions.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE'S INITIAL DECISION

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This proceeding was instituted under the Act of February 2, 1903, as amended (Act) (21 U.S.C. § 111), by a complaint issued by the Administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, United States Department of Agriculture. The complaint was filed with the Hearing Clerk on July 15, 1985. The complaint alleged that the respondent violated section 111 of the Act and section 94.8(a) of the regulations promulgated thereunder (9 CFR § 94.8(a)).

Copies of the complaint and the Rules of Practice governing proceedings under the Act were served by the Hearing Clerk, by certified mail, upon respondent on July 25, 1985. On August 19, 1985, respondent was sent, by regular mail, a notice that his answer had not been received by the Hearing Clerk in the allotted time.

Pursuant to section 1.136 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.136) applicable to this proceeding, respondent was informed in the complaint and the letter of service that an answer should be filed with the Hearing Clerk within twenty (20) days after service of the complaint, and that failure to deny or otherwise respond to the allegations in the complaint and request an oral hearing would constitute an admission of such allegations and a waiver of such hearing.

[1] The position of the Judicial Officer was established pursuant to the Act of April 4, 1940 (7 U.S.C. §§ 450c–450g), and Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1953, 18 Fed. Reg. 3219 (1953), reprinted in 5 U.S.C. app. at 1068 (1982). The Department's present Judicial Officer was appointed in January 1971, having been involved with the Department's regulatory programs since 1949 (including 3 years' trial litigation; 10 years' appellate litigation relating to appeals from the decisions of the prior Judicial Officer; and 8 years as administrator of the Packers and Stockyards Act regulatory program).

More than twenty (20) days have elapsed since respondent was served with the complaint in question. Respondent has not filed an answer to date. This Decision and Order, therefore, is issued pursuant to sections 1.136 and 1.139 of the Rules of Practice applicable to this proceeding (7 CFR §§ 1.136 and 1.139).

Accordingly, the material facts alleged in the complaint, which are admitted by respondent's failure to file an answer, are adopted and set forth herein as the findings of fact.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Andrea Leo, respondent, is an individual whose address is 1363 Merry Avenue, Bronx, New York 10461.

2. On or about September 3, 1984, the respondent imported into the United States at J.F.K. Airport in Jamaica, New York, from Italy, approximately three (3) pork salamis in violation of section 94.8(a) of the regulations (9 CFR § 94.8(a)), because the pork salamis had not been fully cooked by a commercial method in a container hermetically sealed promptly after filling but before such cooking, as required.

CONCLUSIONS

By reason of the facts in the finding of fact set forth above, respondent has violated the Act and regulations promulgated thereunder. Therefore, the following Order is issued.

ADDITIONAL CONCLUSIONS BY THE JUDICIAL OFFICER

Respondent's violation, although inadvertent, was a very serious violation of the Act and regulations. African swine fever is potentially the most dangerous and destructive of all communicable swine diseases. This virus is highly virulent and may be present in pork products, such as salami, originating in countries where the disease exists, such as Italy. The only known practical method of destroying the contagion of the disease in pork products is by heat treatment. Accordingly, a civil penalty of $250 should be imposed. In re Lopez, 44 Agric. Dec. ____ (Oct. 7, 1985).

ORDER

Respondent is hereby assessed a civil penalty of $250, which shall be paid within 30 days after service of this Order. This civil penalty shall be made payable to the "Treasurer of the United States," by certified check or money order, and shall be forwarded to Sherrie L. Kopka Kennedy, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Office of the General Counsel, Room 2422, South Building, Washington, D. C. 20250–1400.

ORDER DISMISSING COMPLAINT

In re: RENE VALLALTA. P.Q. Docket No. 138. Filed February 5, 1986.

Illegal plant importation.

Filed by William J. Weber, Administrative Law Judge.

Answered by Donald A. Campbell, Judicial Officer.

CERTIFICATION OF QUESTIONS TO THE JUDICIAL OFFICER

Complainant charges that Respondent illegally imported one (1) cacao seed pod.

The Respondent states, inter alia, that:

> "* * * I told him [Customs Officer] the only food I had was cheese., exactly as I had said in my declaration for customs.
> "I was traveling with my wife and my three children I had five pieces of luggage., to my surprise the officer found in one of the suitcases some cocoa seeds (pod). I started explaining to the officer that the day before departure from San Salvador a relative of mine asked me if I could bring a letter and a little package for a friend of hers., I asked about the content of the package and she told me that were cocoa seeds, immediately I told her that I could bring her the letter but not the seeds, because is prohibited to bring plants or seeds., she agreed to send the letter only., ,

"But obsviously [sic] while she was helping my wife to pack the clothes of my children she put those seeds in one of the suitcases, I explained the officer that I had no reason to bring those seeds.

"Every time I enter thru Los Angeles I had seen when officers take away fruits from passengers (mango, avocados etc.) People that travel for the first time are ignorant of the customs restriccions, [sic] they ignore that California is one of the largest producer of avocados. Like I said before I had enter thru New York, Portland, Houston, Miami, Los Angeles, New Orleans, and I had never before had any problems at any port of entry. * * *" (Respondent's letter filed November 13, 1985, answering the Complaint allegations).

Essentially, he contends that his failure to declare the cacao seed pod to the Customs officer was due to lack of knowledge that it had been placed in the baggage contrary, to his explicit instructions.

Respondent also contends that he was subjected to racial slurs by a second Customs officer at the time he was trying to explain the situation to the first Customs officer. While this in not directly relevant to the key issues, it upset him and arguably created emotional distress which effectively reduced his capacity to rationally discuss and evaluate the alleged violation at the scene and might explain why a compromise settlement was not accepted by him earlier.

Respondent contends that he had no knowledge of the cacao seed in the luggage and that he is innocent.

Complainant's response in opposition to the Respondent's request for a hearing filed January 3, 1986, states:

"* * * On October 7, 1985, Judicial Officer Donald A. Campbell issued his decision in, In re: Richard Duran Lopez, P.Q. Docket No. 59 (Exhibit A). The Lopez decision is controlling in this matter. On page 8 of the decision, the Judicial Officer states that:

'The only mitigating circumstance that should be considered in a plant quarantine violation case is if the presence of the prohibited article was declared to the Customs Inspector, in a manner sufficiently loud and dear that the customs inspector understood the declaration, before a search of the car, baggage, or possessions began.' (Emphasis in the original).

Respondent's answer does not disclose an acceptable mitigating circumstance.

"Complainant offered to settle this matter for a sum considerably less than the requested civil penalty of $250. In the settlement letter to the respondent, complainant enclosed a copy of the Lopez decision. Respondent rejected the offer, and has requested a hearing.

"Section 1.141, subparts (a) and (b) of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.141 (a) and (b)) provides, in part, that (a) 'Any party may request a hearing on the facts . . .' and (b) 'If any material issue of fact is joined by the pleadings . . .' The respondent admitted all the facts in his answer. The only issue is the sanction, and the Judicial Officer has stated the Department's position, at page 14 of the decision,

> 'To summarize, where a person unintentionally violates a quarantine regulation issued under the Plant Quarantine Act by bringing a prohibited article into the United States, and the matter is not settled informally, the minimum civil penalty that will be imposed by the Judicial Officer in a formal case . . . is $250.' (Emphasis in the original).

"WHEREFORE, complainant request that:

> 1) The respondent's request for a hearing be denied, and
> 2) That the Administrative Law Judge grant the order requested in the complaint. (Complainant's Response filed January 3, 1986, in Opposition to Respondent's Request for a Hearing.)

If "unintentional" is construed to include "unknowing" then Complainant's position may have merit under the cited precedent.

Further, there appears to have been five family members traveling together with five pieces of luggage for the family group. No issue is raised concerning the various pieces of luggage, their contents, and the various members of the family group, nor how the luggage was packed with reference to these people.

The following questions are certified to the United States Department of Agriculture Judicial Officer:

> (1) Should Respondent's motion for hearing be denied?
> Yes. D.A.C. 1/10/86

(2) If no hearing is appropriate and if Complainant files a motion for a decision on the pleadings, should that decision be entered finding a violation and assessing a $250.00 civil penalty against Respondent Rene Vallalta? Yes. D.A.C. 1/10/86

Importation of limes without a permit—Civil penalty.

Fronds Woods, for complainant.
Respondent, pro se.

Decision by William J. Weber, Administrative Law Judge.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This proceeding was instituted under the Act of August 20, 1912, as amended, (Act) (7 U.S.C. §§ 151-164a, 167) by a complaint filed by the Administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, United States Department of Agriculture. The complaint alleged that the respondent violated section 319.56-2(e) of the regulations promulgated thereunder (7 CFR § 319.56-2(e)) by importing limes from Mexico into the United States without a permit. Copies of the complaint and the Rules of Practice governing proceedings under the Act were served by the Hearing Clerk, by certified mail, upon respondent. Respondent was informed in the complaint and the letter of service that failure to plead specifically to any allegation of the complaint would constitute an admission of such allegation.

On February 20, 1985, the respondent filed an answer in which he admitted that he had a bag of lemons as he crossed the border between the United States and Mexico on September 16, 1984. Respondent did not deny that he had no permit for the fruit. Under section 1.136(c) of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.136(c)), respondent thus admitted the allegations of the complaint.

On June 24, 1985, Judicial Officer Donald A. Campbell ruled that respondent, in his answer, admitted that he violated the Act and regulations promulgated thereunder (Ruling on Reconsideration, P.Q. Docket No. 36). Under Section 1.139 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.139), the admission by the answer of all the material allegations of fact contained in the complaint constitutes a waiver of hearing.

The Judicial Officer further ruled, in effect, that if complainant stipulated to the facts alleged in respondent's answer, no hearing would be needed to determine the sanction to be imposed. Accordingly, complainant hereby stipulates to the facts alleged in respondent's answer, making a hearing unnecessary. Furthermore, on September 10, 1985, the Judicial Officer ruled that the facts alleged in respondent's answer do not constitute mitigating circumstances. In re Lopez, P. Q. Docket No. 59, Tentative Decision and Order, at 10. There is thus no basis for reducing the requested sanction.

As there is no basis for a hearing, the material allegations of fact in the complaint are adopted and set forth as the Findings of Fact.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Francisco Ramos, respondent, is an individual whose address is 1336 Glencroft Road, Glendora, California 91740.

2. On or about September 16, 1984, respondent imported 2.5 pounds of limes from Mexico into the United States in violation of section 319.56-2(e) of the regulations (7 CFR § 319.56-2(e)), because the fruit was not accompanied by a permit.

CONCLUSIONS

In his answer, respondent did not deny any of the material allegations in the complaint. In addition, the facts alleged in respondent's answer constitute no basis for reducing the requested sanction.

By reason of the Findings of Fact set forth above, the respondent has violated the Act and regulations promulgated thereunder. The following order is therefore issued.

ORDER

Respondent Francisco Ramos is hereby assessed a civil penalty of two hundred fifty dollars ($250). The respondent shall send, payable to the "Treasurer of the United States" a certified check or money order, to Fronda C. Woods, Office of the General Counsel, Room 2422 South Building, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250-1400, no later than thirty (30) days from the effective date of this order. This order shall have the same force and effect as if entered after full hearing and shall be final and effective 35 days after service of this Decision and Order upon respondent (7 CFR 1.142(c)), unless there is an appeal to the Judicial Officer within 30 days of service pursuant to section 1.145 of the Rules of Practice applicable to this proceeding (7 CFR § 1.145).

Decision by John A. Campbell, Administrative Law Judge.

DEFAULT DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This proceeding was instituted under the Act of August 20, 1912, as amended, (Act) (7 U.S.C. §§ 151–164a and 167) by a complaint filed by the Administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, United States Department of Agriculture. The complaint alleged that the respondent violated section 319.56 of the regulations promulgated thereunder (7 CFR § 319.56). Copies of the complaint and the Rules of Practice Governing Proceedings Under the Act were served by the Hearing Clerk, by certified mail, upon respondent.

Pursuant to section 1.136 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.136) applicable to this proceeding, respondent was informed in the complaint and the letter of service that an answer should be filed with the Hearing Clerk within twenty (20) days after service of the complaint, and that failure to file an answer to, or plead specifically to, any allegation in the complaint would constitute an admission of each allegation pursuant to section 1.141 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.141), and a waiver of such hearing. The letter also advised the respondent that failure to request an oral hearing within the time for filing an answer would constitute a waiver, on his part, of oral hearing. Respondent has failed to respond in any manner to allegations in the complaint and respondent has not requested an oral hearing.

Respondent's failure to deny or otherwise respond to the allegations in the complaint constitutes an admission of such allegations, pursuant to section 1.136(c) of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.136(c)). Respondent's failure to request a hearing constitutes a waiver of such hearing. There being no basis for a hearing, the material allegations of fact in the complaint are adopted and set forth as the Findings of Fact.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Magualita Rose Rencarge, herein referred to as the respondent, is an individual whose address is 5905 Santa Maria, Laredo, Texas 78041.

2. On or about February 27, 1985, the respondent transported sixteen (16) limes into the United States from Mexico in violation of section 319.56 of the regulations (7 CFR § 319.56), because the limes were imported without a permit, as required.

CONCLUSION

Respondent has failed to respond in any manner to the allegation of the complaint. By reason of the Findings of Fact set forth above the respondent has violated the Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder. Therefore, the following order is issued.

ORDER

Respondent Magualita Rose Rencarge is hereby assessed a civil penalty of two hundred fifty dollars ($250). The respondent shall send, payable to the "Treasury of the United States" a certified check or money order, to Mark D. Dopp, Office of the General Counsel, Room 2422, South Building, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. 20250, not later than thirty (30) days from the effective date of this order. This order shall have the same force and effect as if entered after full hearing and shall be final and effective 35 days after service of this Decision and Order upon respondent, unless there is an appeal to the Judicial Officer pursuant to section 1.145 of the Rules of Practice applicable to this proceeding (7 CFR # 1.145).

PREFATORY NOTE

It is the purpose of this official publication to make available to the public, in an orderly and accessible form, decisions issued under regulatory laws administered by the Department of Agriculture.

The decisions published herein may be described generally as decisions which are made in proceedings of a quasi-judicial character, and which, under the applicable statutes, can be made by the Secretary of Agriculture, or an officer authorized by law to act in his stead, only after notice and hearing or opportunity for a hearing. These decisions do not include rules and regulations of general applicability which are required to be published in the Federal Register.

The principal statutes concerned are the Agricultural Marketing Act of 1946 (7 U.S.C. 1621 et seq.), the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937 (7 U.S.C. 601 et seq.), the Animal Quarantine and Related Laws (21 U.S.C. 111 et seq.), the Animal Welfare Act (7 U.S.C. 2131 et seq.), the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 601 et seq.), the Grain Standards Act (7 U.S.C. 1821 et seq.), the Horse Protection Act (15 U.S.C. 1821 et seq.), the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921 (7 U.S.C. 181 et seq.), the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930 (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.), the Plant Quarantine Act (7 U.S.C. 151 et seq.), the Poultry Products Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 451 et seq.), and the Virus-Serum-Toxin Act of 1913 (21 U.S.C. 151–158).

The decisions published herein are arranged alphabetically by statute and within the statute section by date of issue or date the decision became final after expiration of the appeal period. They may be cited by giving the volume and page, for illustration, 1 A.D. 472 (1942). It is unnecessary to cite the docket or decision number. Prior to 1942 the Secretary's decisions were identified by docket and decision numbers, for example, D–578; S. 1150. Such citation of a case in these volumes generally indicates that the decision is not published in Agriculture Decisions.

Current court decisions involving the regulatory laws administered by the Department of Agriculture are published herein.

In re: RALPH MOONEY. A.Q. Docket No. 139. Decided March 12, 1986.

Three violations brucellosis eradication program—Interstate cattle movement without documentation—civil penalty.

The Judicial Officer affirmed Judge McGrail's order assessing civil penalties totalling $3,000 for violations of the Brucellosis Eradication Program involving the transportation of cattle interstate that were not accompanied by the required owner's statement or other document; that were not accompanied by a health certificate and a permit for entry; and brucellosis reactors were not moved directly to a recognized slaughtering establishment. Complainant need only prevail by a preponderance of the evidence. Respondent's actions in connection with four cattle involved three separate violations and, therefore, a $3,000 civil penalty may be assessed. Severe sanction policy explained. Violations of the Brucellosis Eradication Program are very serious violations.

Donald A. Campbell, Judicial Officer.
Kris Ikejiri, for complainant.
Kenneth M. Burns, Okolona, Mississippi, for respondent.

DECISION AND ORDER

This is an administrative proceeding for the assessment of civil penalties for violations of the regulations governing the interstate movement of cattle to prevent the spread of brucellosis (9 CFR §§ 71.18, 78.7, 78.9(c)). An initial Decision and Order was issued on December 16, 1985, by Administrative Law Judge Edward H. McGrail (ALJ) assessing civil penalties totalling $3,000.

On January 22, 1986, respondent appealed to the Judicial Officer, to whom final administrative authority to decide the Department's cases subject to 5 U.S.C. §§ 556 and 557 has been delegated (7 CFR § 2.25).* The case was referred to the Judicial Officer for decision on February 25, 1986.

Based upon a careful consideration of the record, the initial Decision and Order is adopted as the final Decision and Order in this case (with a few changes too trivial to be itemized). Additional conclusions by the Judicial Officer follow the ALJ's conclusions.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE'S INITIAL DECISION

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

Respondent's Motion to Amend Answer was granted by Order dated June 5, 1985, and such amended answer was filed on June 17, 1985. A full evidentiary hearing on the record was held before the undersigned on June 26, 1985, in Oxford, Mississippi. Complainant was represented by Kris H. ISSUES PRESENTED

I

Whether the respondent on March 13, 1984, moved interstate from Memphis, Tennessee to Pontotoc, Mississippi, approximately four (4) cattle in violation of section 71.18 of the regulations because the cattle were not accompanied by an owner's statement or other document.

II

Whether the respondent on March 13, 1984, moved interstate from Memphis, Tennessee to Pontotoc, Mississippi, approximately two (2) cattle in violation of section 78.7 of the regulations because the cattle were brucellosis reactors and were not moved for immediate slaughter directly to a recognized slaughtering establishment.

III

Whether the respondent on or about March 13, 1984, moved interstate from Memphis, Tennessee to Pontotoc, Mississippi, approximately two (2) cattle in violation of section 78.9(c) of the regulations because the cattle were not accompanied by a health certificate and a "Permit for Entry", as required.

STATEMENT OF LAW AND REGULATIONS

Generally, Sections 111 and 120 of Title 21, of the United States Code, authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to promulgate such regulations as to prevent the introduction, dissemination, or spread of contagious animal diseases through interstate movements of cattle. Section 122 of Title 21, of the United States Code, provides for the assessment of not more than one thousand dollars for each violation of the regulations issued by the Secretary of Agriculture pursuant to the authority invested in him in Sections 111 and 120 of Title 21, United States Code.

Section 71.18 of the Regulations (9 CFR § 71.18) promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture pursuant to the above authority requires, as pertinent here, that cattle two (2) years of age, or over, and moved interstate other than directly to slaughter or to a quarantined feed lot must be accompanied by an owner's statement, or other document, showing the point of origin, the destination, the number of animals covered by the statement, the name and address of the owner or shipper, and the identifying numbers of the backtags or other approved identification applied.

Section 78.7 of the Regulations (9 CFR § 78.7) provides that brucellosis reactor cattle may only be moved interstate for immediate slaughter directly to a recognized slaughtering establishment if they are identified by a "B" brand on the left jaw and a metal tag on the left ear with a serial number and indication the animals are brucellosis reactors; and accompanied by a permit to be delivered to the consignee. A "Permit", VS Form 1-27, is required to accompany an interstate movement of "B" branded cattle (78.1(o)(1)).

Section 78.9(c) of the Regulations (9 CFR 78.9(c)) provides that cattle originating in a Class B State that are non-vaccinates under 18 months of age, or are official calfhood vaccinates of the beef breeds under 24 months of age, or are official calfhood vaccinates of the dairy breeds under 20 months of age, unless they are parturient or postparturient, may be moved interstate without being tested for brucellosis. If over these ages, or if they are parturient or postparturient and under these ages, they may be moved interstate when accompanied by a health certificate and "Permit for Entry." A "Permit for Entry" is a premovement authorization, oral or written, for entry into the State of destination (9 CFR § 78.1(o)(2)).

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

As noted from the Issues, supra, the allegations charged evolve from respondent's purchase of four (4) cows at the South Memphis Stockyards Co., Memphis, Tennessee, on March 13, 1984, and their interstate movement on that same date, culminating in three separate charges of violations of Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, §§ 71.18, 78.7 and 78.9(c).

Dr. A. H. Ward is a Veterinary Medical Officer, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture (APHIS–USDA). He supervises various veterinary services in an eleven county area in north-central Mississippi, including the Federal/State brucellosis control and eradication program. He described brucellosis as a higly infectious, contagious communicative disease of livestock which can also infect humans. In livestock, it is considered a reproductive disease which causes aborted fetuses, weak or stillborn calves, decreased milk production and sterility in mature animals. In humans, it can cause undulant fever. He noted that states are classified by regulation as to the degree of prevalence of the disease in a particular state, i.e., "Free", "A", "B" or "C". The lower the letter of the alphabet, the more serious the degree of existence of brucellosis in that state; i.e., a "B" State has more brucellosis than an "A" State. Tennessee is classified as a Class B State (9 CFR 78.20(c)).

He further testified that interstate movement of cattle is strenuously governed by regulations which are aimed at the prevention of the disease and control of infected animals. Such brucellosis infected animals are referred to as "reactors" and are required to have a red tag in the left ear and to be branded with a "B" on the left jaw. Once such animals are loaded on a truck for interstate shipment they must not be unloaded until they reach their destination at a slaughtering plant. Other controls promulgated in the regulations for the interstate shipment of cattle include an owner's statement, Health Certificate, Permits for Entry, eartags and backtags. They make up an identification system whereby individual animals moving interstate may, among other things, be traced to theherd of origin, as well as their destination (Tr. 12-18).[1]

Dr. Ward has spoken to Mr. Mooney on several occasions with regard to these regulations. He cited a letter, dated June 17, 1983, from the Senior Staff Veterinarian, Veterinary Services, APHIS-USDA, to Mr. Mooney cautioning him that he had not followed the regulations in shipping cattle on March 31, 1983, from South Memphis Stockyards, Memphis, Tennessee (South Memphis) to his stockyard at Pontotoc, Mississippi, because they were not accompanied by the required Health Certificate or Permit for Entry. The letter provided a copy of the regulations and offered to be of assistance to him in the interstate movement of cattle. Dr. Ward also testified that the Pontotoc Stockyard, operated by Mr. Mooney, is not an official quarantined feedlot. To his knowledge, the only reqirement to unload animals for watering is when animals are shipped over long distances by railroad. He would consider unloading brucellosis reactor animals on to another conveyance because of mechanical difficulties with the original truck to be a mitigating circumstance to the requirement that such animals be taken directly to a slaughtering establishment (CX-1; Tr. 16, 19-21, 103-106).

Mr. Olin A. Valentine, Compliance Officer, APHIS-USDA, Jackson, Mississippi, testified that while on official business at the Pontotoc Stockyards, Pontotoc, Mississippi, on the afternoon of March 14, 1984, and accompanied by Compliance Officer Joe L. Pigott, he observed four adult cows enclosed in a fenced dirt pen containing a watering trough and feed facilities. Two of these cows had tag numbers 63AA7581 and 63AA7582 in their left ears and a "B" branded on their left jaws. The other two cows wore backtags, numbers 63AA9376 and 63AA9383, sprayed with red paint indicating they were restricted cattle destined for slaughter. The first two digits are the code assigned to a particular State, e.g., "63"-Tennessee, "65"-Mississippi. The following two letters are the code assigned to a particular stockyard or sale barn, e.g., "AA"-South Memphis Stockyards Company (Tr. 34-36).

While Compliance Officer Valentine was still on the premises, Mr. Mooney arrived with a load of cattle which were not unloaded but which included another branded brucellosis reactor. When asked for the papers which accompanied the animals already in the pen and those on his truck, Mr. Mooney produced one VS Form 1-27, "Permit for Movement of Restricted Animals", a USDA form. The Permit, No. 656739, showed South Memphis Stockyards Co., Memphis, Tennessee (South Memphis) as the origin, Pioneer Beef Company, Grenada, Mississippi (Pioneer), as the destination, and Ralph Mooney as the shipper. The eartags of the three "B" branded cows on this form were listed as, 63FL7581, 63AA7582 and 63AA7584, and it was signed by Tennessee State Inspector Glen W. Curbo on the afternoon of March 13, 1984.[2] The Permit also contained a "Warning" that the "Livestock Must be Delivered to Consignee Without Diversion" (CX-3, Tr. 37, 47-48).

Mr. Valentine wrote up a statement based on his interview with Mr. Mooney on March 14, 1984; however, Mr. Mooney refused to sign it. The statement reflects that Mr. Mooney advised that on March 13, 1984, he transported cows in the penned area from South Memphis to Pontotoc, Mississippi. He also advised that it was the custom of the inspector at South Memphis to list each separate day's purchases on the same Permit, VS-1-27, and to issue only one Permit for all purchases, usually on the last day of the sales. He transported one of the "B" branded cows, No. 63AA7584, from South Memphis to Pontotoc on March 14, 1984. Mr. Mooney could not provide a Health Certificate or Permit for Entry for two other penned cows identified by red backtags, Nos. 63AA9376 and 63AA9383. Such documents were required to unload these animals at Pontotoc. Mr. Mooney's reason for transporting the penned cows to his Pontotoc Stockyard, rather than to Pioneer, was that he did not have a big enough load, and was waiting to bring in more cattle before he hauled them to slaughter (CX-12, 13; Tr. 38).

In his testimony, Mr. Valentine reiterated what Mr. Mooney had told him and which he recorded in the statement of March 14, 1984. Mr. Valentine was emphatic that Mr. Mooney advised him on that date that he did not have the VS-1-27 form with him when he transported the two (2) "B" branded cows from South Memphis to Pontotoc on March 13, 1984 (Tr. 42, 45). As a further record of his interview with Mr. Mooney and the circumstances surrounding his visit to Pontotoc on March 14, 1984, Mr. Valentine gave an affidavit to Compliance Officer Pigott on March 15, 1984. This statement reflects the presence of four adult cows on the premises of Pontotoc on March 14, 1984, two being branded brucellosis reactor cows, and two wearing backtags sprayed with red paint. Mr. Valentine's affidavit repeats the same information provided in his oral testimony and contained in the unsigned statement of Mr. Mooney (CX-13).

Mr. Joe L. Pigott, Compliance Officer, APHIS-USDA, Jackson, Mississippi, accompanied Mr. Valentine, supra, to the Pontotoc Stockyard, Pontotoc, Mississippi, on March 14, 1984. While there he too observed four adult cows in the fenced pen and noted that two of the cows had backtags which had been sprayed with red paint. He also noted that two were branded as brucellosis reactors and bore brucellosis reactor tags in their left ears. Although he did not question Mr. Mooney concerning these cows, he was present during all of the questioning by Mr. Valentine. During this questioning he heard Mr. Mooney explain that the reason for the four (4) cows being at Pontotoc was that Mr. Mooney did not have a load to transport to Pioneer and that he was waiting to obtain additional cows in order to make a load. At no time did he hear Mr. Mooney say that the four cows were there because his truck broke down (Tr. 113-114, 116). Mr. Pigott later obtained an affidavit from Mr. Valentine which reflected Mr. Mooney's answers to questions posed by Mr. Valentine on March 14, 1984 (CX-13). He also read over the statement Mr. Valentine had drawn up for Mr. Mooney to sign, but which was not signed by Mr. Mooney (Tr. 116).

Mr. Glen Curbo, Livestock Inspector, Tennessee Department of Agriculture, was on duty in his official capacity at South Memphis, Memphis, Tennessee, on March 13, 1984. He testified that he executed the VS-1-27 form, CX-3, at the request of Respondent

Mooney because the latter had purchased two (2) brucellosis reactor cows at South Memphis on that date and intended to ship them to the Pioneer Beef Company, Grenada, Mississippi. Although he signed the VS-1-27 on March 13, 1984, he retained the form in his possession until Respondent Mooney signed it and picked it up on either March 14th or 15th, 1984. It is Mr. Curbo's practice to sign the VS-1-27 form on the date the brucellosis reactor cattle are purchased to indicate that the cattle must be slaughtered fifteen (15) days from that date in order to qualify the seller for the indemnity payment. Mr. Curbo is acquainted with Respondent Mooney and knows he purchases brucellosis reactor cows on a regular basis. Mr. Curbo testified with certainty that he retained the VS-1-27 form, dated March 13, 1984, in his possession until March 14 or 15, 1984, because of the manner in which he keeps control of the VS-1-27 forms in his office, and from the fact that one of the animals on the Form, No. 63AA7584, was not bought by Respondent Mooney at South Memphis until March 14, 1984, on which date it was added to the VS-1-27 form. Thus, Respondent Mooney did not have the VS-1-27 form with him when he transported the two brucellosis reactor cows from South Memphis to Pontotoc, Mississippi, on March 13, 1984.

Mr. Curbo further testified that on the VS-1-27 form he inadvertently recorded the backtag of one of the cows purchased by Respondent Mooney as 63FL7581. "FL" is the letter code for the sale barn at Cottierville, Tennessee, where he works at other times. The backtag number should properly have been recorded as 63AA7581 to show South Memphis as the place of purchase (CX-3, 9: Tr. 50-58).

Mr. Jimmy R. Odle, Compliance Officer, Veterinary Services, APHIS, USDA, Jackson, Tennessee, obtained an invoice and sale tickets from the Burnette-Carter Commission Agency (B-C) at South Memphis. Mr. Mooney has been asssigned buyer's code M&M 324X by B-C. The invoice, dated March 13, 1984, shows that 4 head of cattle weighing a total of 3,030 lbs. were purchased on that date by Mr. Mooney (M&M 324X) for a total price of $827.84 (CX-5). The separate sale tickets show the following : No. 178765—1 cow, weight-845 lbs., price-$276.74, backtag no. 63AA9376; No. 178921—2 cows, weight-1,335 lbs., price $347.10, backtag nos. 63AA7581 and 63AA7582; and No. 178931—1 cow, weight-850 lbs., price-$204.00, backtag no. 63AA9383. It is noted that the weights and prices listed on these scale tickets for March 13, 1984, equal the totals found on the Burnette-Carter invoice ticket of the same date (CX-6, 7, 8). A fourth scale ticket, No. 191541, dated March 14, 1985, shows that Mr. Mooney purchased an additional cow on that date. The weight was listed as 785 lbs. and the price paid to B–C as $196.25. The cow is identified by backtag No. 63AA7584 (CX–5–9; Tr. 61–69).

Mr. Odle also obtained copies of "Brucellosis Test Record" from the official files of APHIS–USDA, Nashville, Tennessee. The records show a partial list of animals tested for brucellosis at South Memphis on March 13, 1985. They include two adult cows purchased by Mr. Mooney (M&M 324X), backtag Nos. 63AA9383 and 63AA9376 (CX–10, 11; Tr. 71–72).

Harvey F. McCrory, D.V.M., State Veterinarian for the State of Mississippi, stated in his affidavit of June 10, 1985, that his records failed to show that a Health Certificate was received from the South Memphis Stockyards Co. for a consignment of cattle to Ralph Mooney, Pontotoc, Mississippi, during the month of March, 1984. Additionally, he stated that a Permit for Entry was not requested for any cattle consigned to Ralph Mooney and brought into the State of Mississippi during the month of March, 1984 (CX–4, Tr. 39–41).

Respondent Ralph Mooney, Pontotoc, Mississippi, testified he operates the Pontotoc Stockyard which holds livestock sales every Saturday afternoon. He also purchases cattle for the Pioneer Beef Company, Grenada, Mississippi (Pioneer) on three days per week, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, at the South Memphis Stockyards, Memphis, Tennessee (South Memphis). For the past five years he has purchased cattle through Burnette-Carter (B–C), a commission agency operating at South Memphis. Usually he purchases restricted cows, i.e., "B" branded, and those bearing red backtags, and sells them to Pioneer which is a slaughtering plant. He is assigned No. M&M 324X as a buyer's code for the purpose of purchasing this type animal. On March 13, 1984, he purchased four head of cattle, two red tag reactor cows, and two "B" branded cows. He testified further that he intended to transport these four cows to his stockyard at Pontotoc, pick up six additional head of cattle he had purchased for Pioneer at Pontotoc the previous Saturday, and transport all ten cows to Pioneer, Grenada, Mississippi, on that date. However, he testified that he had muffler problems with his truck between Oxford and Pontotoc, Mississippi, which caused him to drop the trailer with the four cows off at his Pontotoc Stockyard and return to Pontotoc to have the truck repaired. He testified that since it was too late in the afternoon of March 13, 1984, to have the truck repaired, he returned the next morning, March 14, 1984, to have the truck repaired. Although he picked up the repaired truck "around 9 o'clock" on March 14, 1984, he testified that it was too late to drive the load from Pontotoc to Grenada, return to South

Memphis to pickup additional cattle, and then return again to Pioneer. Because of this, the four (4) head of cattle purchased at South Memphis on March 13, 1984, were unloaded at his Pontotoc Stockyard to be watered and fed, and he returned to South Memphis on March 14, 1984, to purchase additional cattle. It was when he returned from South Memphis to Pontotoc on March 14, 1984, that he was confronted by the APHIS Compliance Officers (Tr. 61, 82–90, 109).

Respondent placed in evidence a check drawn on his account, No. 193, dated March 16, 1984, in the amount of $12.72. The check was issued to the "Muffler Center" for "Trk. Repair". Mr. Mooney testified that the check was issued on March 16, 1984, because he did not have his checkbook with him on the date the repairs were made, March 14, 1984 (RX–1; Tr. 90–91, 109). He also testified that he only had the VS–1–27 form with him on March 13, 1984, when he transported the four (4) head of cattle from South Memphis to Pontotoc, and that he returned with it to South Memphis the next day where his additional purchase of cattle was added to the form by the inspector. Mr. Mooney explained in his testimony that although this was not the usual procedure carried out at South Memphis, i.e., provide a buyer with the VS–1–27 form and return it the next day to have additional purchases of cattle entered on it, the inspector at South Memphis made an exception in his case (Tr. 92–93, 197). Finally, as to these cattle, Mr. Mooney testified that he transported all of the cattle from Pontotoc to Pioneer on March 14, 1984, and that they were eventually slaughtered (Tr. 95–98, 100).

Although Mr. Mooney acknowledges that Compliance Officer Valentine wrote out a statement for him to sign on March 14, 1984, he did not sign it. He testified that he told Mr. Valentine at that time that he stopped at Pontotoc because he had problems with his truck. Contrary to Mr. Mooney's testimony, this unsigned statement fails to show that Mr. Mooney advised Mr. Valentine of any truck problems. Rather, it shows that Mr. Mooney's divergence to Pontotoc was for the reason that he did not have enough cattle for a load to take to Pioneer (CX–12; Tr. 93, 110). Lastly, Mr. Mooney acknowledged in his testimony that Dr. Ward, supra, "probably" talked with him about the June 17, 1983, letter, supra, as well as informing him of the regulations governing the interstate movement of cattle (CX–1; Tr. 103–106).

Mrs. Joyce Mooney, Pontotoc, Mississippi, is the wife of the respondent. She testified that she was present on March 14, 1984, when Compliance Officers Valentine and Pigott were there. She not only heard the questioning of her husband, but also read aloud the statement Mr. Valentine had written out for her husband to sign. She heard her husband say that the reason he stopped at Pontotoc was to pick up the six additional head of cattle owned by Pioneer and transport them to Grenada, Mississippi. She also recalled that her husband had the VS-1-27 form with him on March 14, 1984 and that he showed it to the Compliance Officers (Tr. 119-121).

It is noted here that the most direct route from South Memphis to Pioneer at Grenada, Mississippi, and the one traversed by Mr. Mooney, is due south via U.S. Highway 51, a distance of approximately 85 miles. In order to reach Pontotoc, Mississippi, from South Memphis one must proceed due south over U.S. Highway 51 to Batesville, Mississippi, a distance of approximately 53 miles, thence proceed due east over Mississippi Highway 6 to Pontotoc, a distance of approximately 57 miles. Thus, a trip from South Memphis to Pontotoc is a distance of approximately 110 miles. Proceeding westward to Batesville, Mississippi, over Mississippi Highway 6 (57) miles, thence south from Batesville over U.S. Highway 51 to Grenada, Mississippi (36) miles, a trip from South Memphis, Tennessee to Grenada, Mississippi, with a divergence to Pontotoc would be approximately 203 miles, or 118 miles longer than the direct 85 miles from South Memphis, Tennessee to Grenada, Mississippi (CX-2).

From the evidence of record it is clear that Respondent Mooney purchased four adult cows, two "B" branded (Nos. 63AA7581 and 63AA7582) and two with red backtags (Nos. 63AA9376 and 63AA9383) at South Memphis on March 13, 1984, and transported them to his Pontotoc Stockyard where they were unloaded on the same date, thereby completing an interstate movement. It is also clear from the testimony of experienced Compliance Officers, Messrs. Valentine and Pigott, and from the fact that experienced veterinary personnel found the red tagged cows to be brucellosis test eligible, that they were adult cows two years of age or over and therefore subject to the regulations.

The initial question here is whether or not Mr. Mooney had in his possession the VS-1-27 form when he transported these four (4) cows to his Pontotoc Stockyard on March 13, 1984. Mr. Mooney testified that he did. He also testified that this was the only document that accompanied the four (4) cows on this trip. He could not produce for Compliance Officer Valentine either a Health Certificate, or a Permit for Entry, for the two red tagged cows. Thus, assuming Mr. Mooney did have the VS-1-27 form in his possession when he transported these four (4) cows to Pontotoc on March 13, 1984, it must be noted that the Form only listed the two "B" branded cows, Nos. 63AA7581 and 63AA7582, and did not list the two red tagged cows, Nos. 63AA9376 and 63AA9384. At this point alone, whether Mr. Mooney had problems with his truck or not, he violated § 71.18, 9 CFR § 71.18, in that the two red tagged cows were not accompanied by an owner's statement or other document, as required.

However, contrary to Mr. Mooney's assertion in his testimony that he did have the VS-1-27 form in his possession when he transported the four (4) cows to Pontotoc, is the testimony of Tennessee State Inspector Curbo who executed the VS-1-27 form at South Memphis. Inspector Curbo's procedure is to use only one VS-1-27 form for each buyer of "B" branded cattle for the three days of sales at South Memphis. Procedure requires that he retain this form in his possession and record on it the purchases made on each successive day. There are no exceptions. He signs and dates the form on the first day a purchase is made so that time commences running for the seller to collect the indemnity payment. Moreover, the form is only released to the buyer on the date of his last purchase. This procedure was followed with Mr. Mooney's purchases. Inspector Curbo testified with certainty on following this procedure, i.e., that the form was not released to Mr. Mooney until March 14 or 15, 1984, because of the fact that another "B" branded cow, No. 63AA7584, was purchased by Mr. Mooney on March 14, 1984, and added to the Form on that date. Thus, based on the creditable testimony of Inspector Curbo alone, Mr. Mooney could not have had the VS-1-27 form in his possession when he transported the four (4) cows to Pontotoc on March 13, 1984. This is further buttressed by the scale ticket from B-C which showed that, indeed, Mr. Mooney purchased an additional animal on March 14, 1984, and by the testimony of Compliance Officer Valentine who stated Mr. Mooney told him on March 14, 1984, that he did not have the VS-1-27 form with him when he transported the cattle to the Pontotoc Stockyard on March 13, 1984. The testimony of Compliance Officer Valentine also shows that Mr. Mooney did not have a Health Certificate, nor a Permit for Entry for the two red tagged cows. This testimony is corroborated by the affidavit of the Mississippi State Veterinarian whose records failed to disclose that a Health Certificate had been received, or that a Permit for Entry was issued, for any cattle consigned to Ralph Mooney during the month of March 1984.

The second matter to be considered is whether Mr. Mooney's detour to Pontotoc was permitted under the regulations, and whether his testimony regarding muffler trouble with his truck deserves credence as a defense to his divergence and the unloading of the cattle at Pontotoc on March 13, 1984. The language of § 78.7, 9

CFR § 78.7, is explicit in that brucellosis reactor cattle, here Nos. 63AA7581 and 63AA7582, must be moved interstate directly to a recognized slaughtering establishment. "Directly" is not further enlarged upon in the regulations, presumably because it is a common usage adverb which is readily understod as: in direct line or manner; without anyone or anything intervening; immediately.[3] Taking this meaning in the normal sense, divergence of 114 miles (Batesville to Pontotoc and return) from the normal 85 mile route, (South Memphis to Grenada via U.S. Highway 51) could hardly be said to be "directly" to a slaughtering establishment, Pioneer, as required by the regulations. Nor has any regulation been cited requiring the necessity for detour to feed and water animals.

In reference to Mr. Mooney's testimony regarding muffler problems with his truck on March 13, 1984, it is noted here that it purportedly occurred between Oxford and Pontotoc, Mississippi. Oxford is located approximately halfway between the 57-mile distance between Batesvile, the turnoff point from U.S. Highway 51, and Pontotoc. Thus, Mr. Mooney at that point was well on a detour which was not "directly" to a slaughtering establishment. Nevertheless, the record also shows that at the time Mr. Mooney was questioned by Compliance Officer Valentine on March 14, 1984, he made no mention of truck problems as the cause of his detour to Pontotoc and unloading the cattle there. Rather, his reason was that he was waiting to obtain a full load of cattle before proceeding to Pioneer. Although Mr. Mooney did not sign the statement prepared by Compliance Officer Valentine, Mrs. Mooney testified that she was present during the interview with her husband and read the statement aloud in the presence of the group. The statement is of record and makes no reference to truck problems nor does it indicate that any changes or corrections in the statement were requested by Mr. Mooney. Further, I find little credibility in Mr. Mooney's testimony that he did not pay for the muffler repairs on March 14, 1984, when he picked up the repaired truck, because he did not have his checkbook with him. As noted previously, after picking up his truck he proceeded to South Memphis to purchase additional cattle.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Ralph Mooney, respondent, is an individual whose address is P. O. Box 217, Pontotoc, Mississippi 38863.

2. The respondent operates a specifically approved stockyard in Pontotoc, Mississippi.

3. Brucellosis is an infectious, contagious, and communicable disease of cattle which also affects humans and is known in humans as undulant fever.

4. The regulations in Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, Part 71.1 et seq., and Part 78.1 et seq., are an integral and significant part of the federal and state cooperative efforts to control and eradicate brucellosis.

5. On March 13, 1984, Tennessee was classified as a Class B State, 9 CFR § 78.20(c).

6. The cattle identified below as 63AA9376 and 63AA9383 were adult cattle, two years of age or over.

7. On March 13, 1984, the respondent moved interstate from Memphis, Tennessee to Pontotoc, Mississippi, approximately four (4) cattle, identified by eartag numbers 63AA7581, 63AA7582, and backtag numbers 63AA9376 and 63AA9383, in violation of section 71.18 of the regulations because the cattle were not accompanied by an owner's statement or other document, as required.

8. On or about March 13, 1984, the respondent moved interstate from Memphis, Tennessee to Pontotoc, Mississippi, approximately two (2) cattle, identified by eartag numbers 63AA7581 and 63AA7582, in violation of section 78.7 of the regulations because the cattle were brucellosis reactors and were not moved for immediate slaughter directly to a recognized slaughtering establishment, as required.

9. On or about March 13, 1984, the respondent moved interstate from Memphis, Tennessee to Pontotoc, Mississippi, approximately two (2) cattle which were identified with the backtags of 63AA9376 and 63AA9383, in violation of section 78.9(c) of the regulations because the cattle were not accompanied by a Health Certificate and a "Permit for Entry", as required.

CIVIL ASSESSMENT

Section 122 of Title 21 of the United States Code provides for the assessment of a civil penalty "of not more than one thousand dollars" for each violation of the regulations published pursuant to authority granted to the Secretary of Agriculture in §§ 111 and 120 of Title 21 of the United States Code. The Secretary has issued such regulations governing the interstate transportation of cattle, as here pertinent: §§ 71.18, 78.7 and 78.9, 9 CFR §§ 71.18, 78.7 and 78.9. Each is a separate and distinct violation subject to the maximum penalty of $1,000. Severe sanctions for violation of the Department's regulations has been an established policy. In re Braxton Worsley, 33 Agric. Dec. 1547, 1556-71 (1974); see also In re Donald Hageman, S&H Hogs, Inc., et al., 42 Agric. Dec. 531, 546

(1983) and cases cited therein. The complainant here seeks the maximum civil penalty assessment for each proven violation. The evidence of record is void of any mitigating or extenuating circumstances which would lessen the assessment of the maximum penalty. Rather, it shows the respondent to be an experienced cattle dealer, the operator of a stockyard, one who has been previously made aware of the regulations, and one who has had a prior caution as to violation of the same regulations involved here. Therefore, the evidence of record supports the requested assessment of $1,000 for each violation alleged and proven as appropriate to accomplish the goals of compliance and deterrence of respondents and others similarly situated.

ADDITIONAL CONCLUSIONS BY THE JUDICIAL OFFICER

Respondent contends on appeal that the evidence does not support the findings of fact, and that respondent's motion to dismiss should have been granted. However, there is more than enough evidence to support the findings of fact. Complainant need only prevail by a preponderance of the evidence.[4]

Respondent also contends that the civil penalties totalling $3,000 are unwarranted. Respondent contends that only a single violation occurred. However, respondent's actions in connection with the four cattle involved here constituted three separate violations and, therefore, a civil penalty of $1,000 may be assessed as to each violation (21 U.S.C. § 122).

The record here supports the assessment of civil penalties totalling $3,000 for the serious violations found here. As stated in In re Grady, 45 Agric. Dec. ____, slip op. at 67 (Jan. 31, 1986):

> The brucellosis eradication program is important to the national welfare. To date, the program has cost in excess of $1 billion. It costs about $150 million a year (Tr. 440). There is no excuse for respondents' complete disregard of the regulatory requirements.

The Brucellosis Eradication Program is described in In re Petty, 43 Agric. Dec. ____, slip op. at 4-5 (Oct. 31, 1984), appeal docketed, No. 3-84-2200-R (N.D. Tex. Dec. 19, 1984), as follows:

Dec. 1934, 1941 n.5 (1981), aff'd 713 F.2d 179 (6th Cir. 1983); In re Gold Bell-I&S Jersey Farms, Inc., 37 Agric. Dec. 1336, 1346 (1978), aff'd, No. 78-3134 (D.N.J. 4. Brucellosis (also known as Bangs disease or undulant fever) is a contagious, infectious and communicable disease affecting livestock. It is transmittable to humans.[4] (Tr. 32, 95–96, 1056–59, 1160–64, 1177–80). The incubation period of the disease varies from about 10 days to a year, but does not generally exceed several months (Tr. 95, 1180).

[4] Brucellosis is "a disease of man of sudden or insidious onset and long duration characterized by great weakness, extreme exhaustion on slight effort, night sweats, chilliness, remittent fever, and generalized aches and pains and acquired through direct contact with infected animals or animal products or from the consumption of milk, dairy products, or meat from infected animals" (Webster's Third New International Dictionary, Unabridged (1981), at 285).

For many years the Federal Government has maintained a vigorous and costly program directed to the control and eradication of this disease (Tr. 32–33, 1059–63). For example, in 1980, the Federal Government spent $73,715,667 for brucellosis eradication (1982 Budget Explanatory Notes, USDA, vol. 2, at 8). To control the disease, some entire herds of cattle are destroyed, with some indemnification from the Federal Government (9 CFR § 51.3(a)(2) (1980); Tr. 239–41). Because of the large economic impact of the cattle industry on the nation, the success of the Brucellosis Eradication Program is of national importance.

In carrying out the Brucellosis Eradication Program, the Federal Government, through regulations issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, regulates the interstate movement of cattle. 9 CFR Part 78 (1980).

Respondent was warned on June 17, 1983, in a certified letter from the Department about violations similar to those involved here, and a copy of the regulations was sent to respondent (CX 1). In addition, as the ALJ noted, Dr. Ward spoke to respondent on several occasions with respect to the regulations. Accordingly, respondent's violations here were flagrant and serious violations of the Brucellosis Eradication Program.

It is the policy of this Department to impose severe sanctions for serious violations of any of the regulatory programs administered by the Department to serve as an effective deterrent not only to the respondents, but also to other potential violators. This policy has been followed in all of the Department's disciplinary proceedings in recent years.

The basis for the Department's severe sanction policy is set forth at great length in numerous decisions, e.g., In re Worsley, 33 Agric. Dec. 1547, 1556-71 (1974),[5] which is set forth as an appendix to this decision.[6] The Department's sanction policy is also discussed at length in In re Esposito, 38 Agric. Dec. 613, 624-65 (1979).

For the foregoing reasons, the following order should be issued.

ORDER

Ralph Mooney, respondent, is assessed a civil penalty of $3,000 ($1,000 per violation). The civil penalty shall be payable to the "Treasurer of the United States" by certified check or money order and shall be forwarded to Kris H. Ikejiri, Office of the General Counsel, Room 2422-South Building, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250-1400, within 60 days after service of this order.

U.S.D.A. SANCTION POLICY

[Excerpt omitted.—Ed.]

In re: ROBERT CARSON d/b/a CARSON'S TAXIDERMIST, INC. A.Q. Docket No. 226. Decided March 12, 1986.

Victor W. Palmer, Administrative Law Judge.
Kevin B. Thiemann, for complainant.
For respondent, pro se.

CONSENT DECISION

This proceeding was instituted under the Act of February 2, 1903, as amended (Act) (21 U.S.C. §§ 111 and 120), by a complaint filed by the Administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service alleging that Robert Carson, d/b/a Carson's Taxidermist, Inc., respondent, violated the Act and regulations promulgated thereunder (9 CFR § 95.1 et seq.). The parties have agreed that this proceeding should be terminated by entry of the Consent Decision set forth below and have agreed to the following stipulations:

1. For the purposes of this stipulation and the provisions of this Consent Decision only, respondent specifically admits that the Secretary of the United States Department of Agriculture has jurisdiction in this matter, neither admits nor denies the remaining allegations in the complaint, admits to the Findings of Fact set forth below, and waives:

(a) any further procedure;

(b) any requirement that the final decision in this proceeding contain findings and conclusions with respect to all material issues of fact, law, or discretion, as well as the reasons or bases thereof;

(c) all rights to seek judicial review and otherwise challenge or contest the validity of this decision; and

2. Respondent also stipulates and agrees that the United States Department of Agriculture is the "prevailing party" in this proceeding and waives any action against the United States Department of Agriculture under the Equal Access to Justice Act of 1980 (5 U.S.C. § 504 et seq.) for fees and other expenses incurred by the respondent in connection with this proceeding.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Robert Carson, respondent, is an individual whose mailing address is 16 Verbena Avenue, Floral Park, New York 11001, and who is doing business as Carson's Taxidermist, Inc.

2. In November 1983, Carson's Taxidermist, Inc., was an establishment approved by the United States Department of Agriculture, Veterinary Services, for the receipt and handling of restricted import animal byproducts.

3. On or about November 21, 1983, the respondent released from his establishment deer antlers and their accompanying cardboard boxes which had been imported into the United States from the People's Republic of China.

CONCLUSIONS

The respondent having admitted the jurisdictional facts and having agreed to the provisions set forth in the following order in disposition of the proceeding, such order and decision will be issued.

ORDER

The respondent is assessed a civil penalty of five hundred dollars ($500.00) which shall be payable to the "Treasurer of the United States" by certified check or money order, and which shall be forwarded to Kevin B. Thiemann, Office of the General Counsel, Room 2422 South Building, United States Department of Agriculture, 12th and Independence Avenue, S. W., Washington, D. C. 20250–1400, within thirty (30) days from the effective date of this order.

This order shall become effective on the day upon which service of this order is made upon the respondent.

Victor W. Palmer, Administrative Law Judge.
Jaru Ruley, for complainant.
For respondent, pro se.

DECISION AND ORDER

This is an administrative proceeding for the assessment of a civil penalty for a violation of the regulations governing the interstate movement of cattle because of brucellosis (9 CFR §§ 78.1 et seq.), hereinafter referred to as the regulations, in accordance with the Rules of Practice in 9 CFR §§ 70.1 et seq. and 7 CFR §§ 1.130 et seq.

This proceeding was instituted by a complaint filed on October 30, 1985, by the Acting Administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, United States Department of Agriculture. The complaint alleged that on or about November 12, 1984, respondent moved four cattle interstate from his brucellosis quarantined herd in McCurtain County Oklahoma, to the D&W Packing Company, Texarkana, Texas, in violation of section 78.8 of the regulations (9 CFR § 78.8) in that the cattle were not "S" branded when they moved. In his answer, respondent admitted the material allegations contained into the complaint, thereby waiving a hearing. (See 7 CFR § 1.139).

Accordingly, the material facts alleged in the complaint are adopted and set forth herein as the findings of fact, and this decision is issued pursuant to section 1.139 of the Rules of Practice applicable to this proceeding. (See 7 CFR § 1.139).

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Respondent, Charles Bowen, is an individual whose address is Box 156, Bethel, Oklahoma 74724.

2. On or about November 12, 1984, the respondent moved interstate four cattle from his brucellosis quarantined herd in McCurtain County, Oklahoma, to the D&W Packing Company, Texarkana, Texas, in violation of section 78.8 of the regulations (9 CFR § 78.8) because the cattle were not "S" branded when they moved interstate, as required.

CONCLUSION

By reason of the facts contained in the Findings of Fact above, the respondent has violated section 78.8 of the regulations (9 CFR § 78.8).

Therefore, the following Order is issued.

ORDER

Respondent, Charles Bowen, is hereby assessed a civil penalty of three hundred dollars ($300.00). This penalty shall be payable to the "Treasurer of the United States" by certified check or money order, and shall be forwarded to Jaru Ruley, Office of the General Counsel, Room 2422 South Bldg., United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. 20250-1400, within thirty (30) days from the effective date of this order. This order shall have the same force and effect as if entered after a full hearing and shall be final and effective 35 days after service of this Decision and Order upon respondent, unless there is an appeal to the Judicial Officer pursuant to section 1.145 of the Rules of Practice applicable to this proceeding (7 CFR § 1.145).

CONSENT DECISION AND ORDER AS TO LARRY FREELAND

This proceeding was instituted under the Act of February 2, 1903, as amended (Act) (21 U.S.C. Section 111 and 120), by a complaint filed by the Administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service alleging that Larry Freeland and others, violated the Act and regulations promulgated thereunder (9 CFR Section 71.1 et seq. and 78.1 et seq.). Respondent Larry Freeland and the complainant have agreed that this proceeding should be terminated by entry of the Consent Decision set forth and have agreed to the following stipulations:

1. For the purposes of this stipulation and the provisions of this Consent Decision only, respondent Larry Freeland admits specifically that the Secretary of the United States Department of Agriculture has jurisdiction in this matter, neither admits nor denies the remaining allegations in the complaint, admits to the Findings of Fact set forth below, and waives:

(a) Any further procedure;

(b) Any requirement that the final decision in this proceeding contain findings and conclusions with respect to all material issues of fact, law or discretion, as well as the reasons or bases thereof;

(c) All rights to seek judicial review and otherwise challenge or contest the validity of this decision; and

2. Respondent Larry Freeland stipulates and agrees that the United States Department of Agriculture is the "prevailing party" in this proceeding, and waives any action against the United States Department of Agriculture under the Equal Access to Justice Act of 1980 (5 U.S.C. Section 504 et seq.) for fees and other expenses incurred by the respondent in connection with this proceeding.

3. Complainant, the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, stipulates and agrees that it will not bring any administrative actions and will not recommend to the Department of Justice that it take any civil or criminal actions on the alleged movements of cattle from Nebraska to Kansas and Kansas to Nebraska in July of 1984 by, or on behalf of, respondent Larry Freeland and Alma Livestock Commission Company, Inc., of which respondent is president.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Larry Freeland, respondent, is an individual whose address is Box 409, Alma, Nebraska 68920.

2. On or about August 1, 1984, the respondent moved interstate from Sulphur Springs, Texas, to Alma, Nebraska, approximately 44 cattle.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent Larry Freeland having admitted the jurisdictional facts and having agreed to the provisions set forth in the following Order in disposition of this proceeding, such Order and Decision will be issued.

ORDER

Respondent Larry Freeland is assessed a civil penalty of one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500.00) which shall be payable to the "Treasurer of the United States", by certified check or money order, and which shall be forwarded to Kris H. DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is an administrative disciplinary proceeding arising by reason of a Complaint filed on February 24, 1984, by the Acting Administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, United States Department of Agriculture. Therein the Respondent was charged with having violated the Act of February 2, 1903, as amended (21 U.S.C. sections 111 and 120), and the regulations promulgated thereunder, found in 9 CFR section 78.1 et seq. The Respondent filed an Answer on March 20, 1984, and an Amended Answer was filed on September 20, 1984. Thereafter, at the oral hearing, the Complainant amended the Complaint to delete Count V, and the requested penalties were reduced from $2,000.00 to $1,500.00.

This case arose from the routine transport of four adult cows across the Mississippi/Louisiana State line and their transfer to a larger vehicle for transport to a Texas slaughtering establishment.

In the complaint filed in this proceeding, it was alleged that on or about August 25, 1983, the Respondent shipped, interstate, four cows from Columbia, Mississippi, to Kentwood, Louisiana, in violation of sections 71.18 and 78.9(d)(3)(iii) of the regulations because the cows, which were over 24 months of age and which allegedly did not go directly to a slaughter establishment or to a quarantined feedlot, moved interstate unaccompanied by an owner's statement or other acceptable document, and a certificate showing prescribed information, and a "Permit for Entry," as required.

In his Amended Answer the Respondent admitted that on or about August 25, 1983, he was a driver of a truck carrying cows from Columbia, Mississippi, to Kentwood, Louisiana. Respondent denied the remaining allegations and stated he would affirmatively show that the cows in question did go directly to slaughter. Respondent specifically denied that he shipped or was a shipper of any cows.

At the oral hearing it was stipulated among other things:

> (1) The cattle in question were all over 24 months of age and were slaughtered at the Calhoun Packing Company, Palestine, Texas, on August 26, 1983, the day after they were transported across State lines by the Respondent;
> (2) That the Stringer Sale Barn, Columbia, Mississippi, from which the cows moved in interstate, was a specifically approved stockyard and that the cows in question were subjected to a premovement brucellosis test in the 30 days immediately prior to the interstate movement and the results of that test were negative for all cows;

(3) That at the point of arrival at Hatcher Dairy Farm, a dealer assembly point in Kentwood, Louisiana, the cows were unloaded from the truck they had been moved in;

(4) That the cows were subsequently moved from Kentwood, Louisiana, to Palestine, Texas, by someone other than Respondent; and

(5) That no owner's statement or "other document" listing Kentwood, Louisiana, as the destination, accompanied the movement from Columbia, Mississippi, to Kentwood, Louisiana.

This is a case of first impression, particularly with respect to the issue of whether the cattle in question went "directly to a recognized slaughtering establishment" under 9 CFR section 78.9(d)(1)(iii). There is no published case nor published interpretation as to what is meant by going directly to a slaughtering establishment. Respective counsel have not located any authority defining this terminology.

If the cattle in question had gone directly to a recognized slaughtering establishment, it was not necessary that such cattle be accompanied by certain documents, the absence of which is alleged as a violation of 9 CFR section 78.9(d)(3)(iii).

The Respondent raises the issue as to the validity of the Complainant's position as to the imposition of a fine based on two violations for an alleged violation where only one regulation is violated.

An oral hearing took place on January 15, 1985, in Jackson, Mississippi. The Complainant was represented by Jaru Ruley, Esquire, Office of the General Counsel, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. 20250. The Respondent was represented by John B. Clark, Esquire, and Timothy E. Hurley, Esquire, of Daniel, Coker, Horton and Bell, Attorneys at Law, Post Office Box 94, Jackson, Mississippi, 39205. In due course the parties filed Briefs, the last Brief having been filed herein on April 2, 1985.

STATEMENT OF THE LAW

As herein pertinent, 21 U.S.C. § 120 provides that:

In order to enable the Commissioner of Agriculture [Secretary of Agriculture] to effectually suppress and extirpate contagious pleuropneumonia, foot-and-mouth disease, and other dangerous contagious, infectious, and communicable diseases in cattle and other livestock and/or live poultry and to prevent the spread of such diseases, he is authorized and directed from time to time to establish such rules and regulations concerning the exportation and transportation of livestock and/or live poultry from any place within the United States where he may have reason to believe such diseases may exist into and through any State or Territory [, including the Indian territory], and into and through the District of Columbia and to foreign countries as he may deem necessary, and all such rules and regulations shall have the force of law.

21 U.S.C. § 122 provides that:

Any person, company, or corporation knowingly violating the provisions of this Act or the orders or regulations made in pursuance thereof shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not more than one year, or both such fine and imprisonment. Any person, company, or corporation violating such provisions, orders, or regulations may be assessed a civil penalty by the Secretary of Agriculture of not more than one thousand dollars. The Secretary may issue an order assessing such civil penalty only after notice and an opportunity for an agency hearing on the record. Such order shall be treated as a final order reviewable under chapter 158 of title 28, United States Code [28 USCS §§ 2341 et seq]. The validity of such order may not be reviewed in an action to collect such civil penalty.

9 CFR § 71.18(a)(1) provides, in relevant part, that:

All cattle, except for certain exceptions not applicable here, two years of age or over, may be moved interstate if "accompanied by a statement signed by the owner or shipper of the cattle or other document stating . . . (b) the destination of the animals . . . ."

9 CFR § 78.5 provides that:

Cattle may not be moved interstate except in compliance with the regulations in this subpart.

9 CFR § 78.9 provides, in relevant part, that:

Cattle from herds not known to be affected with brucellosis must be moved interstate in compliance with § 71.18 of this subchapter, except where specifically exempted, and then only as follows:

(1) Movement for immediate slaughter.

(iii) Such cattle from other than a farm of origin or a nonquarantined feedlot may also be moved interstate directly to a recognized slaughtering establishment, if they have been tested negative within 30 days prior to movement, or if they are "S" branded and are accompanied by an "A" brand permit.

(iv) Such cattle from other than a farm of origin or a nonquarantined feedlot may also be moved interstate for immediate slaughter to a recognized slaughtering establishment without being "S" branded, if they are accompanied by a VS Form 1-27 permit and are moved in vehicles closed with official seals. Official seals shall only be applied or removed by a Veterinary Services representative, a State representative, an accredited veterinarian, or by other persons authorized for this purpose by the Veterinary Services representatives.

(2) Movement to quarantined feedlot.

(3) Movement other than in accordance with paragraphs (d)(1) or (2) of this section. Such cattle may be moved other than in accordance with paragraph (d)(1) or (2) of this section only if:

(iii) Such cattle have been subjected to two consecutive official negative tests for brucellosis with the first test not less than 60 days before interstate movement and the second test not less than 60 days after the first test nor more than 30 days before the date of the interstate movement, provided however, that the time period for the first test is valid up to 12 months. These tested cattle shall be accompanied by a certificate which shows, in addition to the items required under § 78.1(n), the dates and results of the official tests required by this paragraph and shall be accompanied by a "Permit for Entry"; . . . .

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Respondent, Billy Van Norman, sometimes herein referred to as "Respondent," is an individual, whose mailing address is Route 2, McComb, Mississippi 39648.

2. Respondent, Billy Van Norman, was, on August 25, 1983, in the business of purchasing and hauling livestock for others. He operates out of his home and has no employees. His only equipment is a truck and trailer.

3. On August 25, 1983, Respondent purchased four adult cows, for Mr. William Hatcher, at the Stringer Sale Barn, Columbia, Mississippi. In purchasing the four cows, Respondent acted as subagent, at the request of Mr. William Hatcher, who in turn acted as agent for the Calhoun Packing Company, of Palestine, Texas. On the same date, Respondent also purchased four calves at the Stringer Sale Barn.

4. Respondent hauled the four cows and four calves across the State line to the Hatcher Dairy Farm, in Kentwood, Louisiana. None of the cows left the trailer during the trip to the Hatcher Dairy Farm in Kentwood.

5. Respondent was stopped at a road check, at 5:30 p. m., the first in four years, with the four cows and four calves. Respondent didn't have the health papers and said he did not believe they were needed inasmuch as the cattle were moving directly to slaughter. At this point there was no violation and when Exhibit No. 1 was filled out, there was no violation indicated.

6. It is the custom and common practice in the State of Mississippi that various "gooseneck" trailer trucks bring small loads of cattle to a central location where the cattle are then placed in a larger truck. It is impracticable to load cattle directly from a "gooseneck" to a "double-deck" truck.

7. The four cows in question had tested negatively to a brucellosis test within 30 days prior to August 25, 1983.

8. Respondent, Billy Van Norman, moved the four cows, interstate, to a dealer assembly point known as Hatcher Dairy Farm, Kentwood, Louisiana.

9. The only document which accompanied the interstate movement of the four cows was a sales invoice which listed Calhoun Packing Company as the buyer.

10. It is approximately 400 miles from Columbia, Mississippi, to Palestine, Texas, the location of Calhoun Packing Company.

11. When Respondent arrived at the Hatcher Dairy Farm, a "double-deck" truck was waiting at the chute normally used by such trucks.

12. Respondent unloaded the four calves into a pen and placed the four mature cows in the alley between the pens.

13. An "alley" is a walkway or passageway between pens, and is not a pen.

14. Respondent was present at the Hatcher Dairy Farm, for approximately 15 minutes.

15. Respondent received $35.00 for his hauling fee and left the Hatcher Dairy Farm, while the mature cows were still in the "alley."

16. Respondent believed he was complying with the law and he acted in a reasonable and good faith belief that the mature cows were about to be loaded onto the "double-deck" truck for transport to Palestine, Texas. Although Respondent could have turned around to have avoided the road check, he did not do so because he "had no reason" to turn around. He thought he was in compliance. Respondent was justified in believing that the four cattle were about to be loaded for transport to Palestine.

17. The four adult cows reached Palestine, Texas, the next morning, August 26, 1983, and were slaughtered there that day.

18. Given the distance from Columbia, Mississippi, to Palestine, Texas, and the times that the cattle departed from Mississippi and arrived in Texas, the cattle could not have remained at the Hatcher Dairy Farm, for a period longer than two or three hours, if that long. What happened to the cattle after Respondent left was not shown by the evidence, but inasmuch as Respondent was stopped at the road check at 5:30 p. m., and the cattle were slaughtered the next day, it seems doubtful that the cattle remained more than a few minutes in the "alley," as such presence would have interfered with the loading of other cattle.

19. Brucellosis is a communicable disease of cattle, but consumption of meat from infected animals poses no risk to man, and cattle with brucellosis may be sold for slaughter.

20. The Calhoun Packing Company is a "recognized slaughtering establishment" as that term is defined in 9 CFR section 78.18.

21. The violation on Complainant's Exhibit No. 1 was put in later when a determination was made that the cattle were not shipped "directly" to slaughter. Thus, on September 1, an initial determination was made of alleged violations because of the "holding pens" at Hatcher Dairy Farm.

22. The testimony is indisputable that there is nothing in the regulations specifically defining what is meant by direct movement nor is there anything in the regulations which specifically prohibit loading and unloading of cattle when they are involved in a shipment to slaughter.

23. A knowledgeable and experienced witness, Mr. Minter, testified. He is employed by the Southeast Mississippi Livestock Farmers Association. He is a long standing President of the Mississippi Livestock Association, a trade association, which is composed of 60 to 80 members. Said witness has been a dealer, buyer, auctioneer, stockyard manager, scale man, and has engaged in other livestock activities as well as having had experience in transporting cattle in many States. Although there were no regulations pertaining to the transfer of cattle from the smaller trucks, i.e., the "gooseneck" trailers into the moving vans that take the cattle to slaughter, it was his opinion that the movement of cattle in this particular case was not in violation of the rules and regulations and he expressed the view that the temporary presence of the animals at Hatcher's appeared to him to be a direct movement to slaughter. This was in accord with his understanding of what had occurred in prior years. He also made reference to a symposium of United States Department of Agriculture, Animal Health Inspection, personnel in Fort Worth, Texas, which was attended by Mr. Bert Harkins, Administrator, relative to the brucellosis program, at which time Mr. Harkins appealed for a common sense application with respect to the rules and regulations. Mr. Minter was a knowledgeable witness and explained the cattle could not be unloaded from a "gooseneck" truck directly into an 18 wheeler; that such a movement required an unloading and reloading; that the practice of bringing cattle into a central assembly point in little haulers, and reloading them into the larger trucks was widespread in Mississippi and that it would be ruinous for the Mississippi livestock industry if this were precluded. He also testified that he was of the opinion that what occurred in this case was a direct movement and it met all the requirements of the regulations.

24. The unloading and loading of cattle from "gooseneck" trucks into the 18 wheeler trucks is a widespread and prevalent practice, at least in the State of Mississippi, where the cattle are brought in, in smaller trucks, and then for economy and other reasons are reloaded onto another truck. As a practical matter, all of the smaller "gooseneck" trucks do not arrive at the precise minute of all others, and accordingly, the cattle may well be placed on the ground for a few minutes or a short time pending the reloading procedures onto the larger truck.

25. If the original "gooseneck" truck had transported the cattle without stopping or unloading, there would be no issue herein. The only reason a question arises here is because of the unloading and reloading procedures.

26. The question of whether or not the cattle should have been accompanied by a certificate and a "Permit for Entry," in compliance with section 78.9(d)(3)(iii) of the regulations (9 CFR section 78.9(d)(3)(iii)), depends upon whether or not the four cows in question went directly to a recognized slaughtering establishment. If they did, the sales invoice, showing Calhoun Packing Company as the concern that the cows were sold to, would have been acceptable to satisfy the requirement of 9 CFR section 71.18. Under the regulations a waybill can be an appropriate document to accompany cattle which are moving interstate to slaughter. The invoice which accompanied the four cattle here showed the weights and numbers of each animal and the name of the purchaser and herd owner's name.

27. The burden of proof is on the Agency to establish that a violation of the Act and regulations occurred. This burden has not been achieved. The regulations do not define what is meant by direct movement. The unloading—reloading activity of Respondent on August 25, 1983, was consonant with a widespread accepted practice in the industry in this part of the Country. The agency, of course, is not precluded from issuing appropriate regulations which would prohibit such unloading—reloading, and defining the manner in which "direct" movement is interpreted. It has not done so.

28. As far as Respondent is concerned, the cattle in question in this proceeding went directly to slaughter, and were, therefore, not required to be accompanied by the documents prescribed by 9 CFR section 78.9(d)(3)(iii).

29. The invoice accompanying the cattle was a proper "statement signed by the owner or shipper of the cattle, or other document" under 9 CFR section 71.18(a)(1)(i).

30. No violation of the Act and regulations has been proven in this case.

CONCLUSIONS

There is lack of precedent with respect to this case inasmuch as there is no decided authority as to what is meant by direct movement to slaughter. From the testimony of the witnesses, it can easily be discerned that any interpretation at the present time is subjective, absent regulations of definition.

There are no regulations relating to what is permissible with respect to the transfer of cattle under the circumstances herein. It is the position of the Complainant, through its witnesses, that once an animal is "penned" it is not "direct" movement but rather it is under the control of the person who owns the land, who in this case was Mr. Hatcher. The Respondent was responsible for the movement only to the facility and not to the land owner ("pen" owner) or the person who brought the 18 wheeler truck there. Briefly summarized, and in the absence of any regulations setting forth what is permissible and what is not permissible, there is a situation here where the cattle were purchased for a distant purchaser's slaughterhouse by Mr. Hatcher through the Respondent and the Respondent hauled the four cows to Mr. Hatcher's facility for the sole purpose of loading them onto the 18 wheeler truck and he deposited them in an alley for that purpose. With respect to the practicalities of the situation, the Complainant's own witnesses pointed out that offloading may be needed not only to get the cattle on the truck but also because of the "28-hour" law which provides, among other things, that cattle cannot remain in transit for more than 28 hours without offloading for feed and water.

In its Reply Brief, Complainant maintains that reference to the "Twenty-Eight Hour Law" (45 U.S.C. sections 71-74) is irrelevant and immaterial to the issues herein. Moreover, Complainant states on Brief that such law does not apply to cattle hauled in trucks, but only to cattle to be moved in railcars and water vessels. The witnesses testifying made no such distinction. Complainant would distinguish unloading for humanitarian reasons and economic reasons.

Careful consideration has been accorded the Complainant's arguments and full accord is acknowleged with repect to the purposes to be achieved by the statutory enactment and the rules and regulations promulgated thereunder.

There is no disagreement with the underlying philosophy of the Complainant that the Government and industry wish to achieve the eradiction of brucellosis, and that the regulations should be enforced and implemented to that end.

The United States Department of Agriculture has spent millions of dollars annually, over many years, to implement and administer the brucellosis eradication program. In order for the Department to successfully control and eradicate brucellosis, it must have the cooperation and compliance of the livestock industry, such as buyers, sellers and stockyard owners.

The Department is seeking a civil penalty of $1,500.00 against Respondent, Billy Van Norman. Title 21 of the United States Code, section 122, provides for assessment of civil penalties for the violation of regulations published pursuant to authority granted to the Secretary of Agriculture in section 111 and 120 of Title 21 of the United States Code.

Title 21 of the United State Code, section 120, authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to "issue regulations governing the interstate transportation of animals from any place where communicable disease exists or where he may have reason to believe it exists." Penderson v. Benson, 255 F.2d 524 at 529 (D.C. Cir. 1958). The Secretary has issued such regulations governing the interstate transportation of cattle from herds not known to be affected with brucellosis from what the Department has classified as Class C States. Mississippi has been designated as such a Class C State.

Title 9 of the Code of Federal Regulations, section 78.9(d)(iii), requires that such cattle originating in a Class C State and moving interstate other than for immediate slaughter directly to a recognized slaughtering establishment or directly to a quarantined feedlot may be moved interstate only if, under the circumstances of the movement in question, the cattle have two consecutive negative official tests for brucellosis at least 60 days apart and within 30 days prior to such interstate movement, and the cattle are accompanied interstate by a certificate and a "Permit for Entry." Section 71.18 of the regulations (9 CFR section 71.18), requires that cattle, over two years of age, be accompanied by an owner's or shipper's statement, or another document containing prescribed information.

Specifically, 9 CFR section 78.9(d)(1) seeks to accomplish a monitoring aspect by the United States Department of Agriculture by requiring that cattle moving from other than a farm of origin or a nonquarantined feedlot, without, among other things, two brucellosis tests and various informational papers, move directly to a recognized slaughtering establishment. The Department of Agriculture, in enforcing this regulation, has not in this case construed 9 CFR section 78.9(d)(1) to permit the movement in question.

However, the Respondent in this particular case did not violate any rule or regulation. There is no regulation covering the definition of what is direct movement. The Government witnesses indicated that they would now interpret direct movement to preclude the unloading and reloading of cattle such as happened in this particular case. Both the Respondent and Mr. Minter, on behalf of the Mississippi Livestock Association, indicated that a definite rule or regulation is needed on this but that this is a prevalent practice in that part of the Country and, in their opinion, what occurred in this case was a direct movement of the cattle.

If there was a violation, and I don't believe that there was, the question of who violated this interpretation (of "direct" movement), would require a determination as to whether or not someone other than Respondent was not the one who would be in violation inasmuch as all that the Respondent did was to haul the cattle from one place to another and then leave them in a walkway alley.

Mr. Pigott, Compliance Oficer, must be presumed to be familiar with the customs and practices of the livestock industry in Mississippi, and supposedly would have known Respondent would not be hauling such a small load in excess of 400 miles to Palestine, Texas. Respondent indicated when he was stopped that he was hauling the cattle to Hatcher's (Tr. 27). Mr. Pigott's and his staff's determination was premised on it appearing, "* * * that by those cattle putting into the holding pen at Hatcher's Farm that that constituted a violation." (Tr. 32, 33). Mr. Pigott has never seen what was described as "holding pens." (Tr. 53). Neither he nor Dr. Garnett had seen Hatcher Dairy Farm's facilities.

Mr. Pigott's testimony illustrated instances where cattle could be offloaded unto an unloading dock. (Tr. 44, 45, 49). With respect to loading directly from a "gooseneck" onto a "double-deck," using some sort of ramp, Mr. Pigott indicated, "That would be an impossibility * * *" (Tr. 48) However, he would approve of walking animals off one truck down a ramp and walking them up a ramp to another truck. (Tr. 51). That is what the persuasive evidence shows happened here.

Further, Mr. Pigott acknowledged:

> "* * * And in certain instances where it's necessary that these smaller trucks load to the larger, we have tried to be reasonable and allow that movement to be made * * * *" (Tr. 58).

This case should not be regarded as "approving" the "gooseneck" to "18 wheeler" procedure and it certainly serves notice to Respondent that such proceure, as was used here, in the future, will not be interpreted and construed as "direct" movement. However, the Department has within its authority the capacity to issue and publish rules and regulations, which would preclude much of the subjectiveness present when both sides seek to establish what is "reasonable."

The most that the Complainant has proven is that there has been no regulation which the Respondent has violated, only its present interpretation; that this is a widespread practice in Mississippi (and possibly other areas); that the determination of what is direct movement, is a matter of interpretation; and, there are varying interpretations as to what is direct movement. The Complainant is seeking to establish an interpretation which is a change from the interpretation which has been applied in the past, and which has allowed the movement of cattle such as was present here.

Respondent argues that because, in its estimation, the manner in which the four cows were moved is reasonable and in accordance with the custom of the trade, it, too, must be accepted as a legitimate movement under section 78.9(d)(1). Complainant states that this argument goes too far, and cites, Lucas Coal Company, et al. v. Interior Board of Mine Operations Appeal, et al., 522 F.2d 581, 584 (C.A. 3rd Cir. 1975), where the court held that an "[a]gency's explication of its own regulation, if reasonable . . . is controlling despite existence of other interpretations that might seem even more reasonable. Also cited is Expedient Services, Inc. v. *Weaver,*614 F.2d 56, 57, fn. 1 (C.A. 5th Cir. 1980). Furthermore, the Complainant contends that the Respondent's contention forces upon the Department, which has the broader perspective and experience in eradicating this disease, a practice which is beneficial to but one segment of the nation's livestock owners, the livestock haulers in the State of Mississippi.

It is a common practice in the industry for a number of the smaller "gooseneck" trailers to converge at one spot, and for the cattle there to be loaded onto a larger vehicle for transport to the actual destination. Just such a routine practice was followed in this case. When Respondent arrived at the Hatcher Dairy Farm in Kentwood, an 18 wheeler "double-deck" truck awaited at the chute normally used by such trucks. Obviously, the Respondent was entitled to believe this truck to be the truck in which the cattle in question were to be loaded for delivery to Texas, and in fact, it apparently was. The Respondent unloaded the cattle in question in the alley walkway between pens at the Hatcher's facility.

Barns such as Hatcher's have alleys, which are walkways between pens, and pens, which are four walled enclosures with gates. To get from the "gooseneck" chute unto the "double-deck" truck, cattle simply had to be guided into the alley, around a turn and onto a ramp to the "double-deck." Of course, the alley could not be used to hold cattle for any period because this would interfere with the movement of other cattle in the alley.

The Respondent did not place any cattle in pens, rather he placed the cows in the alley and immediately left the premises after being paid $35.00 for his hauling fee. As the undisputed evidence shows, a "double-deck" truck was waiting at the Barn, so Respondent clearly was justified in believing that the four cattle were about to be loaded for transport to Palestine. This was especially so since there were personnel in the alley who could load the cattle, which clearly was not Respondent's job.

The Respondent had every reason to believe that the cattle in question were to be loaded presently onto a truck for transport to Texas. For all he knew the cattle would hardly stop walking on their way through the alley walkway to the other vehicle. This is significant because obviously the responsibility for seeing that the cattle continued in their "direct" movement would pass to others, after the Respondent parted with the cattle.

On Brief, Complainant suggests several ways direct movement can be accomplished and approved. However, some of these suggestions are not bottomed by careful study, revealed in this hearing record, and some of the witnesses have indicated such alternative methods are not feasible and practical.

For instance, Complainant suggests that in order for this movement to have been directly to a recognized slaughtering establishment, the transfer to another truck would have had to have been accomplished in one of three manners: Firstly, the truck carrying the cows could have backed up to another truck where the cows could have been transferred to the second truck, and a loading ramp could be utilized where the cows could be unloaded and made to walk up the ramp to the decks of the second truck; Secondly, the cows could have been held at the Sale Barn in Mississippi, and a truck could have picked them up on its way to the other recognized slaughtering establishment and that under this alternative, although the movement did not go directly to a recognized slaughtering establishment after leaving the Sale Barn, the program makes allowances for cows to be picked up at other markets along the way to the slaughtering estblishment so long as no animal, once picked up, was unloaded until the truck reached the recognized slaughtering establishment; and, finally, it is said the transfer from one truck to another truck could have been accomplished by unloading the cows into pens at an approved facility, such as a quarantined feedlot.

The Complainant argues that its interpretation of the regulations as to what is direct movement should be adopted because of the large amount of money, and effort, which the Department of Agriculture has expended with respect to the eradication of brucellosis. However, this interpretation, including the alternatives set forth above, which is presently being urged by the Complainant, is not set forth in the regulations themselves. Also, there is persuasive testimony of record, that the practice engaged in by the Respondent was an accepted and widespread practice in the State of Mississippi. To the extent the presently urged subjective interpretation, or, the alternative methods which are indicated, on Brief, are set forth in published and known regulations and rules, they, of course, should be adhered to and complied with.

It was brought out through testimony that there is nothing in the regulations which specifically prohibit loading and unloading of cattle when they are involved in a shipment to slaughter. A general consensus of opinion of the witnesses was that the person who was the owner of the land, or, the person in charge of the large truck was responsible for what happened to the animals after they were unloaded from the "gooseneck."

In the absence of any clear violation of the regulations in question, and recognizing that the Government has the burden of proof, it would be unjust to say that this Respondent violated the regulations which can, and have been, interpreted differently than that now put forth by the Complainant. Moreover, the regulations are silent as to what constitutes direct movement. Based on a consideration of the record as a whole, including weighty credence given to the testimony of Respondent and Mr. Minter, it is concluded that the Government has not borne its burden of proof in establishing a violation.

The many other arguments, contentions, and requests of the parties have been considered carefully. To the extent not ruled upon and to the extent, if any, they may be inconsistent with this Decision and Order, they are hereby denied.

ORDER

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This proceeding was instituted by a complaint by the Administrator, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, which alleged that Kenneth Burdette and James Burdette violated the Act of February 2, 1903, as amended, (21 U.S.C. § 111 and § 120), and the regulations thereunder (9 C.F.R. § 71.1 et seq and § 78.1 et seq.), by moving cattle interstate without the documents required for the control of brucellosis, an infectious and communicable disease of cattle. An answer was thereafter filed on behalf of both respondents on June 10, 1985 by Kent O. Hyde, a member of the Missouri Bar.

On October 21, 1985, an oral hearing was scheduled to take place in Springfield, Missouri, on November 19, 1985. Pursuant to a request by respondents' counsel for an alternative hearing date due to a conflict in his schedule, a Notice of Rescheduled Hearing was issued on November 1, 1985, scheduling the hearing to begin on January 22, 1986, in the Green County Courthouse Annex, 833 Boonville, Springfield, Missouri.

The oral hearing was thereafter held as scheduled on January 22, 1986. Mr. Kent O. Hyde, the attorney for both respondents, appeared at that time and presented a consent decree on behalf of respondent Kenneth Burdette, which was accepted for filing and issued on that day. Mr. Hyde advised that he had notified Mr. James Burdette by letter of the scheduled hearing date, but that James Burdette was not present and Mr. Hyde was unable to secure his presence. Mr. Hyde moved that his appearance as counsel be withdrawn. That motion was granted and the hearing was thereafter held as scheduled.

On the basis of the testimony that was transcribed that day and the exhibits that were received, the following findings and conclusions are herewith being entered.

Mr. James Burdette is being assessed the maximum civil penalty of $3,000 for the three violations of the Act of February 2, 1903, as amended, which were proved by the evidence of record.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. James Burdette, respondent, is an individual whose last known address is Route 1, Pleasant Hope, Missouri 65725.

2. Brucellosis is an infectious, contagious, and communicable disease of cattle, which also affects humans and is known in humans as undulant fever.

3. The regulations in Title 9, Code of Federal Regulations, Part 71.1 et seq., and part 78.1 et seq., are an integral and significant part of the Federal-State cooperative efforts to control and eradicate brucellosis.

4.The cattle identified below as 43 BE 3343, 43 BE 3422, 43 BE 3520, and 43 BE 3344 were non-vaccinates, 2 years of age or over.

5. The cattle identified below as 43 BE 3390 was a calfhood vaccinate, 2 years of age or over.

6. On or about July 11, 1984, the respondent moved interstate from Missouri to Texas, at least five cattle, identified as 43 BE 3343, 43 BE 3422, 43 BE 3520, 43 BE 3344, and 43 BE 3390, in violation of section 71.18 of the regulations (9 CFR § 71.18), because a statement signed by the owner or shipper of the cattle, or other document, did not accompany the cattle, as required.

7. On or about July 11, 1984, the respondent moved interstate from Missouri to Texas, at least five cattle, identified as 43 BE 3343, 43 BE 3422, 43 BE 3520, 43 BE 3344, and 43 BE 3390, in violation of section 78.9(c) of the regulations (9 CFR § 78.9(c)), because the cattle were not accompanied by a certificate, as required.

8. On or about July 11, 1984, the respondent moved interstate from Missouri to Texas, at least five cattle, identified as 43 BE 3343, 43 BE 3422, 43 BE 3520, 43 BE 3344, and 43 BE 3390, in violation of section 78.9(c) of the regulations (9 CFR § 78.9(c)) because the cattle were not accompanied by a "Permit for Entry", as required.

9. The July 11, 1984 violations were detected during an inspection of a truck driven by respondent which contained over 40 cattle. When confronted by the government inspector, respondent, James Burdette, gave false and misleading information respecting his movement of the cattle and the reasons why he did not have the required documents.

CONCLUSIONS

On July 11, 1984, respondent James Burdette committed three separate violations of the Act of February 2, 1903, as amended, (21 U.S.C. § 111 and § 120) and the regulations thereunder (9 C.F.R. § 78.9(c)), for which he should be assessed the maximum civil penalty of $1,000 per violation or $3,000 total.

ORDER

Respondent James Burdette is assessed a civil penalty of $3,000 (three thousand dollars), which shall be made payable to the "Treasurer of the United States" by certified check or money order, and it shall be forwarded to Kris H. Ikejiri, Office of the General Counsel, Room 2422-South Building, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. 20250, within thirty (30) days from the effective date of this Decision and Order. This Order shall take effect on the 11th day after this Decision becomes final.

Pursuant to the Rules of Practice governing proceedings under the Act, this Decision shall become final without further proceedings thirty-five (35) days after service hereof, unless appealed to the Secretary by a party to the proceedings within thirty (30) days after service pursuant to sections 1.139 and 1.145 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 1.139).

Copies hereof shall be served upon the parties.

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This proceeding was instituted under the Swine Health Protection Act (Act) (7 U.S.C. § 3801 et seq.), by a Complaint issued by the Administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, United States Department of Agriculture. The Complaint was filed with the Hearing Clerk on October 18, 1985. The Complaint alleged that Respondent violated section 4 of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 3803) and section 166.2 of the regulations promulgated thereunder (9 CFR § 166.2).

Copies of the complaint and the Rules of Practice governing proceedings under the Act were served by the Hearing Clerk, by certified mail, upon respondent on October 28, 1985.

Pursuant to section 1.136 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.136) applicable to this proceeding, Respondent was informed in the Complaint and the letter of service that an Answer should be filed with the Hearing Clerk within twenty (20) days after service of the Complaint, and that failure to file an answer either denying or otherwise responding to the allegations in the Complaint and requesting an oral hearing would constitute an admission of such allegations and a waiver of such hearing. On November 21, 1995, Respondent was sent, by regular mail, a notice that his Answer had not been received by the Hearing Clerk in the allotted time. More than twenty (20) days have elapsed since Respondent was served with the Complaint in question. Respondent has not filed an answer to date. This Decision and Order, therefore, is issued pursuant to sections 1.136 and 1.139 of the Rules of Practice applicable to this proceeding (7 CFR §§ 1.136 and 1.139).

3. On or about February 4, 1995, the respondent fed garbage to swine, in violation of section 4 of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 3803) and section 166.2 of the regulations (9 CFR § 166.2), because the garbage was not treated, as required.

In re: ROSIA LEE ENNES. AWA Docket No. 269. Decided March 3, 1986.

Sale of animals without obtaining dealer license—Penalty

The Judicial Officer reversed Judge Baker's order, which assessed a suspended $200 civil penalty against respondent for selling dogs in commerce without a license. The Judicial Officer assessed a penalty of $1,000. Civil penalties under the Act must be based on the size of the business, gravity of the violation, the person's good faith, and previous violations. Operating without a license strikes at the heart of the regulatory program. A moderate-sized facility is assessed a more modest penalty than a large-sized facility. Although the Judicial Officer gives great weight to findings of ALJ's because they have the opportunity to see and hear the witnesses testify, the ALJ's finding that respondent did not know that she could not sell her dogs without a license during the period her license application was pending is set aside as "hopelessly incredible." Although there were no previous violations, the numerous violations here warrant a severe sanction.

Dorothea A. Baker, Administrative Law Judge.
Donald Tracy, for complainant.
For respondent, pro se.

Decision by Donald A. Campbell, Judicial Officer.

DECISION AND ORDER

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Animal Welfare Act, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 2131 et seq.), and the regulations and standards issued thereunder (9 CFR § 1.1 et seq.). On October 11, 1985, Administrative Law Judge Dorothea A. Baker (ALJ) issued an initial Decision and Order directing respondent to cease and desist from selling dogs in commerce without a license and violating the Act and regulations, and assessing a suspended civil penalty of $200.

On November 18, 1985, complainant, seeking a $1,000 civil penalty (with no more than half suspended), appealed to the Judicial Officer, to whom final administrative authority has been delegated to decide the Department's cases subject to 5 U.S.C. §§ 556 and 557 (7 CFR § 2.35).[1] The case was referred to the Judicial Officer for decision on December 21, 1985.

Based on a careful consideration of the entire record in this case, I am assessing a civil penalty of $1,000. The preliminary statement and findings of fact are taken from the ALJ's initial decision, except that Findings 8, 10, 11, 15, 17, 18, and 20 are omitted, and one sentence in Finding 19 is omitted. Additional findings and conclusions by the Judicial Officer follow the ALJ's preliminary statement and findings.

[1] The position of Judicial Officer was established pursuant to the Act of April 4, 1940 (7 U.S.C. §§ 450c-450g), and Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1953, 18 Fed. Reg. 3219 (1953), reprinted in 5 U.S.C. app. at 1068 (1982). The Department's present Judicial Officer was appointed in January 1971, having been involved with the Department's regulatory programs since 1949 (including 3 years' trial litigation; 10 years' appellate litigation relating to appeals from the decisions of the prior Judicial Officer; and 8 years as administrator of the Packers and Stockyards Act regulatory program).

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE'S PRELIMINARY STATEMENT AND FINDINGS

This is an administrative proceeding initiated by a Complaint filed September 14, 1983, wherein the Respondent was charged with having violated the Regulations and Standards (9 CFR 1.1, et seq.) issued pursuant to the Animal Welfare Act, as amended (7 U.S.C. 2131, et seq.), hereinafter sometimes referred to as the Act. The Complaint herein avers that the Respondent at all times material herein was unlicensed but was operating as a "dealer" as that term is defined in section 2(f) of the Act (7 U.S.C. 2132(f)).

The Complaint further alleges that between January 1980 and April 1983 Respondent on numerous occasions, for compensation, sold and offered for transportation in commerce, a total of 383 dogs, without being licensed as a dealer as required by section 4 of the Act (7 U.S.C. 2134). It is further alleged that on the dates of November 10, 1979, May 23, 1980, and April 23, 1981, Respondent's facilities were inspected by Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service personnel as a prerequisite for obtaining a license and that on each such occasion Respondent was notified "that deficiencies existed which would preclude licensing."

In its Complaint, the Complainant seeks a sanction of a Cease and Desist Order and the imposition of a monetary penalty of $2500.00, which on brief, it reduces to $1000.00.

An oral hearing was held on May 23, 1985, in Cassville, Missouri, before Administrative Law Judge Dorothea A. Baker. At that time the Complainant was represented by Gary C. Shockley, Esquire, Office of the General Counsel, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. 20250-1400, and the Respondent appeared pro se. The parties were given the opportunity to file Briefs herein. The Complainant filed its Brief on June 21, 1985, and Respondent, on July 22, 1985. Complainant filed no Reply Brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Rosia Lee Ennes, hereinafter sometimes referred to as the Respondent, is an individual whose post office address is Route 2, Box 2001, Seligman, Missouri 65745.

2. Respondent became licensed as a dealer under the Animal Welfare Act for the first time on October 12, 1983.

3. The evidence establishes that between January 1980 and April 1983, Respondent, on numerous occasions, for compensation, sold and offered for transportation in commerce between 300 and 400 dogs, without being licensed as a dealer as required by section 4 of the Animal Welfare Act (7 U.S.C. section 2134).

4. Commencing in October 1979 the Respondent sought to obtain a license and filled out an application form therefor together with the help of a friend, Mr. Hughes, whose qualifications are set forth hereinafter, which application the Respondent testified was sent into the Department of Agriculture. However, the Respondent later was advised that it was never received.

5. The Complainant maintains that on November 10, 1979, May 23, 1980, April 23, 1981, June 3, 1983, and August 16, 1983, Respondent's facilities were inspected by Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service personnel, as a prerequisite for obtaining a license. The Complainant maintains and the evidence does show that the Respondent was advised during each of these inspections that deficiencies existed that precluded licensing.

6. The Complainant's evidence shows that during the period January 1980 through April 1983, without being licensed, the Respondent sold approximately 380 dogs, representing a gross remuneration of $17,882.40 from the sale of such dogs.

7. However, this represents a gross amount and does not include the expenses which would have been incurred in association therewith. For instance, one of the witnesses testified that probably for the most part expenses would have consumed the greater part of the $17,000.00, as well as having consumed, by way of costs of doing business, the greater part of $4,000.00, representing gross income from Respondent's business year 1983–84.

8. [Omitted.]

9. After Respondent was advised that her first application was not received, again, with the help of Mr. Hughes, the Respondent submitted a second license application. Thereafter, a number of inspections occurred, referred to as prelicensing inspections, during which time the inspectors found alleged deficiencies in the Respondent's facility. The first inspection occurred on October 10, 1979, and was performed by Mr. Boyd. It was indicated thereon that: "Will re-inspect in 60 days." The next inspection occurred on May 23, 1980, at which time the inspection report referred to "license pending." This inspection was performed by Mr. Sparkman. The next inspection after that did not occur until April 23, 1981, and this was performed by Mr. Sparkman. Included in that inspection report (Complainant's Exhibit No. 16) is the statement: "Violation procedures recommended." Thereafter, the Respondent's facility was inspected on June 3, 1983, by Mr. Greenwood. On that inspection report where it asks for the date of the last inspection the word "NONE" is written. A further inspection took place of August 16, 1983, by Mr. Sparkman, at which time Respondent's facility was recommended for license.

10. [Omitted.]

12. The evidence shows that at a time when she was unlicensed the Respondent did sell in commerce 383 dogs.

13. The evidence further shows that the Respondent made a good faith effort to obtain a license. The Respondent did not have the ability to understand what was required on the licensing form and sought out and obtained the advice of an experienced and professional puppy broker, Mr. Hughes. He assisted the Respondent. His testimony indicates that he was well acquainted with the Respondent; that he was aware of the difficulties which she was having with the alleged deficiencies; that he believed the dogs or puppies which he obtained from her facility were among the most healthy and well-kept puppies that he knew of; that the Respondent kept very good records; and that he believed that much of the difficulty in this case could have been precluded had different judgmental factors been obtained.

14. A most credible witness, and one who was called by the Complainant, was Mr. James C. Hughes, a wholesale Puppy Broker for approximately 30 years and who sold dogs as a wholesale broker throughout the United States, Canada and Puerto Rico. He had known the Respondent for approximately 15 years. Mr. Hughes was the current Vice President of the Mid-West Professional Pet Distributors Incorporated, headquartered in Kansas City. Said organization is a nation-wide organization of breeders and brokers across the nation. Mr. Hughes was on the Board of Directors and he was a past President. Mr. Hughes has been regarded by the Judge as a most credible witness and his testimony reflects experience and knowledge in the area of breeding and selling puppies. He testified with respect to the next to the last inspection, where the alleged deficiency related to the fact that one of the little puppies had chewed a corner of his holding box and that the corner did not have the proper paint or varnish on it. It was Mr. Hughes' opinion that this was a minuscule deficiency and was simply something that, if it had to be remedied, could easily have been corrected.

15. [Omitted.]

16. The Government adduced three witnesses whose testimony related to the alleged lack of personnel and resources in order to carry out their functions and the alleged difficulty which the Department was having with the State of Missouri, particularly the southeastern section with respect to unlicensed dealers.

17. [Omitted.]

18. [Omitted.]

19. The selling in commerce of the 380 puppies from January 1980 through April 1983 was a violation of the Act. . . .

20. [Omitted.]

ADDITIONAL FINDINGS OF FACT BY THE JUDICIAL OFFICER

21. On May 23, 1980, Mr. Sparkman, one of complainant's animal health technicians, found deficiencies in respondent's facilities which precluded licensing. He discussed the deficiencies with her and told her that she should not sell dogs wholesale until she was licensed. He told her to contact him for a reinspection when the deficiencies were corrected, but she failed to do so. (Tr. 83–85; CX 15)

22. On April 23, 1981, Mr. Sparkman returned to respondent's premises on his own initiative. Respondent advised him that deficiences still existed and would not permit him to make an inspection. Mr. Sparkman advised respondent that charges might be initiated against her for not permitting the inspection, and because she was selling animals without a license. He again advised her not to sell animals wholesale, and told her to contact him when the deficiencies were corrected. Respondent failed to contact Mr. Sparkman. (Tr. 85–87; CX 16).

23. On July 1, 1981, respondent was interviewed by Mr. McFather, one of complainant's compliance officers. He warned her not to make any further wholesale sales without a dealer's license. (Tr. 27–28, 64, 67, 77; CX 13B)

24. On June 3, 1983, Dr. Greenwood, Mr. Sparkman's supervisor, inspected respondent's facilities and found deficiencies that precluded licensing (Tr. 88–90; CX 17).

25. On August 16, 1983, Mr. Sparkman again inspected respondent's facilities and found a deficiency that precluded licensing. He again told her not to sell wholesale until she was licensed, and requested her to contact him when the deficiency was corrected. (Tr. 91–92; CX 18)

26. Shortly after the August 16, 1983, inspection, respondent contacted Mr. Sparkman to obtain a reinspection. He inspected the facility on September 27, 1983, and approved it for licensing. (Tr. 91–92; CX 19)

CONCLUSIONS BY THE JUDICIAL OFFICER

The undisputed evidence shows that respondent acted as a dealer between January 1980 and April 1983, as charged in the complaint. The Act defines the term dealer as follows (7 U.S.C. § 2132(f)):

> (f) The term "dealer" means any person who, in commerce, for compensation or profit, delivers for transportation, or transports, except as a carrier, buys, or sells, or negotiates the purchase or sale of, (1) any dog or other animal whether alive or dead for research, teaching, exhibition, or use as a pet, or (2) any dog for hunting, security, or breeding purposes, except that this term does not include—
>
> > (i) a retail pet store except such store which sells any animals to a research facility, an exhibitor, or a dealer; or
> > (ii) any person who does not sell, or negotiate the purchase or sale of any wild animal, dog, or cat, and who derives no more than $500 gross income from the sale of other animals during any calendar year.

It is unlawful to act as a dealer without a license from the Secretary. Specifically, the Act provides (7 U.S.C. § 2134):

> § 2134. Valid license for dealers and exhibitors required
> No dealer or exhibitor shall sell or offer to sell or transport or offer for transportation, in commerce, to any research facility or for exhibition or for use as a pet any animal, or buy, sell, offer to buy or sell, transport or offer for transportation, in commerce, to or from another dealer or exhibitor under this chapter any animals, unless and until such dealer or exhibitor shall have obtained a license from the Secretary and such license shall not have been suspended or revoked.

The Act authorizes the Secretary to assess a civil penalty of $1,000 for each violation. The Act provides (7 U.S.C. § 2149(b)):

> (b) Civil penalties for violation of any section, etc.; separate offenses; notice and hearing; appeal; considerations in assessing penalty; compromise of penalty; civil action by Attorney General for failure to pay penalty; district court jurisdiction; failure to obey cease and desist order

> Any dealer . . . that violates any provision of this chapter, or any rule, regulation, or standard promulgated by the Secretary thereunder, may be assessed a civil penalty by the Secretary of not more than $1,000 for each such violation, and the Secretary may also make an order that such person shall cease and desist from continuing such violation. Each violation and each day during which violation continues shall be a separate offense. . . . The Secretary shall give due consideration to the appropriateness of the penalty with respect to the size of the business of the person involved, the gravity of the violation, the person's good faith, and the history of previous violations. Any such civil penalty may be compromised by the Secretary.

With respect to the first criterion specified by the Act, viz., "the size of the business of the person involved," respondent keeps about 30 to 35 dogs in her kennel, which is a "moderate-sized facility" (Tr. 95). Accordingly, a more modest civil penalty is appropriate than would be assessed against a large-sized facility.

With respect to the second criterion, "the gravity of the violation," the record here shows that respondent made hundreds of sales without a license over a 40-month period, in violation of the Act. The violations proved in this case, operating as a dealer without a license, strike at the very heart of the regulatory program mandated by Congress in the Animal Welfare Act. See H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 1848, 89th Cong., 2d Sess., reprinted in 1966 U.S. Code Cong. Ad. News 2635, 2649. If unlicensed dealers were allowed to operate without fear of serious consequences, the regulatory program could not long survive. The number of sales and extended period of the violations are further aggravating factors. Respondent was licensed as soon as she demonstrated compliance; her unlicensed sales prior to that time constitute grave violations of the Animal Welfare Act that warrant a more severe sanction than that requested by complainant.

The third factor to be considered is respondent's "good faith." Although respondent presented her efforts to obtain a license as a mitigating factor, her efforts in fact demonstrate her knowledge of the requirements of the Act.

The ALJ found that respondent did not know that she could not sell her dogs during the period her license application was pending. Specifically, the ALJ found (Initial Decision at 4, 8, 9):

> 8. Although the Complainant maintains that the Respondent was warned in April of 1980 and July of 1981, the Respondent denies this and was under the belief that she could continue operating while her application for license was pending. The Respondent indicated that the first notice which she received and which she understood was in 1983 and that thereafter from May 1983 she did not sell any puppies until the time she became licensed.

* * * * * * *

15. Respondent denies she was given "warnings"—her belief was that each time an inspector came, she would have additional things to correct. And, in her Brief she contests the fact that Inspector McFather ever talked to her on the occasion to which he testified. He may have talked to her daughter.

Based upon an evaluation of the entire record herein, the most persuasive evidence is to the effect that Mr. Danny McFather, Compliance Officer, who allegedly made an inspection of her facility on July 1, 1981, did not give her the warnings, or explanations, as contended by the Complainant. The Respondent refutes on Brief and at the hearing (Tr. 54, 74) that she ever saw this inspector on July 1, 1981. Also, the witness's (Mr. McFather) recollection concerning this alleged inspection was premised solely upon his interview log which he had reviewed the morning of the hearing. He possessed no independent recollection of the inspection nor any of the details relating to same. Although the witness was given to testifying as to what "standard procedure" was involved, nevertheless, his uncertainty relative to this inspection gives credence to the contention of the Respondent that she did not see nor talk to Mr. McFather on July 1, 1981.

17. Although there is conflicting testimony as to what the various inspectors told Mrs. Ennes, the more persuasive evidence and based upon her credibility I am finding that she either was not told or she did not understand that while her license was pending she could not sell dogs. Mrs. Ennes testified, and I believe her, that she was under the impression that inasmuch as she had a license pending she could sell the dogs as long as she was making an effort to bring her facility up to the standards required by the inspectors.

18. Furthermore, Mr. Hughes corroborated her understanding of the situation.

It is the consistent practice of the Judicial Officer to give great weight to the findings by Administrative Law Judges since they have the opportunity to see and hear the witnesses testify.[2] However, findings of fact, even when based on the ALJ's determination as to the credibility of witnesses, may be set aside if they are "hopelessly incredible." Fairbank v. Hardin, 429 F.2d 264, 268 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 943 (1970). In the present case, I find the ALJ's findings that respondent did not know that she was violating the law by selling dogs wholesale while her license application was pending "hopelessly incredible."

Mr. Sparkman, one of complainant's animal health technicians who inspected respondent's facilities, testified that he told respondent on three occasions that she could not sell animals wholesale until she received her license. Mr. Sparkman testified with respect to his May 23, 1980, inspection (Tr. 84–85):

> Q. Did you have occasion on that visit to discuss licensing requirements with Mrs. Ennes?
>
> A. Yes, I did. I indicated to her the need for her to correct these deficiencies and that in order to be licensed she would need to correct those, and I mentioned to her that she should not sell wholesale until she was licensed.

Mr. Sparkman further testified with respect to his attempt to inspect respondent's facilities on April 23, 1981 (Tr. 86–88):

> The WITNESS: . . . And [I] also mentioned to her that possibly violation charges might be initiated because she wouldn't allow me to make the inspection and because she was selling animals.
>
> Q. Now, Mr. Sparkman, when you left after your visit of April 23, 1981, again sir, what was your understanding with Mrs. Ennes about when you would be back?

[2] E.g., In re King Meat Packing Co., 40 Agric. Dec. 552, 553 (1981); In re Thornton, 38 Agric. Dec. 1425, 1426–28 (remand order), final decision, 38 Agric. Dec. 1539 (1979) (affirming Judge Baker's dismissal of complaint where she accepted the testimony of respondent's wife, respondent's employee, and respondent's "real good friend" over that of three disinterested USDA veterinarians); In re Unionville Sales Co., 38 Agric. Dec. 1207, 1208–09 (1979) (remand order); In re National Beef Packing Co., 36 Agric. Dec. 1722, 1736 (1977), aff'd, 605 F.2d (10th Cir. 1979).

A. I told her again that she should not sell wholesale and if she got it, even at that point, if she got it in compliance that she could contact me, she should contact me.

Mr. Sparkman testified with respect to his inspection of respondent's facilities on August 16, 1983 (Tr. 92):

A. She had another deficiency, as indicated on the report. I indicated that when she corrected this and if there wasn't no other deficiencies on a return trip, that we could license her and that she still should not sell wholesale until she was licensed. And to my knowledge, she understood that.

In addition, Mr. McFather, a Compliance Officer for complainant, testified that he interviewed respondent on July 1, 1981, and warned her not to make any further wholesale sales without a dealer's license. He testified (Tr. 27-28, 64, 67, 77):

Q. And what did you do when you visited Mrs. Ennes in 1981?

A. Well, when I first arrived, I introduced myself, I informed Mrs. Ennes as to the nature of my visit and I explained to her her rights under the Miranda Rule.

Q. Was it customary to give Miranda Warnings at that time?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. And, then, what did you discuss with Mrs. Ennes?

A. Her sales of dogs.

Q. Did you discuss with her the requirements of the Animal Welfare Act in any way?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Did you discuss the licensing requirements with her?

A. I did.

Q. Was Mrs. Ennes aware of these requirements, or was this the first time she'd heard of it?

A. She told me that she was aware that she was required to have a license, a dealer's license, to sell dogs wholesale.

* * * * * * *

The WITNESS: Again, I have to go by what would be standard procedure and what I have written on my interview log.

Judge BAKER: Do you have any independent recollection of what occurred?

The WITNESS: I do remember going there and discussing with Miss Ennes her sales, warning her against not making any further sales.

* * * * * * * *

The WITNESS: As I left Mrs. Ennes' residence, I drove down the road just a short distance and I stopped and recorded the information which was later typed on an interview log, which I signed.

* * * * * * *

Judge BAKER: Do you have any other questions, Mrs. Ennes?

Mrs. ENNES: I don't guess. I just never talked to him.

The WITNESS: Your Honor?

Judge BAKER: Mr. McFather?

The WITNESS: I'd like to make a comment that more than likely at the time I was there, I was wearing a cap and also I may not have had a mustache at that time.

Judge BAKER: Could you borrow somebody's cap? Did you recognize Mrs. Ennes, Mr. McFather?

The WITNESS: Yes, I did.

Mr. McFather's interview log, which was referred to in his testimony, states (CX 13B):

After identifying myself and stating the nature of my visit, I explained to Mrs. Ennes her rights under the Miranda Rule. Mrs. Ennes stated she sold puppies to individuals and did not know what they did with them nor was it her concern. She did know that selling dogs wholesale without a dealer's license was a violation of the Animal Welfare Act and regulations. Her breeding stock consisted of approximately 30 bitches and several males. She would like to have her kennel licensed but could not afford to fix it up to meet the requirements.

The ALJ's view as to respondent's lack of knowledge would be destroyed if she received and understood any one of the four warnings referred to by Mr. Sparkman and Mr. McFather. The evidence set forth above comes from two disinterested government employees who would have no apparent motive for giving false testimony. Respondent, on the other hand, had a clear motive for being less than candid. Moreover, her testimony as to her lack of knowledge, when carefully analyzed, is quite weak. It strongly suggests that she knew that it was unlawful to sell dogs without a license to a wholesale broker, but she did not believe that complainant would bother to prosecute her for violations while her license application was pending. Specifically, she testified (Tr. 155-61, 170; emphasis added):

Q. Did you make any calls to inquire about the status of your license?

A. No, I sure didn't. As far as me making no calls, no, I didn't. I took it as, when I filled it out, they would come back and inspect me. Maybe I didn't understand. Just like Sparkman, I thought as long as I was trying to do these things that they told me to do, I didn't know that I would be prosecuted if I would go ahead and sell my dogs.

Because I told him, and he will verify it, that I told him that was the only way I had of doing this work on this. I'd sell some puppies. Then I would proceed to go on with—my money went right back into them.

* * * * * * *

. . . But then, like I said, in May of '83, May the 3rd of 1983. I have the letter. And here is the letter. They notified me—you can read the letter—that I had been selling without a license, and if I continued to sell the dogs without the license, I would be prosecuted. That was the first that I knew that I would be prosecuted, was May the 5th of 19 and 83.

* * * * * * *

The WITNESS: . . . They sent me some literature [in May 1983]. Well, it was a book, a couple of books came with this altogether. And it was certified. I signed for it. It was a certified letter. And that is the first I knew that I would be prosecuted and then I didn't sell no more. . . .

But I still didn't get this until '83. And that's the first time I knew—I thought as long as I was working on my kennel—that was what I was led to believe. As long as I was doing and trying to do, that I could go ahead and sell. And I had to do the kennel as my money permitted. I mean, I had no other choice or else—and there was no way I could feed the dogs.

Q. (By Judge Baker) Did Mr. Boyd know that you were selling dogs?

A. Yes. I told him I was.

Q. Did Mr. Sparkman know you were selling dogs?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Greenwood know you were selling dogs?

A. Yes, I told them. They asked me who I was selling to and I told them. I told them I was selling to Jim Hughes, except a few that I have—I still sell a few out the door, if somebody calls me. I don't advertise for them but if they do, if I don't have the puppy booked, I will sell it out the door. In fact, I probably could sell more of them out the door if I had advertised them but I didn't. I didn't feel like anything I was doing was wrong.

Q. Do you want to continue?

A. Well, other than that, that is all I know. And after I got this letter, then I didn't sell no more puppies. I just quit breeding them until I could go ahead and get my license. . . .

* * * * * * *

And then in September is when I got this deal here that I was being prosecuted. After, in May. And here it is.

Q. And you are referring to the Complaint?

A. Yes, that is the first letter I got. And that is the first thing. This letter here is the first thing I got that I would be prosecuted. The first citation or anything that anybody told me. I thought as long as I was fixing my kennel, that it was O.K. They didn't tell me that I would be prosecuted if I would had sold those puppies.

If I wasn't fixing my kennel, you know. But I thought as long as I was doing like they told me to do—

* * * * * * *

Judge BAKER: Is there anything else you would like to present in this case in this matter?

Ms. ENNES: No. I do know I asked Mr. Sparkman about selling puppies out the door if I didn't have a license, at the time I got this letter [in May 1983]. And, you know, if I could sell them out the door. And he said I could. From my house, you know. And that is the only way I had to sell them. And he told me that it was O.K to do that. But I just couldn't sell them to a broker until I got my license. That was after I got this letter.

Although respondent did, at times, state that she thought that it was alright to sell dogs without a license, she stated more frequently that she thought she would not be prosecuted for selling dogs without a license. The ALJ found that respondent's testimony was corroborated by Mr. Hughes. But it is only this latter aspect of her testimony, in this respect, that was corroborated by Mr. Hughes—viz., that she thought she would not be prosecuted for selling dogs without a license while her license application was pending. Specifically, Mr. Hughes testified (Tr. 21–23, 128, 136; emphasis added):

The WITNESS: . . . I think she's an honest and forthright woman that wouldn't purposely violate the law. I think that she has been somewhat misled to the fact that people all around her are doing the same thing she has done and there's a laxity in Animal Welfare for licensing people, so it led her into a false sense of security, you might say, that nothing was going to happen about this.

At the time she realized the seriousness of it, she started trying to get a license [in 1979]. At the time she applied for a license, when they come out and inspected her, she tried to clean up her kennel as well as possible. The Department didn't come back to re-examine her at the time they were supposed to and the things that she had done had deteriorated over a nine or ten-month period until she had to do it over again. It just was a comedy of errors, you might say, in this thing, that had the Department re-inspected her the way they have other people, she would have got the license many years ago.

* * * * * * *

Judge BAKER: Very well. Mr. Hughes, you have an opinion as to the desire or the manifestation of the Respondent, Mrs. Ennes' desire to comply with the law? Do you believe that she wishes to comply with the law, if she knows what it is?

The WITNESS: Yes, I really do. In fact, she has complied with the law now in the past year. And in defense of Mrs. Ennes, in all the time she was not licensed, her facility was usually equal to that of other ones that I visited that were licensed. She would have minor discrepancies in different places. But she's an honest woman, I believe.

* * * * * * *

It is kind of customary with most breeders when they apply for this license, that as long as they are working on it, these sort of actions are not instigated. And I probably was somewhat at fault in giving her false advice because I told her as long as she continued to try to cooperate that this action would not be initiated against her.

There were several other people that this same action was initiated again, one being June Parks, which you had a check mixed in with her stuff today. But several of these people that action could have been initiated against, were not once they applied for a license past, and received their license.

* * * * * * *

. . . This lady has not tried to avoid the Laws. She has been there since 1979, trying to get a license.

Our contention is that had the inspections been done at the time that they should have been done, she would have been in compliance. And they weren't done until 7–8–9–10 months later. At which time, the paints and the cleanup, and the cutting the weeds and fixing the wire, had deteriorated again.

Considering all of the evidence in this case, I find the ALJ's findings that respondent did not know that it was unlawful to sell dogs without a license while her license application was pending "hopelessly incredible." I infer that she was fully aware of the requirements of the Act, and that she knowingly and intentionally continued to violate the Act by selling dogs wholesale without a license on the mistaken belief that the Department would not "prosecute" her for such violations. Accordingly, her violations were not committed in good faith but, rather, were knowingly and intentionally committed in violation of the Animal Welfare Act.

Mr. Hughes' view that respondent's facilities would have been approved much earlier if the inspections had occurred before conditions "deteriorated again" (Tr. 136) is not a mitigating circumstance. The delay in the inspections was caused by respondent's failure to contact Mr. Sparkman, as he repeatedly told her to do (Findings 21–26). Furthermore, the purpose of a pre-license inspection is to determine if an applicant can maintain minimal standards of cleanliness at all times; not whether on one day the place can be clean. Respondent's argument that "the paints and the cleanup, and the cutting the weeds and fixing the wire, had deteriorated again" (ALJ's Decision at 5) is an admission that she was properly not licensed, not a mitigating factor. (The situation may have been different if respondent ceased operations because she could not get a license and therefore her facility deteriorated; but, on the contrary, respondent continued to operate and sell dogs without a license in violation of the Act.)

The last of the criteria to be considered is the "history of previous violations." Although there were no previous violations, the hundreds of violations proven here are enough in themselves to warrant a severe sanction.

Considering the statutory criteria for determining sanctions under the Animal Welfare Act, a civil penalty of $2,500, as originally requested in the complaint, would have been very modest for the hundreds of deliberate and serious violations involved here. Complainant's recommendation after the hearing for a civil penalty of only $1,000 is too modest, and complainant's latest recommendation on appeal (interposing no objection to suspension of half of a $1,000 civil penalty based on respondent's ability to pay) is far too modest to be acceptable.[3] However, in deference to the administrative recommendation, I will assess a civil penalty of only $1,000 in [3] The statute permits the Secretary to compromise the civil penalty if respondent cannot afford to pay it (7 U.S.C. § 2149(b)). Accordingly, there is no need to take ability to pay into consideration when assessing the civil penalty.

this case, although a greater civil penalty would have been assessed if complainant had so requested.[4]

For the foregoing reasons, the following order should be issued.

ORDER

Respondent is assessed a civil penalty of $1,000, which shall be paid not later than the 90th day after service of this order by certified check or money order, made payable to the United States Treasury and sent to Donald A. Tracy, United States Department of Agriculture, Office of the General Counsel, Room 2014-South Building, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Respondent, her agents, employees, successors and assigns, acting directly or indirectly, or through any corporation, partnership, trust or other device whatsoever, shall cease and desist from selling dogs in commerce in violation of 7 U.S.C. § 2134.

The cease and desist provisions of this order shall become effective on the day after service of this order on respondent.

In re: DEAN PAUL. AWA Docket No. 360. Decided March 6, 1986.

Sale of guinea pigs without license—Refusing to allow inspection of his premises—Penalty.

The Judicial Officer affirmed Chief Judge Campbell's order assessing a $3,000 civil penalty and a cease and desist order because respondent sold guinea pigs without a license and refused to permit an inspection of his premises. Failure to file an answer within 20 days constitutes an admission of the allegations in the complaint and a waiver of hearing. A document is not filed with the Hearing Clerk until it reaches the Hearing Clerk. Respondent has shown no basis for setting aside the default decision here. It is unlawful to act as a dealer without a license and to refuse to permit an inspection. Respondent cannot present new facts for the first time on appeal. Agencies should be free to fashion rules of procedure to enable them to discharge their multitudinous duties. Respondent's oral statement that he did not plan to file an annual report and pay the renewal license fee did not automatically terminate his license.

[4] Where the administrative recommendation for a sanction is so lenient that it would not effectuate the purposes of the Act, the Judicial Officer will sua sponte increase the sanction. See In re Esposito, 38 Agric. Dec. 613, 623 n.7 (1979). But that is not the case here.

John A. Campbell, Administrative Law Judge.
Kevin F. Meckus, for complainant.
For respondent, pro se.

Decision by Donald A. Campbell, Judicial Officer.

DECISION AND ORDER

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Animal Welfare Act, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 2131 et seq.), and the regulations and standards issued thereunder (9 CFR § 1.1 et seq.). On December 3, 1985, Chief Administrative Law Judge John A. Campbell (ALJ) issued an initial Decision and Order directing respondent to cease and desist from violating the Act and regulations, and assessing a civil penalty of $3,000, because respondent sold guinea pigs without a license and refused to permit an inspection of his premises.

On January 10, 1986, respondent appealed to the Judicial Officer, to whom final administrative authority has been delegated to decide the Department's cases subject to 5 U.S.C. §§ 556 and 557 (7 CFR § 2.35).[1] The case was referred to the Judicial Officer for decision on February 6, 1986.

Oral argument before the Judicial Officer, which is discretionary (7 CFR § 1.145(d)), was requested by respondent, but is denied inasmuch as the issues are not difficult and oral argument would seem to serve no useful purpose.

Based upon a careful consideration of the record, the initial Decision and Order is adopted as the final Decision and Order in this case, except that a few minor changes are made in the order. Additional conclusions by the Judicial Officer follow the ALJ's conclusions.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE'S INITIAL DECISION

This is a proceeding under the Animal Welfare Act, as amended (7 U.S.C. 2131 et seq.), hereinafter referred to as the "Act," and the regulations and standards issued thereunder (9 CFR 1.1 et seq.). A complaint issued by the Adminstrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service in accordance with the applicable Rules of Practice was duly served upon the Respondent (7 CFR 1.135, 1.147(b)).

[1] The position of Judicial Officer was established pursuant to the Act of April 4, 1940 (7 U.S.C. §§ 450c–450g), and Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1953, 18 Fed. Reg. 3219 (1953), reprinted in 5 U.S.C. app. at 1068 (1982). The Department's present Judicial Officer was appointed in January 1971, having been involved with the Department's regulatory programs since 1949 (including 3 years' trial litigation; 10 years' appellate litigation relating to appeals from the decisions of the prior Judicial Officer; and 8 years as administrator of the Packers and Stockyards Act regulatory program).

Respondent's failure to file an answer responsive to the complaint allegations within the time specified in the complaint constitutes an admission of the facts alleged in the complaint and a waiver of hearing (7 CFR 1.136(a), 1.139). Therefore, this Decision and Order is entered according to the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 1.139).

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Dean Daul, hereinafter referred to as respondent, is an individual whose mailing address is RFD #1, Box 265, Luxemburg, Wisconsin 54217.

2. Until January 15, 1985, respondent was licensed under the Act as a Class A dealer.

3. At the time respondent's license No. 35-A-77 was issued on November 14, 1983, respondent received a copy of the regulations and standards contained in Title 9, Chapter 1, Subchapter A of the Code of Federal Regulations and agreed to comply with said regulations and standards.

4. On January 15, 1985, respondent's Animal Welfare License Number 35-A-77 was officially terminated due to failure to submit the annual report and license fee required by 9 CFR § 2.5(b) (1985).

5. Respondent has been found to be in violation as follows:

a. On January 23, 1985, respondent sold and shipped 38 guinea pigs to a research facility without an effective Animal Welfare License in violation of Section 4 of the Animal Welfare Act, 7 U.S.C. 2134.

b. On February 5, 1985, respondent sold and shipped 52 guinea pigs to a research facility without an effective Animal Welfare License in violation of Section 4 of the Animal Welfare Act, 7 U.S.C. 2134.

c. On January 9, 1985, respondent refused to permit Dr. Richard Bertz and Robert Schmoll of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, to conduct an inspection of respondent's premises during ordinary business hours in violation of the Animal Welfare Act, 7 U.S.C. 2146(a), and the regulations promulgated thereunder, 9 CFR § 2.126 (1985).

The violations set forth herein warrant the sanctions authorized under the Act (7 U.S.C. 2149(a), (b)), and contained in the following order.

ADDITIONAL CONCLUSIONS BY THE JUDICIAL OFFICER

Under the Department's rules of practice governing formal adjudicatory administrative proceedings instituted by the Secretary, a respondent's failure to file an answer with the Hearing Clerk within 20 days after service of the complaint constitutes an admission of the allegations in the complaint and a waiver of hearing. Specifically, the rules of practice provide (7 CFR §§ 1.136(a)–(c), .139):

§ 1.136 Answer.

(a) Filing and service. Within 20 days after the service of the complaint . . . the respondent shall file with the Hearing Clerk an answer signed by the respondent or the attorney of record in the proceeding. . . .

(b) Contents. The answer shall: (1) Clearly admit, deny, or explain each of the allegations of the Complaint and shall clearly set forth any defense asserted by the respondent; or

(2) State that the respondent admits all the facts alleged in the complaint; or

(3) State that the respondent admits the jurisdictional allegations of the complaint and neither admits nor denies the remaining allegations and consents to the issuance of an order without further procedure.

(c) Default. Failure to file an answer within the time provided under § 1.136(a) shall be deemed, for purposes of the proceeding, an admission of the allegations in the Complaint, and failure to deny or otherwise respond to an allegation of the Complaint shall be deemed, for purposes of the proceeding, an admission of said allegation, unless the parties have agreed to a consent decision prusuant to § 1.138.

* * * * * * *

§ 1.139 Procedure upon failure to file an answer or admission of facts.

The failure to file an answer, or the admission by the answer of all the material allegations of fact contained in the complaint, shall constitute a waiver of hearing. Upon such admission or failure to file, complainant shall file a proposed decision, along with a motion for the adoption thereof, both of which shall be served upon the respondent by the Hearing Clerk.

Within 20 days after service of such motion and proposed decision, the respondent may file with the Hearing Clerk objections thereto. If the Judge finds that meritorious objections have been filed, complainant's Motion shall be denied with supporting reasons. If meritorious objections are not filed, the Judge shall issue a decision without further procedure or hearing.

The rules of practice expressly state the obvious fact that any document is not "filed with the Hearing Clerk" until it "reaches" the Hearing Clerk (unless it is filed with the ALJ in appropriate circumstances). Specifically, the rules provide (7 CFR § 1.147(a), (d)):

§ 1.147 Filing; service; extensions of time; and computation of time.

(a) Filing; number of copies. . . . Any document or paper required or authorized under the rules in this part to be filed with the Hearing Clerk shall, during the course of an oral hearing, be filed with the Judge.

* * * * * * *

(d) Effective date of filing. Any document or paper required or authorized under the rules in this part to be filed shall be deemed to be filed at the time when it reaches the Hearing Clerk; or, if authorized to be filed with another officer or employee of the Department it shall be deemed to be filed at the time when it reaches such officer or employee.

The complaint in this case contained allegations identical to Findings 1–4 and paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of Finding 5, supra, and advised respondent that complainant was seeking a $3,000 civil penalty and a cease and desist order. The complaint advised respondent that an answer must be filed with the Hearing Clerk within 20 days, as follows (Complaint at 2–3):

WHEREFORE, in accordance with the Rules of Practice, this complaint shall be served upon respondent. Respondent is hereby afforded an opportunity to submit a written answer to the allegations set forth herein and to request an oral hearing on such allegations according to the Rules of Practice (7 CFR §§ 1.136, 1.141). Any such answer and/or request must be filed with the Hearing Clerk, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250, within 20 days of the service of this complaint.

In addition, the letter from the Hearing Clerk serving a copy of the complaint on respondent expressly advised respondent of the effect of failure to file an answer with the Hearing Clerk within 20 days. The letter states:

> In accordance with the rules of practice governing proceedings under the Act, a copy of which is enclosed, you will have 20 days from the receipt of this letter within which to file with the Hearing Clerk an original and three copies of your answer. Your answer should contain a definite statement of the facts which constitute the grounds of defense, and should specifically admit, deny or explain each of the allegations of the complaint. Failure to file an answer to or plead specifically to any allegation of the complaint shall constitute an admission of such allegation.
> Within the same time allowed for the filing of your answer, you may, if you wish, request an oral hearing. Failure to file such a request will constitute a waiver, on your part, of oral hearing.

The return receipt card shows that respondent was served with a copy of the complaint on September 25, 1985. Respondent's answer was, therefore, required to be filed with the Hearing Clerk by October 15, 1985. Instead, respondent's answer dated October 15, 1985 (the date it was required to be filed with the Hearing Clerk), was not received by the Hearing Clerk until October 21, 1985. Since respondent failed to file an answer within the specified time period, the default Decision and Order was properly issued in this case. Although on rare occasions default decisions have been set aside for good cause shown or where complainant did not object,[2] respondent has shown no basis for setting aside the default decision here.[3]

In addition, respondent's (untimely) answer states in its entirety:

> This is in response to AWA Docket # 360. I will not set forth any explanation at this time. I request a hearing in the city of Green Bay.

Hence even if respondent's answer had been timely filed, the answer did not deny or otherwise respond to the allegations of the complaint and, therefore, the answer, even if timely filed, would have warranted the issuance of a default decision, under the rules quoted above.

Since respondent failed to file a timely answer, complainant filed a motion for a proposed decision pursuant to the rules of practice, quoted above. Complainant's proposed decision was identical to the decision subsequently signed by the ALJ. Although respondent's response to the proposed decision was due to be filed with the Hearing Clerk on November 25, 1985, again respondent waited until the due date to mail his reply, which was not received by the Hearing Clerk until November 29, 1985, i.e., 4 days late. Moreover, the response admits that "all of the allegations [of the complaint] are correct." Specifically, respondent's response states in its entirety:

> This is in regard to proceedings AWA 360.
> In the letter of Proposed Decision and Order you have an insinuation that my answer was late. Let me tell you that I have to respond within 20 days to the post office of my choice. My receipt #PO15-537-162 is dated Oct. 16, 1985, now don't tell me that my reply was late. As you will notice this reply will be sent by certified mail on the 20th day, don't come along with that excuse of late filing. As to making any plea, there was nothing to deny as all of the allegations are correct. The thing that needs to be resolved is whether any laws have been violated. My objection to Order and Proposed Decision is based on the fact that even though allegations may be correct, it does not make them a violation of the AWA laws. Also the fact that someone conveyed to me that there seems to be a predetermined feeling within your department that I am a Bad Ass makes me a little angry. Therefore, to deny me a hearing would be denying me the basic right to defend myself and to prove that no laws have been violated.

Based on the record before him, it was entirely appropriate for the ALJ to issue the decision and order proposed by complainant. The violations charged in the complaint relate to selling animals without a license and refusing to permit an inspection during ordinary business hours, both of which are violations of the regulatory program.

As to the selling violations, it is unlawful to act as a dealer without a license from the Secretary. Specifically, the Act provides (7 U.S.C. § 2134):

§ 2134. Valid license for dealers and exhibitors required

No dealer or exhibitor shall sell or offer to sell or transport or offer for transportation, in commerce, to any research facility or for exhibition or for use as a pet any animal, or buy, sell, offer to buy or sell, transport or offer for transportation, in commerce, to or from another dealer or exhibitor under this chapter any animals, unless and until such dealer or exhibitor shall have obtained a license from the Secretary and such license shall not have been suspended or revoked.

Similarly, as to respondent's refusal to permit agents of the Secretary to conduct an inspection of his premises during ordinary business hours, that, too, violated the Act and regulations, which provide (7 U.S.C. § 2146(a); 9 CFR § 2.126):

§ 2146. Administration and enforcement by Secretary

(a) Investigations and inspections

The Secretary shall make such investigations or inspections as he deems necessary to determine whether any dealer, exhibitor, intermediate handler, carrier, research facility, or operator of an auction sale subject to section 2142 of this title, has violated or is violating any provision of this chapter or any regulation or standard issued thereunder, and for such purposes, the Secretary shall, at all reasonable times, have access to the places of business and the facilities, animals, and those records required to be kept pursuant to section 2140 of this title of any such dealer, exhibitor, intermediate handler, carrier, research facility, or operator of an auction sale.

§ 2.126 Access and inspection of records and property.

> Each dealer, exhibitor, operator of an auction sale, or research facility, shall, during ordinary business hours, permit Veterinary Services representatives, or other Federal officers or employees designated by the Secretary, to enter his place of business to examine records required to be kept by the Act and the regulations in this part, and to make copies of such records, and permit Veterinary Services representatives to enter his place of business, to inspect such facilities, property and animals as such representatives consider necessary to enforce the provisions of the Act, the regulations and the standards in this subchapter. The use of a room, table, or other facilities necessary for the proper examination of such records and inspection of such property or animals shall be extended to such authorized representatives of the Secretary by the dealer, exhibitor, operator of an auction sale, or research facility, his agents and employees.

The Act authorizes the Secretary to assess a civil penalty of $1,000 for each violation of the Act or regulations. The Act provides (7 U.S.C. § 2149(b)):

> (b) Civil penalties for violation of any section, etc.; separate offenses; notice and hearing; appeal; considerations in assessing penalty; compromise of penalty; civil action by Attorney General for failure to pay penalty; district court jurisdiction; failure to obey cease and desist order
>
> Any dealer . . . that violates any provision of this chapter, or any rule, regulation, or standard promulgated by the Secretary thereunder, may be assessed a civil penalty by the Secretary of not more than $1,000 for each such violation, and the Secretary may also make an order that such person shall cease and desist from continuing such violation. Each violation and each day during which a violation continues shall be a separate offense. . . . The Secretary shall give due consideration to the appropriateness of the penalty with respect to the size of the business of the person involved, the gravity of the violation, the person's good faith, and the history of previous violations. Any such civil penalty may be compromised by the Secretary.

Accordingly, the ALJ properly issued the decision and order proposed by complainant.

Respondent was served with a copy of the ALJ's decision and order on December 7, 1985. The Hearing Clerk's service letter advised him that he had "30 days from receipt of this notice in which to file with the Hearing Clerk an appeal t the Secretary." However, respondent's appeal was not filed until January 10, 1986, i.e., 4 days late. In his appeal, respondent, for the first time, set forth his defense to the violations. As to the refusal to permit an inspection of his premises on January 9, 1985, respondent states (Appeal at 1):

> Sub Part C On this matter let me call your attention to AWA No. 311 and AWA 328 Order for Voluntary Dismissal dated 3-22-85 by Dorothea A. Baker wherein it stated that I no longer had Guinea Pigs. At the time that Mr. Bertz made his appearance at my place the animals were still on my premises, as you don't move a whole colony 400 miles in the dead of winter.
> Mr. Bertz asked me if I wanted to file an annual report and pay license fee. According to Title 9, Sub Chapter A, Regulations #2.5 Duration of license Sub Part B. Being that Mr. Bertz was giving me notice and opportunity as stated in Sub Part B. My answer of no, amounted to automatic termination of license and automatic termination of authority. Therefore Mr. Bertz's request to inspect building amounted to nothing more than an illegal search.

These facts, which are set forth for the first time on appeal, come much too late. As explained above, respondent had an opportunity to file a timely answer explaining any allegation of the complaint and setting forth any defense asserted by the respondent. But he failed to file a timely answer, and his late answer failed to deny or explain any allegation or set forth any defense. It is well settled that respondent cannot raise new issues on appeal or present new facts for the first time on appeal.[4]

The requirement in the Department's rules of practice that respondent deny or explain any allegation of the complaint and set forth any defense in a timely answer is necessary to enable this Department to handle its large workload in an expeditious and economical manner. During the last fiscal year, the Department's five ALJ's (who do not have law clerks) disposed of 421 cases. The Department's Judicial Officer (who does not have a law clerk) disposed of 45 cases (including one on remand from the Seventh Circuit that required a 529-page decision to justify an 8-month suspension order and a $10,000 civil penalty for 14 separate livestock violations based on circumstantial evidence). Last month, 66 new cases were filed with the Hearing Clerk. The Department does not have the time or resources to hold a hearing at this late date for this respondent, who did not file a timely answer and did not choose to "set forth any explanation at this time" when his (untimely) answer was filed.

The courts have recognized that administrative agencies "should be 'free to fashion their own rules of procedure and to pursue methods of inquiry capable of permitting them to discharge their multitudinous duties.'" [5] If respondent were permitted to raise the defenses which he explained for the first time on appeal to the Judicial Officer, all other respondents in all other cases would have to be afforded the same privilege. Permitting such practice would greatly delay the administrative process and would require additional personnel. However, there is no basis for permitting respondent to raise these defenses at this time.

But even if respondent were permitted to raise these defenses, respondent is in error in believing that when he orally said he did not want to file an annual report and pay the license fee, that amounted to an automatic termination of his license. The regulations provide (9 CFR § 2.5):

> § 2.5 Duration of license.
> (a) A license issued under this part shall be valid and effective unless:
>
> (1) Said license has been revoked or suspended pursuant to section 19 of the Act.
>
> (2) Said license is voluntarily terminated upon the request of the licensee in writing to the Veterinarian in Charge.
> (b) Failure by a licensee to pay the annual license fee as required by §§ 2.1 and 2.6 or to file the annual report as required by § 2.7 on or before the anniversary date of his license shall result in automatic termination of the license:

[5] Cella v. United States, 208 F.2d 783, 789 (7th Cir. 1953), cert. denied, 347 U.S. 1016 (1954), quoting from FCC v. Pottsville Broadcasting Co., 309 U.S. 134, 143 (1940); accord Swift & Co. v. United States, 308 F.2d 849, 851-52 (7th Cir. 1962).

Provided, however, That prior to such termination the licensee shall be given notice and opportunity to comply with the annual license fee and reporting requirements. Failure to comply with the annual license fee and reporting requirements within 60 days from receipt of such notice shall result in automatic termination of license.

(c) A license which is invalid under paragraph (a) of this section shall be surrendered to the Veterinarian in Charge in the State where the license was issued.

Under the regulation, respondent had until the anniversary date of his license in which to pay the annual license fee and file the annual report. His oral statement that he did not want to file an annual report and pay the license fee did not terminate his license prior to the anniversary date of the license.

As to selling without a license, respondent presents a fact for the first time on appeal which, if true, would seem to constitute a valid defense. Respondent states (Appeal at 1):

Sub Part A and B Correct as for number of pigs sold.

If you look at Animal Welfare Act (7 U.S.C. 2131-2156) Section 2 Sub Part f ii;

"any person who does not sell, or negotiate the purchase or sale of any wild animal, dog or cat and who derives no more than $500 gross income from the sale of other animals during any calendar year".

Being that I maintain a few pigs, along with my sons who have their own colonies each as 4-H projects for several years. So long as each of us stay below the $500 limit there is no violation.

The complete definition of the term dealer, quoted in part by the respondent, is as follows (7 U.S.C. § 2132(f)):

(f) The term "dealer" means any person who, in commerce, for compensation or profit, delivers for transportation, or transports, except as a carrier, buys, or sells, or negotiates the purchase or sale of, (1) any dog or other animal whether alive or dead for research, teaching, exhibition, or use as a pet, or (2) any dog for hunting, security, or breeding purposes, except that this term does not include—

> (i) a retail pet store except such store which sells any animals to a research facility, an exhibitor, or a dealer; or
> (ii) any person who does not sell, or negotiate the purchase or sale of any wild animal, dog, or cat, and who derives no more than $500 gross income from the sale of other animals during any calendar year.

If respondent had filed a timely answer setting forth as a defense that he was not a dealer on January 23, 1985, and February 5, 1985, when the alleged unlawful sales occurred, a hearing would have been held to determine the truth of that fact. But since respondent did not file a timely answer, and even in his late answer he did not choose to "set forth any explanation at this time," respondent cannot inject this issue into the case for the first time on appeal.

It should be noted that the complaint does not expressly allege that respondent was still a dealer on January 23, 1985, and February 5, 1985, when the alleged sales in violation of the Act occurred. But the fact that respondent was a dealer on those dates is alleged by implication. That is, the complaint alleges (Complaint at 2):

> a. On January 23, 1985, respondent sold and shipped 38 guinea pigs to a research facility without an effective Animal Welfare License in violation of Section 4 of the Animal Welfare Act, 7 U.S.C. 2134.
> b. On February 5, 1985, respondent sold and shipped 52 guinea pigs to a research facility without an effective Animal Welfare License in violation of Section 4 of the Animal Welfare Act, 7 U.S.C. 2134.

Since the complaint alleges that these sales were in violation of § 4 of the Animal Welfare Act (7 U.S.C. § 2134), and § 4 of the Act only applies to sales by dealers (or exhibitors subject to the Act), the complaint necessarily alleges, by implication, that respondent was acting as a dealer on those dates.

In addition, the complaint also alleges that respondent was licensed as a dealer from November 14, 1983, until January 15, 1985, just a few days prior to the sales alleged to be in violation of the Act. In the absence of any suggestion by respondent to the contrary, the ALJ could have properly inferred that when respondent continued to sell guinea pigs a few days after his license terminated, he was still acting as a dealer. But, in any event, as stated above, it is too late for respondent to inject this issue into the case for the first time on appeal.

For the foregoing reasons, the following order should be issued.

ORDER

Respondent, his agents and employees, directly or indirectly through any corporate or other device, in connection with his business as a dealer within the meaning of the Act, shall cease and desist from:

1. Selling animals in violation of 7 U.S.C. § 2134; and

2. Refusing to permit inspections of his premises in violation of 7 U.S.C. § 2146(a) and 9 CFR § 2.126.

Respondent is assessed a civil penalty of $3,000, which shall be paid not later than the 90th day after service of this order by certified check or money order, made payable to the order of the Treasurer of the United States and sent to Kevin F. Meckus, United States Department of Agriculture, Office of the General Counsel, Room 2014-South Building, Washington, D. C. 20250.

The cease and desist provisions of this order shall become effective on the day after service of this order on respondent.

STIPULATION AND CONSENT DECISION AND ORDER

This is a proceeding under the Federal Meat Inspection Act (FMIA), as amended (21 U.S.C. Section 601 et seq.), and the applicable Rules of Practice (7 CFR Section 1.130 et seq. and 9 CFR Section 335.1 et seq.), to withdraw Federal meat inspection service from S. Marchisio Provision, Inc. This proceeding was commenced by a complaint filed on October 2, 1985, by the Administrator of the Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS), United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), who is responsible for the administration of Federal meat inspection services. The parties have agreed that this proceeding should be terminated by the entry of the Consent Decision set forth below and have agreed to the following stipulations:

1. For purposes of this stipulation and the provisions of this Consent Decision only, S. Marchisio Provision, Inc., hereafter referred to as respondent, admits all of the jurisdictional allegations of the complaint, and waives:

(a) Any further procedural steps;

(b) Any requirement that the final decision in this proceeding contain findings and conclusions with respect to all material issues of fact, law or discretion, as well as the reasons or bases thereof; and

(c) All rights to seek judicial review or to otherwise challenge or contest the validity of this decision.

2. This Stipulation and Consent Decision are for settlement purposes in this proceeding only and do not otherwise constitute an admission or denial by the respondent that it violated the regulations or statues involved.

3. The respondent waives any action against the USDA under the Equal Access to Justice Act of 1980, (5 U.S.C. Section 504 et seq.) for fees and other expenses incurred by the respondent in connection with this proceeding.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Respondent is now, and at all times material herein was, a corporation which operates a meat processing establishment in Brooklyn, New York, and is a recipient of Federal meat inspection services under Title I of the FMIA. The respondents address is 5 Brooklyn Terminal Market, Brooklyn, New York 11236.

2. On July 31, 1985, in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York, the respondent was convicted of two misdemeanors for the sale of adulterated and misbranded meat food products, in violation of Title 21, United States Code, Section 610(c).

CONCLUSIONS

Inasmuch as the parties have agreed to the provisions set forth in the following Consent Decision in disposition of this proceeding, such Order will be issued.

ORDER

I

Inspection service under Title I of the FMIA is, for a period of one year, withdrawn from and denied to respondent, its officers, directors, partners, affiliates, successors, and assigns, directly or through any corporate device. This one year period of withdrawal and denial will be held in abeyance, and will not become effective:

II

1. (a) For so long as, within one year from the effective date of this Order, the respondent or any of its officers, partners, employees, agents, or affiliates do not violate (as that term is defined in paragraph 1(b)) any section of the FMIA or State or local statutes, involving the preparation, sale, transportation or attempted distribution of any adulterated or misbranded meat or meat food products.

(b) The term violate, as used in paragraph 1(a) above, means a violation found upon conviction (or upon affirmation of conviction, if appealed), or upon a final decision in a formal adjudicatory proceeding before the Secretary (or upon affirmation of the Secretary's decision, if appealed), and if it is found that there is any such violation of any term of this Order, the suspension of the withdrawal and denial will become effective immediately. This shall not preclude the referral of any such violation to the Department of Justice for possible criminal or civil proceedings.

III

1. For so long as, within five years of the effective date of this order, the conditions set forth in paragraphs 2 through 14 below, are met. During this five year period, the Secretary shall have the right to summarily withdraw inspection service upon a finding by appropriate national headquarters staff, after a preliminary conference with respondent, of a violation of any special condition set forth in paragraphs 2 through 14. The summary withdrawal of inspection service shall be effective pending final determination of a violation in accordance with the applicable Rules of Practice. Such summary withdrawal shall have no relevance with respect to the final determination in the proceeding and will not preclude the respondent from requesting an expedited hearing.

2. Respondent does not knowingly employ or add any individual who has been convicted, in any Federal or State court of any felony, or more than one violation of any law, other than a felony, based upon the acquiring, handling, or distribution of unwholesome, mislabeled or deceptively packaged food, or fraud in connection with transactions in food; and

3. Respondent immediately terminates its connection with any such individual when that individual's conviction becomes known; and

4. Respondent does not prepare, manufacture, handle, sell or transport any sausage product which contains any prohibited or unapproved additive or any approved additive in excess of that allowed; and

5. Respondent maintains a complete listing of all nonmeat additives being used or stored at its official establishment, to include the identity of manufacturer and/or supplier; and

6. Respondent arranges for semiannual independent laboratory analysis of all additives being used or stored at the establishment for preservatives, including but not limited to sulfite, nitrite, ascorbate, sorbate, and benzoate. The results of the analyses will be provided to the on-site USDA inspector; and

7. Respondent shall designate a full-time person who has overall, daily responsibility and control of respondent's operations (i.e., plant manager or plant superintendent) to conduct daily reviews of all areas of the official establishment for sanitation. In addition, this Designee shall review daily products for condition, processing procedures, formulation, and labeling of finished products. These daily reviews shall be recorded in a hardbound Log Book, including but not limited to, the date, time, name of Designee conducting the review, the findings, suggestions and/or corrective action taken, and initialed by the Designee. The Log Book shall be available for review by USDA personnel; and

8. Respondent's Designee shall immediately notify the USDA onsite inspector of any operational or sanitation deficiencies that would or have caused work stoppage and corrective actions taken during the daily reviews; and

9. Respondent does not prepare, handle, or store custom exempt articles or game, whether for customers, employees, the owner, friends or relatives; and

10. Respondent does not accept or receive any returned product due to its condition or the condition of the carton or container without prior notice to, and approval by, the on-site USDA inspector; and

11. Respondent does not handle, prepare, separate, wash, trim, recondition, or rework any returned or off-condition product without prior notice to, and approval by, the on-site USDA inspector; and

12. Respondent maintains full, complete, and accurate written records of all other business activities applicable to the FMIA and the Poultry Products Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. Section 451 et seq.), which are available for review by USDA personnel; and

13. Respondent makes a detailed semiannual written report to the Meat and Poultry Inspection Office's Area Supervisor, New York, New York, concerning its adherence to this Stipulation and Consent Decision with a copy to the on-site USDA inspector. The first such report is due July 1, 1986. All following semiannual written reports shall be submitted to the Area Supervisor on June 1 and December 1 of each calendar year that this Consent Decision and Order is effective; and

14. Respondent shall afford duly authorized personnel of the USDA an opportunity to examine and to copy all such records, reports, and other documents required of the respondent in this Consent Decision and Order.

15. Nothing in this Order shall preclude the respondent from petitioning the complainant, after 30 months from the effective date of this Order and after successfully complying with all terms in this Order, to modify, amend, or terminate any or all of the special conditions set forth in paragraphs III, 1 through 14.

16. Nothing in this Order shall preclude the respondent from petitioning the complainant, at any time, to modify, amend or terminate this Order if the respondent has entered into good faith negotiations to sell or transfer the assets or corporate entity of the respondent.

This Consent Decision and Order shall become effective after being signed by an Administrative Law Judge and filed with the Hearing Clerk.

ORDER DENYING PETITION FOR RECONSIDERATION AND EXTENSION OF TIME

Respondent's petition for reconsideration is denied since it was not filed within 10 days after the date of service of the Judicial Officer's decision in this case (7 CFR § 1.146(a)(3)). If the matter had been timely filed, it would have been denied on the merits.

Respondent's motion for a 3-month extension of the deadline for Henry Dei to disassociate himself from respondent is denied since he knew since the date of service of the court of appeals decision that he would have to comply with the administrative order, and the case has been pending for years.

In re: BLACKFOOT LIVESTOCK COMMISSION Co. P&S Docket No. 6107.
Decided March 7, 1986.

Misuse of custodial account—Check kiting—Six-month suspension until custodial account is no longer insolvent.

The Judicial Officer affirmed Judge Weber's decision requiring respondent to cease and desist from engaging in business while insolvent; misusing its custodial account for shippers' proceeds; exchanging drafts or checks to create a false "float" in its account; permitting owners, etc., to buy out of consignment for speculation; and paying for livestock with a draft which is not a check without permission from the seller. However, the Judicial Officer sua sponte increased the suspension period from 35 days, which was requested by complainant and issued by the ALJ, to 6 months, primarily because of the seriousness of the check-kiting violations. The fact that the principal violator is now deceased is not a mitigating circumstance. A principal is responsible for the acts of its agents. Check kiting is serious because of potential for great harm. Severe sanction policy explained. Although complainant advised respondent prior to the hearing that it was seeking a 35-day suspension order, respondent should know that that is only a recommendation not binding on the Judicial Officer. Where previous sanctions have not been adequate, a more severe sanction is issued in the present case rather than merely an announcement made that in future cases the sanction will be increased. Harm to consignors is not considered in determining the sanction against an auction market. Consent decisions given no weight in determining sanctions in litigated cases. Complainant's investigation report is not producible under Jencks Act, and respondent's request for the report does not require the ALJ to perform an in camera examination.

Decision by Donald A. Campbell, Judicial Officer.

DECISION AND ORDER

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, as amended and supplemented (7 U.S.C. § 181 et seq.).* An initial Decision and Order was filed on August 22, 1985, by Administrative Law Judge William J. Weber (ALJ) suspending respondent as a registrant for 35 days and ordering respondent to cease and desist from engaging in business while insolvent; misusing its "Custodial Account for Shippers' Proceeds"; exchanging drafts or checks to create a false "float" or balance in its account; permitting owners, officers, agents, or employees to buy livestock out of consignment for speculation; and paying for livestock with a draft which is not a check without obtaining permission from the seller.

On September 23, 1985, respondent appealed to the Judicial Officer, to whom final administrative authority to decide the Department's cases subject to 5 U.S.C. §§ 556 and 557 has been delegated (7 CFR § 2.35). On October 21, 1985, the case was referred to the Judicial Officer for decision. The Judicial Officer sua sponte raised the issue as to whether the suspension period should be "substantially increased, e.g., 6 months to a year" (Notice filed January 31, 1986). Additional briefs were filed by the parties.

Oral argument before the Judicial Officer, which is discretionary (7 CFR § 1.145(d)), was requested by respondent, but is denied inasmuch as the issues are not novel or difficult, the case has been thoroughly briefed, and oral argument would seem to serve no useful purpose.

Based upon a careful consideration of the record, the ALJ's findings and conclusions are adopted as the final decision in this case, with changes too minor to itemize (except that a paragraph is omitted which begins at the bottom of page 24 of the ALJ's decision). Additional conclusions by the Judicial Officer follow the ALJ's conclusions. The suspension period is increased to 6 months for the reasons set forth in the Judicial Officer's additional conclusions.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE'S INITIAL DECISION

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, as amended and supplemented (7 USC § 181 et seq., "Act") instituted by a complaint filed on March 1 1983.

Generally, the complaint alleged respondent violated the provisions of the Act (and implementing regulations 9 CFR 200 et seq) concerning insolvency, misuse of the custodial account, paying for livestock with drafts (without written permission from the seller), check-kiting and speculative purchases of cattle consigned for sale.

Specifically, the complaint charged respondent corporation wilfully violated the Act by exchanging checks or drafts with Uinta Livestock Commission Company when no sales of livestock were involved, for the purpose of creating a false "float" or balance in both bank accounts. The complaint also charged that there were insufficient funds on deposit in respondent's account to pay such drafts when they were issued.

 The position of Judicial Officer was established pursuant to the Act of April 4, 1940 (7 U.S.C. §§ 450c–450g), and Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1953, 18 Fed. Reg. 3219 (1953), reprinted in 5 U.S.C. app. at 1068 (1982). The Department's present Judicial Officer was appointed in January 1971, having been involved with the Department's regulatory programs since 1949 (including 3 years' trial litigation; 10 years' appellate litigation relating to appeals from the decisions of the prior Judicial Officer; and 8 years as administrator of the Packers and Stockyards Act regulatory program (December 1962–January 1971)).

The complaint also charged that the respondent corporation wilfully violated the Act (and the implementing regulations) when it:

> (1) continued doing business as a market agency selling livestock on a commission basis while its current liabilities exceeded its current assets;
>
> (2) failed to maintain and use properly its custodial account for shippers' proceeds; and
> (3) used custodial funds for purposes of its own and for purposes other than payment of lawful marketing charges and remittance of net proceeds to the consignors of the livestock sold.

Further, respondent corporation allegedly permitted its owners and officers to purchase livestock consigned to the market for sale on a commission basis for resale for their own speculative accounts.

Finally, respondent corporation was charged with issuing bank drafts in payment for its purchases of livestock without first receiving the seller's written permission for their use.

Respondent admitted the jurisdictional allegations and denied any and all alleged violations of the Act or regulations.

Trial of the issues took place on April 3-6, 1985 in Idaho Falls, Idaho.

The last briefs were filed 12/31/85. Respondent corporation by a post hearing motion seeks to submit into the record the findings of fact, conclusions of law and judgment of the U.S. District Court for the District of Utah Central Division (Civil #C-83-1211W) in litigation between a bank and respondent corporation arising out of the check-kiting activities. Also submitted is the supplemental letter of explanation dated 4/16/85, provided by the Court to the parties in that litigation. (A copy of all the material is attached to the motion).

Complainant's objections are overruled. The findings, conclusions and views of the Court are relevant and material to the issues here, are not unduly repetitious and responsible people will rely on them. 7 CFR 1.141(g)(1)(iv). Further, a relevant decision of the U.S. District Court could be cited in briefs. See also 7 CFR 1.141(g)(5) and (6).

Respondent's motion is granted. The decision of the District Court will be given whatever weight is appropriate consistent with the evidence in this record.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Blackfoot Livestock Commission Co., hereinafter referred to as the respondent, is a corporation whose business mailing address is P. O. Box 472, Blackfoot, Idaho 83221. (Answer) [1]

2. Respondent ("stockyard") is and has been operating a posted stockyard subject to the provisions of the Act at all times relevant here. (Answer)

3. Respondent is and has been a market agency selling livestock on a commission basis at the stockyard. (Answer)

4. Respondent is and has been registered with the Secretary of Agriculture as a (1) market agency to buy and sell livestock in commerce on a commission basis, and as a (2) dealer to buy and sell livestock in commerce for its own account. (Answer)

5. At the time relevant here (January through May 1981) the corporate officers of respondent were Delwyn Ellis, President, Paul Thompson, Vice-President, and Dennis Lake, Secretary-Treasurer, each of whom owned ⅓ of the corporate stock issued by respondent. (TR 736, 737)

6. Paul Thompson died on or about May 19 1981. (TR 321, 703)

7. Upon Thompson's death, Ellis and Lake each became 50% owners of the corporate stock issued by the respondent. (TR 613–14, 736)

8. Respondent is presently under the direction, management and control of its owners and corporate officers, Delwyn Ellis, President, and Dennis Lake, Vice-President. (TR 738)

Insolvency

9. During April 1982, Ms. Bonnie Bergers [2] and Mr. Keith Kienow of the Packers and Stockyards Administration's Portland, Oregon, Regional Office conducted a compliance review of respondent's business. (TR 141)

10. As part of the compliance review, Ms. Bergers analyzed respondent's current assets and current liabilities as of October 31 1981 and December 31 1981. (CX 8–10; TR 19–77)

11. Ms. Bergers' analysis revealed that as of October 31 1981, respondent's current liabilities exceeded its current assets. As of that date, respondent had current liabilities of approximately $827,969.00, and current assets totalling approximately $715,671.00, resulting in a deficit of approximately $112,298.00. (CX 8; TR 19–46)

[1] Complainant's clear, record-supported brief, is in large measure used as a base for this decision and order. Not every possible reference is cited.

[2] Ms. Bergers' accounting skills are better than average in that she has successfully completed part of the examination for Certified Public Accountant.

12. As of December 31 1981, respondent's current liabilities exceeded its current assets. As of that date, respondent had current liabilities of approximately $474,979.00, and current assets totalling approximately $308,760.00, resulting in a deficit of approximately $166,219.00. (CX 10; TR 51-71)

13. A financial statement prepared by respondent's accountant showed that as of December 31, 1981, respondent's current liabilities exceeded its current assets by approximately $192,974.00, an amount even greater than that alleged by complainant. (CX 9) The figures in both CX 9 and CX 10 demonstrate that respondent's current liabilities exceeded its current assets as of December 31 1981.

14. While insolvent, Respondent operated as a market agency subject to the Act between October 31 and December 31 1981.

Custodial Account

15. Respondent, between March 30 and February 26 1982, failed to maintain its Custodial Account for Shippers' Proceeds ("custodial account") in accordance with the regulations promulgated under the Packers and Stockyards Act, in that:

(a) As of March 30, 1981, respondent had outstanding checks drawn on its custodial account in the amount of $318,825.89, and had, to offset those checks, cash in said account in the amount of $145,384.32, deposits in transit of $2,842.70, and proceeds receivable of $28,023.30, resulting in a deficiency of $142,575.57 in funds available to pay shippers their proceeds. (CX 11; TR 78-85)

(b) As of April 30 1981, respondent had outstanding checks drawn on its custodial account in the amount of $296,715.58, and had, to offset those checks, cash in said account in the amount of $276,056.40, no deposits in transit and no proceeds receivable, resulting in a deficiency of $20,659.18 in funds available to pay shippers their proceeds. (CX 12; TR 86-88)

(c) As of October 31 1981, respondent had outstanding checks drawn on its custodial account in the amount of $922,347.50, and had, to offset those checks, cash in said account in the amount of $193,366.60, deposits in transit of $97,038.28, and proceeds receivable of $611,189.77, resulting in a deficiency of $20,752.85 in funds available to pay shippers their proceeds. (CX 8; TR 36-40)

(d) As of December 31 1981, respondent had outstanding checks drawn on its custodial account in the amount of $102,044.95, and had, to offset those checks, cash in said account in the amount of $83,457.07, no deposits in transit and no proceeds receivable, resulting in a deficiency of $18,587.88 in funds available to pay shippers their proceeds. (CX 10; TR 63-66)

16. An analysis of the custodial account for April 1981 revealed that the outstanding checks drawn on the custodial account exceeded the ending bank balance for each and every day in April. (CX 13; TR 141-48)

17. The shortages were caused in part by the failure of respondent to deposit in its custodial account, within the respective times prescribed by the regulations (1) an amount equal to the proceeds from purchases of consigned livestock by Dennis Lake and Delwyn Ellis, respondent's owners and officers; and (2) an amount equal to the proceeds receivable from purchases of consigned livestock by others. (CX 8, 10-12; TR 153-155)

18. The deficiencies in the custodial account were also caused by respondent's deposit to its general account of monies which should properly have been deposited immediately in its custodial account. It was common practice for respondent to deposit proceeds from the sale of consigned livestock received on the Monday and Tuesday following the Friday sale in its general account rather than the custodial account. Between March 6 and May 29 1981, respondent had as much as $284,899.84 in its general account which should properly have been deposited in its custodial account. For the period December 11 1981 through February 19 1982 as much as $189,398.14 of consignors' money was in respondent's general account rather than its custodial account. (CX 14, 15, 16; TR 149-166)

Check-kiting

19. Uinta Livestock Commission Company, Roosevelt, Utah, was, at the time relevant here (from January 1 1981 through May 27 1981), a market agency which conducted weekly auction sales, and also purchased and sold livestock for its own account. (CX 178; TR 353)

20. Mr. Kay Andreasen, 907 Paulsen, Moses Lake, Washington 98837, was at the time material here, the owner of Uinta Livestock Commission Co.

21. Ms. Carol Kimball, Hancock Cove, Roosevelt, Utah, at the time relevant here, (from January 1 1981 through May 27 1981), was the bookkeeper and office manager of Uinta Livestock Commission Company. In that capacity she issued Uinta checks made payable to Blackfoot Livestock Commission Company totalling $8,697,664.44. (CX 17A; TR 307)

22. Ms. Kimball was also authorized by Paul Thompson (then Vice-President of Blackfoot Livestock) to sign Blackfoot Livestock Commission Company drafts made payable to Uinta Livestock Commission Company. (TR 314)

23. Between January 1 1981 and May 20 1981 more than 75 separate drafts totalling $8,629,649.58, payable to Uinta Livestock Commission Company, were drawn on Blackfoot's account. The overwhelming majority of those drafts were signed by Ms. Kimball. (CX 17A)

24. Many of these Blackfoot drafts were issued to cover Uinta's overdrafts in its account at Zions First National Bank, Roosevelt, Utah. Uinta's account was in an overdraft position on an almost daily basis.[3] (TR 309, 310)

25. An analysis of the Blackfoot drafts in CX 17B reveals that some have names and figures which purport to be true purchases of livestock while others contain no information as to the number of head, or weight or price. Many of the names and figures on the drafts were fictitious, placed on the drafts of Blackfoot LIvestock to make them appear to be legitimate transactions at the request of Paul Thompson, who was then Vice-President of Blackfoot. (TR 312-27)

26. When a Blackfoot draft made payable to Uinta was issued, an exchange check payable to Blackfoot was issued by Ms. Kimball within minutes after writing the Blackfoot drafts. (TR 313)

27. At the time the Uinta checks given in exchange for Blackfoot drafts were issued, there were not sufficient funds in Uinta's account to cover such checks. (CX 18A; TR 279-285)

28. At the time Blackfoot drafts were issued and deposited by Uinta in Uinta's bank account, there were not sufficient funds in Blackfoot's account to cover such drafts. (CX 18B; TR 285-293)

29. Prior to a Uinta exchange check being presented for payment at its bank, another Blackfoot draft would be deposited and credited to Uinta's bank. The reverse was also true, i.e., a Uinta check would be deposited and credited to Blackfoot's account prior to a Blackfoot exchange draft being presented for payment. (TR 277-278)

[3] Zions First National Bank allowed Uinta provisional use of the funds on deposit of the Blackfoot Livestock drafts, before Blackfoot Livestock, as drawee, had "accepted" the drafts for payment.

After the death of Paul Thompson, Uinta officials were told that the relationship with Blackfoot Livestock would continue. (TR 336, 346-47). But almost immediately thereafter, apparently when Blackfoot Livestock officers discovered the full extent of that relationship, Blackfoot Livestock officers refused to accept for payment any further drafts payable to Uinta.

This resulted in a loss of about $884,000.00 by Zions First National Bank which had allowed provisional use of these funds to Uinta on deposit of the drafts. (Findings of Fact 14 through 19, decision of the District Court, Zions First National Bank v. Blackfoot Livestock, supra).

30. The purpose and effect of this exchange was to create an artificial balance in both Blackfoot's and Uinta's account such that there appeared to be sufficient funds in the accounts when in fact these funds were merely "paper" money. (TR 371, 372)

31. A representative sampling of these checks and drafts appears in paragraph VII of the complaint (with minor typographical errors).

32. Dennis Lake was aware that a large number of Blackfoot drafts for large sums of money were being issued to Uinta Livestock at least as early as April, 1981. (TR 324, 312-314)

33. In late May, after the death of Paul Thompson, Dennis Lake refused to honor three Blackfoot drafts totalling $884,108.61 issued to Uinta even though Blackfoot had received and deposited a check for $84,688.94 issued by Uinta in exchange for the first of these drafts. (CX 17A; TR 369, 347)

Speculative Purchases by Respondent's Officers and Failure to Timely Deposit Funds in the Custodial Account

34. During the period November 6 1981 through February 26 1982, Dennis Lake and Delwyn Ellis purchased, purportedly in the name of Blackfoot, livestock which had been consigned to Blackfoot Livestock Commission Co., for sale on commission basis (detailed in paragraph VIII of the complaint).

35. In purchasing these livestock, Lake and Ellis actively competed with other bidders. (TR 663)

36. Separate "deal sheets," that is, documents which show the details of the purchase of livestock by Lake and Ellis, including the number, weight and price on the top half of the sheet, and its subsequent resale to include the purchaser, the number, weight and price on the bottom half of the sheet, were kept for Lake and Ellis. (CX 20; TR 438, 750)

37. On virtually every deal sheet, there was a figure in the center of the sheet on the bottom which represented the difference between the price paid for the livestock at the top and the price purportedly received from the subsequent resale of these livestock, i.e., gross profit. (CX 20; TR 440, 446)

38. Certain of the livestock purchased from consignment by Lake and Ellis in the name of Blackfoot were sold to Dennis Lake and Delwyn Ellis for their ranching or feeding operations. These purchases were not paid for by the close of business on the day following the sale. (TR 756-64; CX 20)

39. The percentage of livestock purchased out of consignment by Blackfoot ranged from a low of 3% on December 18 1981, to highs of 28% on February 5 1982; 25% on February 12 1982; and 21% on February 19 1982. (CX 20A)

40. Although Lake and Ellis did not make a profit on the resale of their purchases out of consignment on every sale day, significant profits were made on most days. (CX 20A) These purchases were made with the hope and intention of making a profit on resale.

41. Lake and Ellis knew, prior to the Friday sale, the kind and quality of most of the livestock which was being consigned to their market for that sale. (TR 659, 788)

42. Dennis Lake and Joe Shrader had conversations every Friday morning prior to the Blackfoot sale concerning the heifers being consigned, the market and price for heifers in Colorado. (TR 518-519)

43. After the sale, Dennis Lake called Shrader and offered the livestock to Shrader. Shrader, in fact, purchased many heifers from Lake. (CX 20; TR 521)

Unauthorized Use of Drafts

44. Blackfoot issued bank drafts in payment for its purchases of livestock without prior written permission from the sellers. (CX 21; TR 463-464)

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

I

Respondent Wilfully Violated The Act By Operating As A Market Agency While Its Current Liabilities Exceeded Its Current Assets

7 USC § 204 provides, in part, that ". . . whenever, after due notice and hearing, the Secretary finds any registrant is insolvent, he may issue an order suspending such registrant for a reasonable specified period."

In the absence of a statutory definition of solvency, the Secretary has adopted the test of insolvency as being whether current liabilities exceed current assets. If a registrant's current liabilities exceed its current assets, it is deemed to be insolvent. (9 CFR § 203.10; TR 16). In Bowman v. U.S. Department of Agriculture, et al., 363 F2d 81 (5th Cir. 1966), the Fifth Circuit, in approving the Secretary's test, stated:

> "having in mind the remedial purposes of the Act, we hold that the test used for determining solvency or insolvency under the circumstances here was reasonable. A financial status where current assets exceed current liabilities would be the sine qua non of prompt payment."

Bowman, 363 F2d at 85.

It is well-established that operating as a market agency or dealer subject to the Act while insolvent is an unfair and deceptive practice in violation of section 312(a) of the Act (7 USC § 213(a)). See e.g., In re Southern Buyers, Inc., 14 Agric. Dec. 811 (1955); In re John L. Cooper, et al. d/b/a Cooper Commission Company, 19 Agric. Dec. 160 (1960). Respondent admits that it operated during the period in question, but denies that it was insolvent.

Ms. Bonnie Bergers, an auditor with the Portland, Oregon Regional Office of the Packers and Stockyards Administration, testified concerning the results of her analysis of respondent's financial condition. Her analysis as of October 31 1981, shows that respondent's current liabilities exceeded its current assets by approximately $112,298.00. (FF. 11) For December 31 1981, Ms. Bergers' figures show an excess of current liabilities over current assets of approximately $166,219.00. (FF. 12) An analysis done by respondent's own accountants also demonstrated that respondent was insolvent as of December 31 1981. (FF. 13)

Respondent argues that complainant improperly characterized respondent's secured line of credit, or operating loan, with the Idaho Bank and Trust Co. as short-term and, therefore, a current liability. Ms. Bergers testified that the note payable was considered a current liability because the note itself was a demand note. (TR 43, 44) The May 5 1981 note states, in pertinent part, "For value received, the undersigned, hereinafter referred to as Borrower, promises to pay to the order of IDAHO BANK AND TRUST CO. (Bank), on demand, or if no demand is made, then on April 1, 1982 . . ." (CX 8, p. 51 A; Emphasis added)

Mr. Mooney, a Vice-President and Manager of the Blackfoot, Idaho office of the Idaho Bank and Trust Company testified that because this note was a demand note, the bank had the right to, and would, demand immediate payment of the note if the bank felt that it was in its best interest to do so. (TR 569) In fact, the bank did not call the note due. But, this cannot, does not, convert a demand note into a note payable more than 12 months in the future.

Accordingly, the note was properly classified as a current liability on the analyses for both October 31 1981, and December 31 1981, done by Ms. Bergers. Interestingly, respondent's accountants also classified this note as a current liability. (cf., CX 9, p. 6, Notes payable-bank, unsecured-$185,343)

Once insolvency has been established, it is presumed to be continuing. In re Koenig, 24 Agric. Dec. 1213, 1219 (1965). Respondent did not show that its financial condition between October 31 1981 and December 31 1981 was materially different from Ms. Bergers' figures. Respondent operated subject to the Act while insolvent.

Respondent did, however, introduce a statement purporting to demonstrate that as of December 31 1983, its current assets exceeded its current liabilities by approximately $61,000. (RX 143) No documentation was proffered to support any of these figures. In fact, Mr. Lake testified that these were figures given him over the telephone by his accountant. (TR 717) This evidence is too abstract and conclusory to warrant much probative value. It does not overcome the presumption of continuing insolvency based on final detailed accounting analysis. Thus, the suspension will necessarily have to continue until such time as respondent clearly and persuasively demonstrates that it is currently solvent.

II

Respondent Failed To Maintain And Use Properly Its Custodial Account

A. As of March 30 1981, April 30, 1981, October 31, 1981, and December 31 1981, there were shortages in respondent's custodial account.

Ms. Bergers, as part of her audit of respondent's financial condition, analyzed its custodial account for March 30 1981, April 30, 1981, October 31 1981, and December 31 1981. Each analysis is supported by complete documentation and shows that on each date, respondent's custodial account had a shortage in the amount of funds available to pay consignors the net proceeds from the sale of their livestock on a commission basis.

Based on the bank statement for respondent's custodial account, the analysis as of March 30 1981, shows cash in the amount of $145,384.32 in the account on that date. Also debited to the account in the analysis were deposits in transit in the amount of $2,842.70 and proceeds receivable in the amount of $28,023.30. This resulted in a total of $176,250.32 in custodial funds available to pay shippers their proceeds.

As of March 30 1981, there were, however, outstanding custodial account checks in the amount of $318,825.89 drawn on the account. This resulted in a shortage of funds available to pay consignors their proceeds in the amount of $142,575.57. (CX 11; TR 83-85)

Respondent did not contest the accuracy of these figures or the data contained in Ms. Bergers' analysis (and supporting schedules) of the custodial account as of March 30 1981. Accordingly, it is not disputed that there was a shortage in custodial account funds available to pay consignors the proceeds from the sale of their livestock.

Respondent's custodial account was similarly analyzed as of April 30 1981, October 31 1981, and December 31 1981. Respondent introduced no evidence challenging the figures contained in complainant's analyses.

Ms. Bergers' analysis of the custodial account as of April 30 1981, demonstrates that there was a shortage in funds available to pay shippers their proceeds as of that date. The bank statement shows that there was a balance of $276,056.40 in the account. There were no deposits in transit, proceeds receivable or any other debits. (CX 12; TR 87) There were outstanding checks drawn on the custodial account in the amount of $296,715.58, resulting in a shortage in the custodial account of $20,659.10 as of April 30 1981. (CX 12; TR 88)

The analyses for October 31 1981, reflects similar results. On October 31 1981, there were outstanding checks drawn on the custodial account in the amount of $922,347.50. (CX 8, p. 26; TR 40) To offset these checks, respondent had total debits of $901,594.65, consisting of a bank balance of $193,366.60, deposits in transit of $97,038.28, and current proceeds receivable of $611,189.77. Comparing the total debits to the amount of outstanding checks shows a shortage of $20,752.85. (CX 8, p. 26; TR 36-40)

On December 31 1981, there were outstanding checks drawn on the custodial account in the amount of $102,044.95. (CX 10, p. 24, 27-28; TR 64) The bank statement showed a balance of $83,457.07. (CX 10, p. 24, 26; TR 63) There were no other debits to offset the outstanding checks. (CX 10, p. 24; TR 63) Comparing the bank balance with the outstanding checks reveals a shortage of $18,587.88 in funds available to pay shippers their proceeds on December 31 1981.

Respondent did not dispute the accuracy of complainant's figures, but was, apparently, content to point out that a few of the outstanding checks were issued to respondent or to businesses run by its owners (TR 131), and that no custodial account checks were ever returned for insufficient funds. (TR 134)

This is not a meritorious defense for, as the Judicial Officer specifically noted in In re Bowman and Reynolds, 23 Agric. Dec. 1605 at 1071, quoting Harry C. Daniels, d/b/a Harry C. Daniels and Co. v. United States, 242 F2d 39, 41-42 (7th Cir. 1957), cert. denied, 345 U.S. 939 (1957):

> "The argument that there is no evidence of any particular shipper not being paid is not controlling. It is the duty of a regulatory agency to prevent potential injury by stopping unlawful practices in their incipiency. Proof of a particular injury is not required. Federal Trade Commission v. Rala-

While it is true that respondent did make a supplemental deposit into its custodial account to correct the deficiency, this was not done until May, 1982, and only after the shortage had been pointed out by Packers and Stockyards Administration officials. (TR 688)

B. Respondent's failure to maintain and use properly its custodial account is a violation of the Act and regulations.

Every market agency subject to the Packers and Stockyards Act is required to establish and properly maintain a Custodial Account for Shippers' Proceeds (9 CFR § 201.42(b)). Section 201.42(c) of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.42(c)) in effect at the time of the alleged violations gives detailed instructions on how to properly maintain a custodial account:

> "(c) Deposits in Custodial Accounts. Before the close of the next banking business day after consigned livestock . . . is sold, the market agency . . . shall deposit in its custodial account the proceeds from the sale of consigned livestock . . . that are collected or received on the date of sale, and an amount equal to the proceeds receivable from the sale of consigned livestock . . . that are due from (1) the market agency . . .; (2) any owner, officer, or employee of the market agency . . .; or (3) any buyer to whom the market agency has extended credit. On or before the third day following the sale of consigned livestock . . . (or the next banking business day after the third day if such third day is a nonbanking business day), the market agency . . . shall deposit in the custodial account an amount equal to all the proceeds receivable from the sale of consigned livestock . . ., whether or not such proceeds have been collected or received by the market agency . . . ."

The evidence in the record of this proceeding clearly shows that respondent did not maintain its custodial account in accordance with the requirements of section 201.42 of the regulations.

Ms. Bergers' analyses show convincingly that the respondent permitted substantial shortages to develop in the amount of custodial account funds available to pay the outstanding custodial account checks issued to the consignors of livestock. (CX 8, 10–12)

Blackfoot Livestock, or its owners, made substantial purchases of consigned cattle on several occasions ranging well over $100,000.00. (CX 14 and 15)

Under section 201.42(c) of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.42(c)), Blackfoot is required to reimburse the custodial account for its purchases or for the purchases of its owners or officers, Dennis Lake and Delwyn Ellis, by the close of business on the next business day following the sale (Monday). (TR 164)

Regularly and habitually, respondent failed to timely reimburse the custodial account for these purchases. (CX 14 and 15)

Respondent also violated the Act by depositing some of the sale proceeds in its general account—not the custodial account. For example, on each Monday during the period examined, amounts of trust funds from a low of $32,469.12 on Monday, December 21 1981, to a high of $284,899.84 on Monday, March 9 1981, were deposited not to the custodial account as required but into respondent's general account. (CX 14, 15; TR 155)

As trust funds, the proceeds from the sale of livestock sold on a commission basis may be used only to pay consignors the net proceeds from the sale of their livestock, after deducting the market's lawful charges. Properly maintaining such funds in a custodial account prevents them from being commingled with the firm's general operating funds and thereby endangered.

Mr. Griffin Bonham, Branch Chief, Marketing Practices Branch, Packers and Stockyards Administration, testified concerning his personal experience with situations where banks had offset funds in a market's general account to cover the market's indebtedness to the bank, but had been prevented from attaching custodial funds since those funds belonged to the consignors, not the market. (TR 537-38) See also, Union Stock Yards Bank v. Gillespie, 137 US 411 (1890); Steere v. Stockyards National Bank, 113 Tex 387, 256 S.W. 586 (1923)

Additionally, each consignor who has money in the custodial account is entitled to FDIC coverage up to $100,000.00 rather than the account itself being subject to a single FDIC coverage of $100,000.00. (TR 156)

Consignors are entitled to rely on the market's compliance with the regulations promulgated under the Packers and Stockyards Act (9 CFR §§ 201.40, 201.42) to ensure that their funds are being properly safeguarded in a custodial account. Rather than safeguarding these funds in a custodial account, however, Blackfoot diverted a significant portion of these funds each week to its general account where it was used for Blackfoot's own purposes.

During the period when Blackfoot had a substantial amount of trust funds in its general operating account rather than in its custodial account, Blackfoot was regularly making payments on its line of credit or operating loan from Idaho Bank & Trust Co. (cf, CX 16; TR 167-182)

While Blackfoot was depositing trust funds into its general operating account, even that was insufficient to prevent the general account from being overdrawn.

It was standard operating procedure for Blackfoot to divert custodial funds into its general account in order to enable it to more easily make payments on its operating loan.

In effect, Blackfoot was borrowing money from its consignors (without their permission) to help Blackfoot pay back the bank. In many cases, the custodial account was not reimbursed until the Wednesday or Thursday following a Friday sale. Blackfoot used its consignors' money for its own purposes and has endangered consignors' proceeds.

The Secretary has consistently held, and the courts have sustained, that the failure of a market agency to maintain its custodial account in accordance with the requirements of section 201.42 is a violation of sections 307 and 312(a) of the Act (7 USC §§ 208, 213(a)), as well as a violation of section 201.42 of the regulations. (9 CFR § 201.42) In re Arab Stock Yard, 37 Agric. Dec. 293, 301-02, 310-11 (1978); In re Breckenridge Auction & Sales Co, 36 Agric. Dec. 1522 (1977); In re Sechrist Sales Co., 36 Agric. Further, the Secretary has repeatedly determined that a market agency's failure to make deposits to its custodial account in the manner and within the times prescribed in section 201.42 is an unfair and deceptive practice. "It is deceptive because shippers do not know that their money is being used to extend credit to buyers. It is unfair because it is using trust money for their own purposes (to extend credit to themselves and others.)" In re Hardy, 33 Agric. Dec. at 1400.

It should be noted that Blackfoot had previously been placed on notice as to the requirements governing reimbursement of the custodial account in a letter dated November 17 1975. (CX 5) Blackfoot was aware of the requirements and the regulations are clear, yet, as Mr. Lake testified, it was standard practice to deposit funds into the general account and to reimburse the custodial account for those deposits and Blackfoot's own purchases at a later date. (cf., TR 771)

Therefore, Blackfoot has failed to maintain and use properly its custodial account and has used custodial funds for its own purposes in violation of sections 307 and 312(a) of the Act (7 USC §§ 208, 213(a)), and the regulations (9 CFR §§ 201.40, 201.42).

III

Respondent Blackfoot Wilfully Violated The Act By Engaging In An Exchange Of Checks (Check Kiting) With Uinta Livestock For The Purpose Of, Or With The Effect Of, Creating A False "Float" Or Balance In Both Companies' Bank Accounts

During the period from January 7 1981 through May 20 1981, respondent Blackfoot issued in excess of 75 drafts made payable to Uinta Livestock Commission Company. These drafts totalled $8,629,649.58. (FF 23; CX 17A) Uinta Livestock issued checks made payable to Blackfoot during the same period in the amount of $8,697,664.44. (FF 21; CX 17A) It is clear that whenever a Blackfoot draft was given to Uinta, a Uinta check for the same amount was issued, almost always on the same day, to Blackfoot.

Both Ms. Kimball [4] and Mr. Andreasen, office manager and owner, respectively, of Uinta, testified that Uinta had been given a Blackfoot draft book and was authorized, by Paul Thompson, who was at that time an owner and officer of Blackfoot, to issue Blackfoot drafts to Uinta. (TR 334) Both individuals further testified that many of the Blackfoot drafts were used to cover Uinta's almost daily overdraft position in its bank account. (FF 24; TR 309–10) Ms. Kimball testified that she immediately informed Kay Monson, a Blackfoot employee, whenever she issued a Blackfoot draft. (TR 338)

[4] Ms. Kimball's testimony is entitled to great weight and probative value. Her participation was described by her in a most direct, unhesitating, frank manner. She was completely open, sincere, and cooperative.

She had carried out her instructions as an employee of Uinta, and she took pains to describe accurately what was done.

Courage was required to so testify. She had been given no promise of any immunity of any kind. (TR 306)

In late April or early May 1981, many of the drafts began to show notations as to the names of sellers, number of head and weight of the livestock purportedly purchased and paid for by the particular draft. Ms. Kimball admitted that these entries were fictitious and that there were no livestock involved. (FF 25; TR 312) These entries were made at the request of Paul Thompson to allay Dennis Lake's concerns about the large amount of money involved. (TR 312, 332)

Respondent would like everyone to believe that it was simply financing Uinta's livestock purchases. Such a conclusion, however, ignores the clear dictates of all the evidence and defies all logic, since, at the time Blackfoot issued drafts to Uinta, there were not sufficent funds in Blackfoot's account to cover the drafts. (CX 18B; TR 285–293) Only the check given by Uinta in exchange permitted the Blackfoot draft to be honored. It is simply not possible for a person without funds to finance another.

Furthermore, both Kimball and Andreasen testified that they used many of these drafts solely to correct the overdraft position of Uinta's bank account and that Paul Thompson, at least, knew it. (TR 309, 346, 350) The sheer volume of the purchases, in excess of $8.6 million in a five-month period, suggests that these drafts were not for livestock purchases. It is virtually impossible that Uinta bought such a large amount of livestock on an almost daily basis. It is ludicrous to assert that Blackfoot was legitimately financing Uinta when Uinta was writing a check in exchange for Blackfoot's draft within minutes. (FF 26, TR 313) If Uinta could immediately repay Blackfoot, then there was no reason to borrow the money in the first place.

It is clear, therefore, that this arrangement between Blackfoot and Uinta was not a financing arrangement as Blackfoot would have us believe, but a deliberate attempt on the part of both Uinta and Blackfoot, with the full knowledge and complicity of each, to manipulate uncollected funds in their bank accounts.

An analysis shows Uinta's "net bank balance" (between 1/2/81 and 6/2/81) was in an overdraft position on each and every day except two. (CX 18A) Obviously, since some Blackfoot drafts were used to cover overdrafts in Uinta's account, Mr. Andreasen knew he did not have sufficient funds in his account to pay the Uinta checks issued in exchange for, or to repay, the Blackfoot drafts. Clearly, he was relying on being credited with the deposit of another Blackfoot draft into the Uinta account prior to that check being returned.

An analysis of Blackfoot's daily bank balances, based on the bank statements, with the Uinta checks which have been credited to Blackfoot's account although not yet presented for payment at Uinta's bank, and the amount of Blackfoot drafts issued to Uinta, but not yet presented to Blackfoot's bank for payment (TR 285, 286) shows a daily "net bank balance" for Blackfoot's account during the period January 2 1981 through May 29 1981 which, with few exceptions, was in an overdraft position. (CX 18B)

Tracing the following example of the exchange shows how the scheme operated. The first Blackfoot draft listed on CX 17A is draft #4449, dated January 7 1981, in the amount of $217,472.32. (CX 17B, p.1) Uinta deposited this draft in its account at Zions First National Bank on January 7 1981. (CX 17C, p. 1) On January 8 1981, Uinta issued its check #2583 to Blackfoot in the same amount, $217,472.32. (CX 17B, p. 2) Blackfoot deposited Uinta's check in its account at Idaho Bank and Trust Co. on January 12 1981. (CX 17D, p. 1) On January 7 1981, when Blackfoot's draft was issued in the amount of $217,472.32, Blackfoot had $45.27 in its bank account. (CX 18B, p. 1; CX 17G, p. 1) Clearly, when Blackfoot's draft was issued on January 7 1981, it did not have sufficient funds to cover the draft.

On January 8 1981, when Uinta issued its check for $217,472.32 in repayment of the Blackfoot draft, it had an account balance according to the bank statement of only $2,679.78. (CX 17E, p. 1) Its net bank balance after subtracting Blackfoot drafts credited to its account but not yet honored was an overdraft of $424,140.29. (CX 18A, p. 1) Uinta, too, had insufficient funds to cover its check.

Despite the fact that neither party had sufficient funds in their accounts, the drafts and checks were honored when presented because their account balances on the day of presentment appeared to be sufficient. By the time a draft or check arrived for payment, another check or draft had already been deposited. This creation of an artificial balance is the purpose of a check exchange. (TR 294)

During these five months, over 8.6 million dollars in checks and drafts, none of which had sufficient funds available in support of the instrument when issued, were issued and negotiated. This is commonly known as a check exchange, check kiting, or a manipulation of uncollected funds. (TR 294)

Mr. Angus Belliston, Senior Vice-President of Zions First National Bank, explained a manipulation of uncollected funds arrangements as follows:

> "Q: . . .[c]ould you explain what a manipulation of uncollected funds arrangements is?

A: Yes, I think so. When a person or company deposits someone else's checks into their own account at our bank, or any bank, what we really have is just paper.

We have a deposit of checks which represent money, but it isn't really money; it's just paper until we send those checks to the bank they're drawn on and receive the actual collected funds in the account.

And between the time the funds are deposited in the account at our bank and the time we actually get the funds from the bank they were drawn on, that's a time that we refer to as "float."

It's not real money, it's just uncollected funds. It's funds that are there on their account, and we have entered them on our ledger, but they really aren't charged yet, so we call them uncollected funds.

Sometimes, people try to manipulate those uncollected funds between banks to make it appear that there's real money there, and they spend the uncollected money, and we occasionally get caught. It's one of the risky parts of banking."

In fact, the bank did get caught when Dennis Lake refused to honor certain drafts. The damage to Uinta's bank was approximately $800,000.00 (TR 369).

Paul Thompson, Respondent's Vice-President during the period of the check-kiting activities (until his death about May 19 in an automobile accident) was the key and main link between Blackfoot Livestock and Uinta during the check-kiting activities. However, other Blackfoot Livestock employees were aware of the relationship with Unita, e.g., Kay Monson was called by Carol Kimball every time Carol wrote a Blackfoot draft in favor of Uinta and gave Kay Monson the numbers and date. In addition, Dennis Lake was aware of the relationship and was becoming concerned about it. (TR 338)

Furthermore, it should be noted that Ms. Kimball testified that the reason she put fictitious names and entries on the entries on the Blackfoot drafts was because Dennis Lake was concerned as to how Blackfoot's bank would view all these drafts issued to Uinta. (TR 323) Additionally, it was clear from Mr. Lake's testimony at the hearing that he is extremely knowledgeable as to the operations of Blackfoot. Mr. Lake has an accounting background up to and including some graduate level work in accounting. (TR 616, 617) Mr. Ellis has no formal education beyond high school. (Tr. 737) Mr. Lake noted that Paul Thompson was not a well-educated man; he was not even a high school graduate. (TR 738).

It is naive to believe, therefore, that Blackfoot's other part owners decided that Paul Thompson, a part owner without an accounting background, would have sole responsibility for monitoring and maintaining the records of a "financing" arrangement involving over 8.6 million dollars while Dennis Lake, the part owner with the accounting and financial background, knew nothing of this arrangement. Mr. Lake, in fact, admitted he supervised the maintenance of the books and records. (TR 738)

But, in any event, the respondent corporation is ultimately responsible for the acts of its officers in carrying out their functions on behalf of the respondent corporation. The extent of knowledge that any particular officer had at any particular point of time may be debatable, but not relevant for purposes here. Respondent corporation is responsible for the actions of its officers and employees in carrying out their duties. The evidence here clearly shows that more than one officer knew or should have known what was taking place. Respondent corporation bears the full and ultimate responsibility.

The evidence adduced at the hearing clearly demonstrates that Blackfoot was engaged in check-kiting with Uinta. As a result of its actions, Blackfoot created an artificial balance in its bank account which increased the financial exposure to sellers or consignors of livestock to Blackfoot. Blackfoot was relying on the "float." (TR 294, 371)

Accordingly, Blackfoot has engaged in an unfair and deceptive practice in violation of section 312(a) of the Act which warrants a severe sanction. cf., In re Lynn Rose and Twin Falls Livestock Commission Co., 41 Agric. Dec. 1557 (1982) (Rose), 41 Agric. Dec. 1386 (1982) (Twin Falls); In re Menchhofer Cattle Co., Lyle Menchhofer, Edward Wendel and Ronald Egbert, 40 Agric. Dec. 1324 (1981) (Menchhofer Cattle Co. and Menchhofer), 41 Agric. Dec. 464 (1982) (Egbert).

IV

Blackfoot Has Wilfully Violated The Act And Regulations By Permitting Dennis Lake And Delwyn Ellis, Its Owners And Officers, To Purchase Livestock Out Of Consignment For Resale For Their Own Speculative Accounts.

A market agency selling livestock on a commission basis has a fiduciary duty to each of its consignors to market his livestock in a manner best designed to enable the consignor to obtain the highest possible price for his livestock. Section 201.58 of the regulations promulgated under the Act requires the market to sell livestock in such a manner as to promote the interest of the consignors. (CFR § 201.58)

It is the responsibility of a market agency such as Blackfoot to obtain the true market value of the livestock for its consignors. The market should purchase livestock itself only to assure that the consignor gets the true market value of those livestock. (TR 462) Section 201.57(a) of the regulations in effect at the time of the transactions in question specifically provided that "[n]o market agency engaged in selling consigned livestock at auction shall permit its owners, officers, agents, or employees to purchase livestock from consignments for resale for their own speculative accounts . . . ." (9 CFR § 201.57(a)).

The regulation is designed to insure that the market agency fulfills its fiduciary duty to further the interests of its consignors. A market which purchases livestock out of consignment for speculative purposes, or permits its owners to do so, has a conflict of interest. If it begins speculating, it erodes its loyalty to the consignor; it is no longer seeking the highest possible dollar for the consignor, but rather acting in its own interest in order to maximize its potential profit on resale. (TR 539)

Whether a particular purchase is a purchase to support the market, and therefore consistent with fulfilling the market's fiduciary responsibility to its consignors, or a purchase for speculative resale depends upon an analysis of all the circumstances surrounding the case. No one single factor is dispositive.

Market support purchases are purchases made by the market when it feels that the highest bid does not reflect the true market value of the livestock. (TR 478)

Speculation out of consignment, on the other hand, is defined as purchasing livestock from consignment with the expectation or the intention of making a profit on the prompt resale of these animals, whether or not a profit is realized. (TR 461)

A market which purchases livestock out of consignment for speculative resale or permits its owners and officers to do so has breached its duty to its consignors in violation of the Act. See, e.g., In re Smithfield Livestock Market, Inc., 36 Agric. Dec. 1546, 1562–67 (1977).

The evidence in this case clearly demonstrates that Dennis Lake and Delwyn Ellis, the owners and officers of Blackfoot, consistently purchased large numbers of livestock consigned to Blackfoot, for sale on a commission basis, with the intent or expectation of promptly reselling them at a profit. Mr. Lake and Mr. Ellis regularly purchased a large volume of the consigned livestock. Such regular and voluminous purchases are not consistent with market support purchases and is a factor indicating that these purchases were made with the intent or expectation of making a profit. (TR 461)

Not only did Lake and Ellis purchase a large volume of livestock each week, but their purchases were treated in Blackfoot's records like any other transaction in which livestock was purchased for speculative resale, and not as market support purchases. Separate deal sheets were maintained for both Lake and Ellis. The livestock was invoiced to Lake and Ellis—not Blackfoot. There was no journal or other record kept showing these to be market support purchases. (TR 498, 499)

Significantly, even those cattle that Lake and Ellis could not resell and which were, therefore, sold through auction the following week were noted on the individual deal sheets as sales by Lake and Ellis. cf CX 20E, p. 5, 18 (11 head from Lake), and CX 20E, pp. 20, 29 (2 head from Ellis).

The purchases made by Mr. Lake and Mr. Ellis were their own individual purchases, kept totally separate as to purchase and resale. The profit, if any, generated by the transaction was noted on each deal sheet. See, e.g., the profit figure of $1,869.95 on CX 20E, p. 20.

In addition to having the purchases of Lake and Ellis kept as separate and individual transactions and not those of the market, Lake and Ellis handled these as dealer transactions. Mr. Blaine Ramey, a former owner of Blackfoot, testified that he still attends the Blackfoot sales most of the time and is familiar with the roles fulfilled by Mr. Lake and Mr. Ellis. (TR 662) He noted that Lake and Ellis compete with other bidders for cattle that they want to buy. (TR 663) They will bid on these cattle more than once in order to obtain them. (TR 663)

Actively bidding on cattle in competition with other bidders is the act of a person who is trying to get cattle for resale, presumably at a profit. If there are other bidders, Blackfoot should not want these cattle. Blackfoot should not bid on these cattle once the cattle are started unless and until the last bid is in and Blackfoot believes it is lower than true market value.

This, however, is not what Mr. Lake and Mr. Ellis did; when there were livestock in the ring which either sought, they actively bid on the cattle. (TR 663) They wanted these cattle for their own individual accounts, for profit on resale.

Mr. Lake, for example, had extensive dealings with a Joe Shrader, a dealer from Colorado. Mr. Shrader testified that he discussed Blackfoot consignments with Dennis Lake every Friday prior to the sale. (TR 518) During the course of these conversations, Mr. Shrader and Mr. Lake discussed the demand for heifers in Colorado and the prices dealers were willing to pay for them. (TR 519, 520) Generally, according to Mr. Shrader, Mr. Lake would call Shrader after the sale and ask him whether he would be willing to buy cattle that Lake had purchased that day at the sale. (TR 521)

In fact, Mr. Lake sold over 1700 head of cattle to Mr. Shrader, often at substantial profit. (CX 20A–P) For example, on February 5 1982, Lake sold 99 heifers to Mr. Shrader for $25,775.78 when he purchased these heifers earlier in the day out of consignment at a cost of $25,548.43. Mr. Lake made a profit of almost $2.30 per head in this transaction. (CX 20M,pp.5–9)

Dennis Lake was not trying to dispose of cattle he was forced to purchase because the last available bid did not reflect true market value. It appears more than likely that he was trying to purchase these cattle at the lowest possible price and resell them at the highest possible price—dealer behavior.

Unlike any other dealer, however, Lake had the advantage of knowing what livestock was being consigned to his market prior to sale day. While Mr. Ramey testified that the typical auction market knows approximately 85 percent of the cattle being consigned prior to sale day (TR 659), Lake testified that over 50 percent came on sale day. (TR 788) Regardless of which figure is used, it is clear that the market owners have an unfair advantage over outsiders who do not have similar information. See, e.g., In re Smithfield Livestock Market, 36 Agric. Dec at 1563.

Mr. Lake knew generally what Mr. Shrader was looking for and the price Shrader was willing to pay, before each auction began. He took advantage of this knowledge to buy significant numbers of livestock himself and resell to Mr. Shrader at a profit. This is more characteristic of a dealer buying and selling livestock for his own account. It is not market support.

Mr. Ellis, too, had his customers. James Paulsen testified that at the time of the transactions in the complaint, he was a co-owner and vice president of Bachman Cattle Company and, in that capacity, often bought feeder cattle from Mr. Ellis. (TR 391) During the heavy trading season, they would be in contact with each other several times a day. (TR 391)

Mr. Paulsen often "partnered" on an ad hoc basis with Mr. Ellis on cattle. Some of these "partnered" deals were on cattle consigned to Blackfoot market for sale. (TR 393)

Mr. Paulsen, at one point, indicated that they were operating at Ellis' "cost," consistent with their "partnering" relationship. Later, however, he hedged and eroded the point.

But, in any event, the records indicate that Mr. Ellis made $7.58 to $12.50 paper profit per head and $5.00 per head commission, totalling $805.00 on a transaction with Paulsen.

This transaction occurred about an hour after the auction ended. Surprisingly, Paulsen said he had been in attendance at that auction, but had not bid on those cattle. (TR 397) (Earlier, he had given an affidavit that he had not been at that sale, and that Mr. Ellis had phoned him describing the cattle and pricing them at Ellis' cost plus commission) (TR 398; RE 109, p. 4)

But, regardless of which version is correct, one fact is self-evident. The consignors who paid Blackfoot a commission to sell their livestock for the best possible price, very likely did not receive true market value if Ellis resold them at such an increased price within an hour. Blackfoot's fiduciary duty to its consignors suffered.

Another factor which indicates that Lake and Ellis were speculating out of consignments rather than supporting the market is that on most of these transactions they made a profit. Profit is not the sole criterion here, but it is a key element in the picture. (TR 494)

Excessive or consistent profit on the subsequent sale of livestock which the market or its owners purchase out of consignment is a strong indication that the market was not fulfilling its fiduciary duty to sell the livestock at the highest possible price for its consignors. The profits should belong to the consignors and the market receives a commission as its sole compensation for its selling services.

The circumstances surrounding the purchase of livestock out of consignment by Mr. Lake and Mr. Ellis demonstrates that these purchases were not market support purchases as Blackfoot contends, but rather were speculative purchases made with the intent or expectation of making a profit, whether or not a profit was realized.

If it were true market support, there would be no reason to maintain separate deal sheets for Mr. Lake and Mr. Ellis; there would only be a record for Blackfoot purchases. In true market support, one would not find the consistently large volume of purchases.

While market support purchases may result in a profit (if the market changes), one would not expect to find consistent and substantial profits on market support purchases, and certainly not profits of between $7.50 and $12.50 per head within an hour.

The evidence establishes that Blackfoot permitted its owners and officers to purchase livestock out of consignment for speculative resale in violation of sections 307 and 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. §§ 208, 213(a)), and section 201.57(a) of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.57(a)).

Blackfoot Wilfully Issued Drafts In Payment For Livestock In Violation Of The Act

There was no dispute at the oral hearing that Blackfoot issued drafts rather than checks in payment for its livestock purchases. (CX 21; TR 463) Mr. Lake's testimony was that while they used drafts in the past, they had discontinued using drafts at the time of the hearing. (TR 733)

Mr. Mooney, Blackfoot's banker, described the difference between a draft and a check as follows:

> "A draft is written for payment of something but it has to be accepted by the people who are drafting . . . When that draft is cleared, assuming the cattle are delivered, they have the option of paying it or not paying it. A check is drawn and has to be paid on presentment, unless you stop it."

(TR 478)

Mr. Mooney further explained that since the draft has no account number and the issuer has to be contacted to ascertain whether he accepts the draft, the bank must handle each draft manually. (TR 579) Mr. Mooney admitted that the extra time necessary to process the draft can take an additional day before the draft is honored. (TR 580)

Section 409(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 288b(a)) requires each packer, market agency or dealer purchasing livestock to pay for his purchases before the close of the next business day following purchase and transfer of possession of the livestock. Payment may be made by check or wire transfer.

The legislative history pertaining to passage of section 409 of the Act in 1976 clearly demonstrates that payment by use of a draft does not satisfy the prompt payment requirements of section 409(a). H.R. Rep. No. 94-1043, 94th Cong., 2nd Sess. 7 (1976) Under section 409(b), the parties may agree to payment in a manner other than that required in subsection (a). Such an agreement, however, must be in writing.

Blackfoot admitted it did not have any written agreements to pay for livestock purchases with drafts. (TR 463-64) Blackfoot, by using drafts, effectively granted itself extra time in which to pay for livestock without the seller's permission.

Issuing drafts in payment for livestock purchases without first obtaining a written extension of credit is an unfair and deceptive practice in violation of sections 312(a) and 409(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. §§ 213(a), 288b), and section 201.43(b) of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.43(b)).

VI

Jencks Act

At the conclusion of the direct testimony of most of complainant's witnesses, respondent's counsel requested, pursuant to the Jencks Act, 18 U.S.C. § 3500, all statements of the witness, including the investigation reports or any document in the possession of the United States, and relating in any way to the issues. (TR 91)

Counsel repeatedly sought complainant's investigative report. "I assume that there was some kind of investigative report prepared and we'd like a copy of it." (TR 92) " . . . it is respondent's position, and we respectively [sic] move at this time, that the investigative report—investigation report is a subject of Jencks and a proper subject of a motion and we move the Court for an order demanding of the United States that it be turned over to us." (TR 185)

During the hearing, several memoranda prepared by various witnesses were given to respondent. However, complainant never conceded that the investigation report was a "statement" of a witness as defined under the Jencks Act, and refused to voluntarily give the report to respondent. (See, e.g., TR 98, 185)

The disposition of this issue is governed by section 1.141(g)(1)(iii) of the Department's rules of practice (7 CFR § 1.141 (g)(1)(iii)) which provides that:

> "After a witness called by the complainant has testified on direct examination, any other party may request and obtain the production of any statement, or part thereof, of such witness in the possession of the complainant which > relates to the subject matter as to which the witness has testified. Such production shall be made according to the procedures and subject to the definitions and limitations prescribed by the Jencks Act (18 U.S.C. § 3500)"

7 CFR § 1.141(g)(1)(iii)

Pre-trial discovery is not generally permitted in administrative hearings. See, Ubiotica Corporation v. Food and Drug Administration, 427 F2d 376, 381 (6th Cir. 1970). Neither the Packers and Stockyards Act nor the Department's rules of practice provide for discovery.[5] Fairbank v. Hardin, 429 F2d 264, 268 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 943 (1970); In re Machado and Cozzi, 42 Agric. Dec 820 (October 20 1983) (decision as to respondent Cozzi) aff'd 749 F2d 36 (CA 9 1984); McClelland v. Andrus, 606 F2d 1278, 1285 (D.C. Cir. 1979); Moore v. Administrator, Veterans Administration, 475 F2d 1283, 1286 (D.C. Cir. 1973).

Respondent is entitled only to statements producible under the Jencks Act. The Jencks Act provides, in pertinent part:

> "After a witness called by the United States has testified on direct examination, the court shall, on motion of the defendant, order the United States to produce any statement (as hereinafter defined) of the witness in the possession of the United States which relates to the subject matter as to which the witness has testified. If the entire contents of any such statement relate to the subject matter of the testimony of the witness, the court shall order it to be delivered directly to the defendant for his examination and use. 18 U.S.C. § 3500(b)"

The Jencks Act sets forth the requisite factors to lay a foundation for the production of material in the possession of the United States. A proper foundation requires:

(1) that the defendant make a motion,

(2) after a government witness has testified on direct examination,

(3) for the production of a statement,

(4) as defined in the Act,

(5) which relates to the testimony on direct examination.

[5] Very limited exchange of information and proposed exhibits as authorized by section 1.140(a) of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 1.140(a) may arguably be labeled "discovery," but the point is not relevant nor material here.

A. Respondent is not entitled to complainant's entire investigative report

Respondent's concept of what constitutes a statement as defined in the Jencks Act is much too broad. As noted by the Judicial Officer in In re Machado and Cozzi, although the Jencks Act reaffirms the Jencks decision (353 U.S. 657, 665–69 (1957)) that a defendant is entitled to certain material in the possession of the government relating to the witness' testimony:

> "[t]he principal purpose of the Jencks Act is to prevent defendants from roving at will through Government files as a result of misinterpretation of the Jencks decision. Goldberg v. United States, 475 U.S. 94, 104 (1976); Palermo v. United States, 360 U.S. 343, 350, 354 (1959); United States v. Pope, 574 F.2d 320, 324 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 868, 436 U.S. 949, 436 U.S. 929 (1978); United States v. Nickell, 552, F.2d 684, 688–89 (6th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 904 (1978); United States v. Smaldone, 544 F.2d 456, 460 (10th Cir. 1976), cert. denied, 430 U.S. 967 (1977); United States v. Catalano, 491 F.2d 268, 274 (2nd Cir.), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 825 (1974); and see, Foster v. United States, 308 F.2d 751, 755–56 (8th Cir. 1962)."

In re Machado and Cozzi, supra, at page 840.

It is important to note exactly what respondent requested. Respondent specifically sought complainant's entire investigative report. For example, after Ms. Bergers, an auditor with the Packers and Stockyards Administration, testified as to the results of her investigation of respondent's financial condition, respondent made its purported Jencks Act request. "I assume that there was some kind of investigative report prepared and we'd like a copy of it." (TR 92) Respondent did not seek specific statements of Ms. Bergers, but rather "all statements, . . . including the investigation report . . . or any other [relevant] document which is in the possession of the United States . . . ." (TR 91, emphasis added).

After Mr. Kienow testified, respondent renewed his claim for the entire investigative report. "To the extent that this man was the [assistant] regional supervisor, at that time, of that particular office, I believe the entire report would be in his possession . . . and I would make a motion to the Court of such a thing [the investigative report]." (TR 183)

Respondent's counsel in pressing his argument for the entire file explained why he wanted it:

". . . I know Mr. Jones; I know that he's the ultimate officer that's charged by statute to sign these administrative disciplinary complaints. I understand that, but what—up to that time, there were many subtle and some not-so-subtle kinds of decision made within the agency, within the office of general counsel, within the financial protection branch which the P&SA, totally to the decision that it was going to bring this action . . . " (TR 187)

The following colloquy is significant:.

"The COURT: You're looking for the motivation for the complaint to be filed?

Mr. COOK: Yes, sir."

(TR 188) Respondent was seeking the agency's internal review of the case, the legal reasoning of complainant's attorneys, and the analysis of the evidence, not only of Ms. Bergers or of Mr. Kienow, but of the entire agency and the Office of the General Counsel. In order to prevent a chilling effect on the agency's deliberative privilege, such material has been held to be not a "statement" producible under the Jencks Act. United States v. Dark, 597 F.2d 1097, 1099 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 927 (1979); Ubiotica Corp. v. Food and Drug Administration, 427 F.2d at 381-82; In re Machado and Cozzi, supra, at page 840.

The Jencks Act does not authorize fishing expeditions by the defendant or an unrestrained search through government files. In re Machado and Cozzi, supra, at page 840, citing United States v. Graves, 428 F.2d 196, 199 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 960 (1970); United States v. O'Brien, 444 F.2d 1082, 1085 (7th Cir. 1971); United States v. Catalano, 491 F.2d at 274. An unlimited request for production of the entire investigative file was too broad in scope and character to be seriously considered under the Jencks Act.

B. Affidavits and memoranda of interviews with individuals not called as government witnesses are not producible under the Jencks Act.

Mr. Kienow testified respondent permitted its owners or officers to purchase livestock consigned to the market for sale on a commission basis. Respondent then requested any statements of specifically named persons who were interviewed by Mr. Kienow. (TR 465; RX 144) The request was later expanded beyond the affidavits of these individuals to include any memoranda or notes made by Mr. Kienow concerning the interviews of these witnesses. (TR 474)

None of these individuals listed on RX 144 were called as witnesses by complainant. Accordingly, by its terms the Jencks Act or the Department's rules of practice are not applicable since they provide that the respondent is entitled only to statements of a witness called by complainant. (7 CFR § 1.141(g)(1)(iii))

Respondent's argument that Mr. Kienow's taking affidavits from interviewees make that affidavit Kienow's statement, and thus a "statement" under Jencks (TR 469), is simply wrong.

An affidavit of another person, or a memorandum in which the interviewer writes down what the interviewee told him, is clearly not the "statement" of the interviewer. It is the statement of the person interviewed and producible under Jencks or the Department's rules of practice only if that person was called as a witness by complainant. Accordingly, the respondent's request for these affidavits and the memoranda pertaining to the interviews was properly denied as material facially not within the scope of the "Jencks" limitations here.

C. Job applications listing investigations not Jencks Act material

Respondent also requested that the SF 171 submitted by Mr. Kienow in applying for his present position as Regional Supervisor of the Omaha, Nebraska regional office of the Packers and Stockyards Administration be given it. (TR 222) The purported basis for respondent's motion was that Mr. Kienow testified that he listed his investigation of Blackfoot on his application as one of the investigations he had conducted while assigned to the Portland regional office. (TR 222)

The Department's rules of practice in adopting the Jencks Act definitions and limitations require that any statement of the witness to be producible must relate to the witness' direct testimony. (18 U.S.C. § 3500(b); In re Machado and Cozzi, supra, and cases cited therein)

Mr. Kienow's direct testimony concerned the schedules he prepared from his examination of respondent's records, the evidence supporting his schedules and the conclusions he drew as to whether the schedules and supporting documentation demonstrated violations of the Act and the regulations.

Essentially, respondent engaged in the broadest possible fishing expedition in the hope of helpful material or legal error. Respondent patently sought anything and everything for these two purposes. Respondent's focus, emphasis, persistence and intensity, was consistent, and did not distinguish between material arguably within the Jencks Act and far-out demands. The record fails to show that any Jencks Act material was withheld from respondent.

In fact, to the contrary, it shows that more than Jencks material was given to respondent in a futile attempt to satiate it's demands and timely move the process forward.

The record fails to show any arguable Jencks Act material which was not provided to respondent and nothing to warrant an in camera inspection of complainant's files and records.

A trial judge without a jury must exercise caution when requested to rummage through the non-evidentiary material in possession of complainant. The potential for prejudicial material is both bilateral and real.[6]

The record fails to lay a foundation to establish that demanded material came within the scope of the Jencks Act limitations so as to warrant an in camera inspection.

VII

Respondent's Violations of the Act and Regulations Are Wilful, Flagrant and Seriously Jeopardize the Interests of the Consignors of Livestock to Respondent's Market and the Industry

Respondent had previously been placed on notice concerning the prohibition against engaging in each of the violations alleged in the complaint, with the exception of the exchange of checks or check-kiting scheme. (CX 1–6)

The violations proven here were not accidental or inadvertent, but were, rather, committed with full knowledge that they were prohibited by the Act and regulations.

Respondent cannot avoid responsibility for exchanging some 75 drafts and checks with Uinta totalling $8.6 million.

As noted by the Judicial Officer in In re Lufkin Livestock Exchange, Inc., 27 Agric. Dec. 596, 609 (1968):

> "The term "willful" is one of many meanings. It is often used to denote an act which is intentional or knowing, or voluntary, as distinguished from accidental. In Great Western Food Distributors v. Brannan, 201 F.2d 476 (7th Cir. 1953), acts done intentionally were held to have been done willfully. Conduct is willful if a person intentionally does an act which is prohibited, irrespective of evil motive or reliance on erroneous advice, or if he acts with careless disregard of statutory requirements. Goodman v. Benson, 286 F.2d 896 (9th Cir. 1961)."

[6] Here, the investigators were out to investigate possible violations. Raw material suggesting possible violations (but which did not mature into complaint allegations) is probable. See, for example, RE #105, re possible tariff violations. Such matters may be highly prejudicial to respondents. On the other side, the file may contain material prejudicial to complainant, e.g., disagreements as to how the law should be interpreted/applied, potential factual or credibility weaknesses highlighted, etc.

Here respondent acted intentionally in careless disregard of the statutory requirements. Respondent, therefore, wilfully violated sections 307, 312(a) and 409(a) of the Act (7 USC §§ 208, 213(a), 228b), and sections 201.42, 201.43(b), and 201.57(a) of the regulations (9 CFR §§ 201.42, 201.43(b), 201.57(a)). See, e.g., Smithfield Livestock Market, Inc., 36 Agric. Dec. 1546 (1977); In re Hardy, 33 Agric. Dec. 1383 (1974); In re Lufkin Livestock Exchange, Inc., 27 Agric. Dec. 596 (1968).

The requirement that a market's current assets exceed its current liabilities is not frivolous. The prompt pay provision of the Act (7 USC § 228b) and the custodial account regulations requiring the market to pay the consignors the net proceeds from the sale of consigned livestock before the close of business on the day following sale (9 CFR § 201.43) mandate that the firm's current assets exceed its current liabilities. As noted by the Fifth Circuit, in Bowman, 363 F.2d at 85, current assets exceeding current liabilities is the sine qua non of prompt payment.

Blackfoot's solvency problems were compounded by the fact that on four separate dates analyzed by Packers and Stockyards Administration officials, there was a shortage in its custodial account. On those dates, the outstanding checks drawn on its custodial account exceeded its money in the bank, deposits in transit and current proceeds receivable. If all the outstanding checks had been presented for payment on the dates analyzed, there would have been insufficient funds available to pay the checks. The fact that no checks were returned is no defense. See, pp. 20–23, supra.

The bank could call the loan due at any point the bank felt it was in the best interest of the bank to do so. Problems of a serious magnitude would ensue.

The importance of registrants properly maintaining their ratio of current assets to current liabilities cannot be over-estimated where the agency is unable to routinely audit every market agency in the country. There are 1800 auction markets and approximately 6000 dealers throughout the country registered with the Secretary of Agriculture. (TR 533) It is, therefore, impossible to closely monitor the financial condition of all of them. (TR 534) The agency must rely on sanctions imposed in disciplinary proceedings to help effect voluntary compliance with the Act by respondents and others.

As was stated by the Judicial Officer in In re Miller, 33 Agric. Dec. 53, aff'd sub. nom, Miller v. Butz, 498 F.2d 1088 (5th Cir. 1974):

> "The remedial provisions of a regulatory program would be drastically affected if the agency could consider the effect of sanctions only on the respondents and not on others. It is well recognized that persons regulated by a governmental agency keep abreast of administrative proceedings. The actions of potential violators could be significantly affected by the sanctions imposed against other persons . . . ."

In re Miller, 33 Agric. Dec. at 66.

In addition to jeopardizing consignors' proceeds by operating with shortages in the custodial account, Blackfoot used consignors' funds for purposes of its own. By depositing proceeds received from the sale of consigned livestock in its general account, Blackfoot effectively used consignors' funds to finance its operations. There were numerous occasions where there were consignors' funds in Blackfoot's general account when Blackfoot was repaying loans extended it by its bank.

Blackfoot also engaged in a check exchange or kiting scheme with Uinta which enabled Blackfoot to create an artificial balance in its account by relying on the "float" or the time necessary for the checks and drafts to move through banking channels. The artificial balance gives Blackfoot the potential to buy more livestock than it would be able to if it had to have the funds already available in the account.

Purchasing livestock without having sufficient "real" funds as opposed to "paper money" (TR 371, 372) obviously poses an increased risk that the sellers would not be paid should the check-kiting scheme collapse. In this case, the sellers were not harmed because Blackfoot abruptly stopped the scheme leaving Uinta's bank to suffer the loss of $800,000.00. Had the bank first discovered the check-kiting and stopped honoring checks or drafts, the losses would very likely have been shifted to livestock sellers/cattlemen.

A market agency such as Blackfoot is the agent for the individuals who consign livestock for sale on a commission basis. Blackfoot's fiduciary duty to obtain the highest possible prices for each and every consignor's livestock is paramount. Blackfoot breached this duty by allowing its owners and officers, Dennis Lake and Delwyn Ellis, to consistently purchase large volumes of livestock out of consignment for resale on a speculative basis.

The evidence strongly indicates that Lake and Ellis rated their speculative profit opportunities over their duty to obtain the best price for their consignors. The consignors thus did not receive full value for their livestock. See, e.g., In re Smithfield Livestock Market, Inc., 36 Agric. Dec. at 1563.

Blackfoot introduced evidence that a suspension of its operations would not harm it or its owners, but would adversely affect the people it serves. (TR 735) Such an argument has no merit. Respondent's own witnesses indicated that there were numerous other markets in the area where producers can sell their livestock—seven (7) in the immediate area (RX 153; TR 649) and 49 others available to the sellers. (TR 464)

Moreover, in In re Red River Livestock Auction Inc., 36 Agric. Dec. 980, 989 (1977), the Judicial Officer stated that "the argument as to the hardship to the community resulting from a suspension order has repeatedly been rejected in determining sanctions under the Act." See also, In re Cordele Livestock Co., 36 Agric. Dec. 1114, 1128-29 (1977), aff'd per curiam (unpublished), 575 F.2d 879 (5th Cir. 1978).

Operating while insolvent and while its custodial account was not in balance, using custodial funds for purposes of its own, engaging in a check-kiting scheme, and purchasing livestock out of consignment for speculative resale demonstrates clearly that Blackfoot deliberately and wilfully placed its own interests ahead of those of its consignors and others in the livestock industry with whom it dealt. These practices go to the essence of a market agency's responsibilities. Respondent has repeatedly demonstrated an indifference to, if not outright contempt for, its mandated responsibilities.

Consideration has been given to the fact that the investigation did not show that any of respondent's checks or drafts were ever rejected for insufficient funds by the processing banks. Also, respondent points out that none of its livestock sellers ever went unpaid for livestock sold to respondent.

Respondent also had a significant line of credit (1 million dollars) and its officers had substantial personal assets. The fact that respondent cooperated with investigators and produced records and employees to explain them has also been considered. Respondent notes that there were no complaints filed by industry people against respondent. Also, respondent did not conceal anything from the investigators.

Respondent also capitalizes on the fact that it has operated its accounting system in the fashion described here for a long time without prior complaints.

However, these matters individually and cumulatively do not carry great weight.

It is also noted that respondent has stonewalled throughout these formal proceedings in the face of strong, clear, persuasive evidence of the violations. Respondent refuses to recognize its deficiencies and attempts to put complainant's witnesses on trial.

The evidence here on all points is both clear and convincing on each of the violations and it is almost beyond a reasonable doubt with reference to the check-kiting, insolvency and custodial account violations, if, in fact, it is not beyond a reasonable doubt on those points. The standard preponderance of the evidence is more than met in every instance here.

Respondent has violated sections 307, 312(a) and 409(a) of the Act (7 USC §§ 208, 213(a), 228(b), and sections 201.42, 201.43(b) and 201.57(a) of the regulations (9 CFR §§ 201.42, 201.43(b), 201.57(a)), as alleged.

The requested cease and desist order and suspension is appropriate, necessary, and well justified.

ADDITIONAL CONCLUSIONS BY THE JUDICIAL OFFICER

Leaving aside the check-kiting violations, the 35-day suspension order issued by the ALJ would have been very modest for the other violations, particularly since respondent had received prior warning letters as to the other violations. However, the check-kiting violations are so serious by themselves that they warrant more than the 6-month suspension being imposed.

The check-kiting violations involved more than 75 drafts (and corresponding checks) issued from January 7, 1981, through May 20, 1981, totalling $8.6 million. As the ALJ explains, there is no possibility that this could have been regarded by Blackfoot (or Uinta) as a financing arrangement rather than a check-kiting arrangement. Neither Blackfoot nor Uinta had sufficient funds to have the checks and drafts honored except for the "float" generated by the phony paper previously issued by Blackfoot and Uinta.

In addition, as explained by the ALJ, Blackfoot could hardly have believed that it was financing Uinta since Blackfoot usually deposited Uinta's check in Blackfoot's account on the same day (or 1 to 4 days earlier) than Blackfoot paid the corresponding draft.[7] To illustrate, the following table shows the dates on which Blackfoot drafts were deposited by Uinta with Zion Bank (which gave [7] Drafts were also drawn on Blackfoot payable to a number of persons and firms other than Uinta, and Blackfoot would pay for a number of drafts by a single check drawn from Blackfoot's General Account payable to its bank. For example, Blackfoot's General Account bank statement shows that on January 13, 1981, Blackfoot issued a check for $358,868.96 (CX 17G, p. 1) (left-hand column, 10th item down). That check paid for draft No. 4449 to Uinta for $217,472.32 issued on January 7, 1981 (CX 17B, p. 1), discussed by the ALJ, and seven other drafts not involving Uinta (CX 17F, p. 1).

(Where there are zeros, Blackfoot paid the drafts on the same day it deposited the corresponding Uinta checks.)

* Total does not include the dishonored draft of May 20, 1981, for $84,688.94.

On the 18 "Plus" days (Column 5 of the table), Blackfoot could have been regarded as financing Uinta (if Blackfoot had had sufficient funds in its General Account, excluding the check-kiting "float"), since Blackfoot paid the drafts before Blackfoot deposited Uinta's corresponding check.

However, on the 23 days in which zeros appear in Columns 5 and 6 in the table set forth above, and the 33 "Minus" days (Column 6 of the table), Blackfoot could not have been regarded as financing Uinta because Blackfoot either deposited Uinta's check on the same day on which Blackfoot paid the draft payable to Uinta (the "zero" days), or Blackfoot actually had deposited Uinta's check in Blackfoot's General Account from 1 to 4 days before Blackfoot paid the corresponding draft (the "Minus" days in Column 6 of the table).

Respondent relies on the fact that Blackfoot was held not liable to Uinta's bank, Zions First National Bank, in a case decided by a United States District Judge (Zions First National Bank v. Blackfoot Livestock Commission Co., Civ. No. C-83-1211W (D. Utah Apr. 16, 1985)). But the case is not only irrelevant, but the findings are more helpful to complainant than to respondent.

In the first place, the District Judge was applying the Uniform Commercial Code—not the Packers and Stockyards Act. In the second place, we do not know whether the District Judge had before him the evidence introduced here showing that Blackfoot was not really financing Uinta but, rather, was engaged in a check-kiting scheme with Uinta. In the third place, the District Judge decided only that Blackfoot was not liable for dishonoring three drafts drawn after Paul Thompson's death on May 17, 1981, viz., a draft for $84,688.94, dated May 20, 1981, a draft for $329,486.04, dated May 22, 1981, and a draft for $469,933.63, dated May 27, 1981. Hence the District Judge did not have before him any issue as to whether Blackfoot would have been liable for dishonoring drafts drawn while Paul Thompson was alive.

Moreover, the Judge's findings show that Paul Thompson, vice president and one-third owner of Blackfoot, allowed Uinta to draw drafts on Blackfoot and knew that the information about cattle on the face of the drafts was false. Specifically, the District Judge found:

> 35. From approximately 1977 and until his death, Thompson furnished Blackfoot draft books to Andreasen [of Uinta] and allowed Andreasen, and later Carol Kimball, to draw drafts on Blackfoot which drafts would be deposited in Uinta's bank account and which drafts after being forwarded by Uinta's bank to the Idaho bank would be accepted by Blackfoot. This would be done by the Idaho bank advising Blackfoot that a certain number of drafts in a certain amount had been received for payment and Blackfoot's bookkeeper would then go to the bank and examine the drafts. If the drafts were found to be acceptable the bookkeeper would advise the bank of Blackfoot's acceptance. Blackfoot would then issue its check to the Idaho bank in an amount to cover the drafts.
>
> 37. From March 1980 through May 16, 1981, Zions [Uinta's bank] processed many drafts drawn on Blackfoot signed for Uinta by Andreasen or Kimball and all of those drafts were accepted by Blackfoot on its Idaho bank with that bank remitting payment to Zions for Uinta.
>
> 38. . . . Andreasen [of Uinta] dealt exclusively on matters between Uinta and Blackfoot with Thompson prior to the latter's death.
>
> 41. In approximately early April of 1981 and after Blackfoot had become concerned about various of its practices relating to Uinta, Thompson instructed Andreasen that on any Blackfoot drafts executed by Uinta in the future that there should be listed on the face of the draft a description of the cattle including the number and weight thereof and the name of the seller of the cattle. After being given these instructions, Uinta did thereafter list that information on the face of the drafts.

42. In order to obtain money from Blackfoot to finance Uinta's operations after early April 1981, Andreasen and Kimball listed certain fictitious information about the cattle on the face of the drafts presented to the Idaho bank for Blackfoot and Thompson allowed these drafts to be accepted even though he knew of the fictitious cattle purchase information thereon. Thompson requested this fictitious information for the benefit of satisfying the packers and stockyards law and also for the purpose of deceiving others at Blackfoot. Only Thompson at Blackfoot knew that the information listed on the drafts presented by Uinta was false.

The foregoing findings by the court fully support complainant's position here that Blackfoot, through the actions of Paul Thompson, Blackfoot's vice president and one-third owner, engaged in an unfair and deceptive practice until the time of Thompson's death on May 17, 1981.

The basis for the court's decision in favor of Blackfoot is that after Paul Thompson's death, Uinta had no further authority to draw drafts on Blackfoot without permission, which was not given after May 17, 1981. Specifically, the court found and concluded:

44. Very shortly after the death of Thompson on May 17, 1981, Andreasen [of Uinta] and Lake [of Blackfoot] spoke by telephone. In that conversation, Lake informed Andreasen that Blackfoot would continue to finance Uinta. Andreasen advised Lake that he knew something had to be done and that he acknowledged that if Uinta needed to use any of Blackfoot's money that Andreasen would call Lake and let him know the amount that was needed and get Lake's okay before any further of Blackfoot's money was used. Whatever authority Andreasen or others at Uinta had to issue drafts on Blackfoot granted by Thompson terminated on the latter's death and the authority Uinta had after the conversation between Lake and Andreasen was conditioned on Uinta's obtaining approval from Blackfoot before writing drafts on its account.

45. Following this conversation on or about May 17, 1981 between Lake and Andreasen, the First, Second and Third Drafts referred to elsewhere in these Findings [which were the only drafts at issue in the court proceeding] were signed by Carol Kimball payable to the order of Uinta drawn on Blackfoot payable through the Idaho bank and deposited with Zions. At the time these three drafts were deposited with Zions and at all times thereafter until their acceptance was refused by Blackfoot, neither Kimball nor Andreasen nor anyone else with Uinta had sought or received from Lake or anyone else at Blackfoot agreement that such drafts would be accepted by Blackfoot when presented to its Idaho bank. To the extent it is relevant to any issue in this case, no person at Uinta after May 17, 1981, had any authority either express, apparent or implied to bind Blackfoot to acceptance on any drafts issued on that company.

* * * * * * *

51. On or about May 26, 1981, Lake and Ellis of Blackfoot became suspicious for the first time about Uinta's activities in using their drafts, and instructed the Idaho bank not to accept or pay on the First and Second Drafts.

52. On or about May 26, 1981, the Idaho bank, following an instruction of non-acceptance by Blackfoot, refused to pay the First and Second Drafts and pursuant to that instruction thereafter refused to pay the Third Draft.

53. Blackfoot did not act in bad faith in connection with its handling of its arrangement with Uinta.

54. Blackfoot had no intent to deceive or harm Zions.

* * * * * * *

4. Blackfoot did not sign the drafts within the meaning of UCC § 3-403(1).

5. Blackfoot is not the drawer of the drafts because Kimball did not have actual authority to sign the three drafts.

* * * * * * *

7. Blackfoot has no liability on the three drafts in question in this case.

8. Blackfoot is not estopped to refuse to accept the three drafts.

* * * * * * *

11. By its course of conduct in accepting drafts prior to May 20, 1981, Blackfoot made no actionable misrepresentation to Zions regarding the nature of its relationship with Uinta, the terms of its financing arrangement with Uinta or its actions with respect to accepting drafts in the future.

* * * * * * *

14. Blackfoot committed no fraud upon Zions either actual or constructive as it relates to the three drafts in question.

Although I infer from the record here that Lake, who supervised the maintenance of respondent's books and records and had an extensive accounting background, knew that respondent was engaging in a check-kiting arrangement with Uinta, and did not first become suspicious about the arrangement on May 26, 1981 (when Blackfoot dishonored the First and Second Drafts involved in the court litigation), Lake's prior knowledge is totally irrelevant in this disciplinary proceeding. Under the Packers and Stockyards Act, the "act, omission, or failure of any agent, officer, or other person acting for or employed by" any registrant, "within the scope of his employment or office, shall in every case also be deemed the act, omission, or failure" of such registrant (7 U.S.C. § 223). Accordingly, as the ALJ concluded, Blackfoot is fully responsible for the unfair and deceptive practices involved here even if Paul Thompson were the only individual who had knowledge of the check-kiting arrangement.

Furthermore, the fact that Paul Thompson is now deceased is not a mitigating circumstance which would lessen the sanction imposed on the corporation (even if he were the only one with knowledge of the check-kiting arrangement). This Department has repeatedly refused to lessen the sanction because a principal was unaware of the actions of its agents, or violations by a corporation were caused by one individual who is no longer with the corporation. In re Veg-Mix, Inc., 44 Agric. Dec. ____ (Aug. 21, 1985), appeal docketed, No. 85-1771 (D.C. Cir. Nov. 22, 1985); In re Old Virginia, Inc., 42 Agric. Dec. 270, 273 (1983); In re Esposito, 38 Agric. Dec. 613, 621-22 (1979). For example, in In re Veg-Mix, Inc., supra, it is stated (slip op. at 27):

> The case here is, in some respects, similar to In re Old Virginia, Inc., 42 Agric. Dec. 270, 272-73 (1983), in which certain persons caused payment violations by a corporation, and then skipped out, causing other innocent persons who were "responsibly connected" (7 U.S.C. § 499a(9)) with the corporation to be adversely affected by the disciplinary order issued against the corporation. But anyone who be> comes responsibly connected with a firm subject to the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act takes the risk that he or she will be adversely affected if the firm fails to pay for produce. That is an unfortunate consequence that is necessary if the remedial purposes of the Act are to be achieved.

Similarly, in In re Old Virginia, Inc., 42 Agric. Dec. 270, 273 (1983), it is stated:

> Respondent argued in its original brief, pages 8–13, that the corporate veil should be pierced, and that an order should be issued only against the guilty individuals who managed the corporation, rather than against the corporation.
> However, the "doctrine of piercing the corporate veil is a sword—not a shield." In re Casca, 34 Agric. Dec. 1917, 1933 (1975). It may be used to prevent a person from using the corporate fiction as a shield to escape the statutory penalty for misconduct, but not to protect a person (individual or corporate) from the statutory penalty for misconduct. Id 1930–33.

It should be noted that it makes no difference in this disciplinary proceeding whether the names written on the drafts purporting to represent livestock sellers were phony or not, or whether Paul Thompson knew that they were phony. Carol Kimball, who wrote the names on the Blackfoot drafts, testified that many of the names were phony, and that Thompson knew that phony names were being used. For example, with respect to the names on Draft No. 2760 dated April 16, 1981 (CX 17B, p. 90), Nielsen is Ms. Kimball's karate instructor, Dunmor is her girlfriend, and Foster is made up (Tr. 320–21). On Draft No. 2830 dated May 6, 1981 (CX 17B, p. 113), the name Jensen is a town, Paulus is Ms. Kimball's sister's married name, and Buffrey is her mother's maiden name (Tr. 321–23). (That draft not only gives the names of the three individuals but, also, gives the number of head and weight of the steers and heifers purportedly involved in the transaction.) But irrespective of whether the drafts were issued to enable Uinta to buy livestock or to enable Uinta to cover overdrafts in its bank account, respondent's violations are just as serious because respondent was not actually financing Uinta but was merely kiting checks with Uinta. (Since the check-kiting scheme was in connection with respondent's livestock business, the violations are, of course, subject to the Act.)

It should be further noted that respondent's check-kiting arrangement with Uinta was a serious and flagrant violation of the Act not because of the actual loss that may have occurred as a result of the arrangement,[8] but, rather, because a check-kiting arrangement of that size over an extended period of time has the potential for great harm. Considering the severe consequences that could result to livestock sellers or other innocent parties as a result of a check-kiting arrangement of the size and scope involved here, a suspension order of more than 6 months would be appropriate to serve as an effective deterrent against similar violations not only to respondent, but, also, to other potential violators.

It is the policy of this Department to impose severe sanctions for serious violations of any of the regulatory programs adminstered by the Department to serve as an effective deterrent not only to the respondents, but also to other potential violators. This policy has been followed in all of the Department's disciplinary proceedings in recent years.

The basis for the Department's severe sanction policy is set forth at great length in numerous decisions, e.g., In re Worsley, 33 Agric. Dec. 1547, 1556–71 (1974),[9] which is set forth as Appendix A to this decision.[10] The Department's sanction policy is also discussed at length in In re Esposito, 38 Agric. Dec. 613, 624–65 (1979).

[8] The synopsis of complainant's Investigation Report, introduced by respondent, states that Uinta went out of business owing about $1 million, of which nearly $200,000 was owed to livestock sellers (RX 101, p. 7). We have no way of knowing how much of the loss, if any, was caused by the check-kiting arrangement with respondent.

[9] The Department's severe sanction policy did not originate with Worsley, but, rather, was mentioned briefly in the first decision issued by the present Judicial Officer, In re Henner, 30 Agric. Dec. 1151, 1263–64 (1971), and was further developed in numerous other decisions before it was finalized in In re Miller, 33 Agric. Continued

Complainant originally recommended a 35-day suspension of respondent's registration, and that recommendation was adopted by the ALJ. However, on respondent's appeal, the Judicial Officer sua sponte raised the issue as to whether the suspension period should be substantially increased because the suspension period seemed so far out of line with the Department's sanction policy.

In its brief responding to the issue raised by the Judicial Officer as to whether the suspension period should be substantially increased, complainant continues to recommend a 35-day suspension period. Although complainant now recognizes that a check-kiting scheme "would normally warrant a suspension for a minimum of six months," and states that "[w]ere this case to be brought today, complainant would likely seek a suspension greater than 35 days" (Complainant's Brief at 4), complainant continues to recommend a 35-day suspension period here for a number of reasons.

First, complainant relies on the fact that complainant advised respondent of the sanction it would seek if a hearing were held, and this is a factor which respondents consider in deciding whether or not to settle a case. However, respondents should know (or guess) that the recommendation of complainant as to a sanction, although entitled to great weight, is not controlling. Although the Judicial Officer for many years adhered to the self-imposed limitation that he would never increase the sanction requested by administrative officials, in 1981 he overruled that portion of the Department's sanction policy which provided that the Judicial Officer would never increase the sanction recommended by administrative officials (in order to achieve uniformity in sanctions for comparable violations). In re Rowland, 40 Agric. Dec. 1934, 1952 (1981), aff'd, 713 F.2d 179 (6th Cir. 1983). Accordingly, at the time the complaint was issued in this case in 1983, a respondent had no guarantee that the Judicial Officer would not increase a sanction recommended by complainant.

Furthermore, the Judicial Officer had long before announced the view that in any case in which the Judicial Officer determines that the sanctions previously imposed for similar violations are not adequate under present circumstances to effectuate the purposes of the regulatory program, a more severe sanction would be imposed in the pending case, rather than merely announce that in future cases the sanction would be increased. In re Worsley, 33 Agric. Dec. 1547, 1569–70 (1974) (Appendix A at 22a–26a).

Accordingly, I give no weight to the facts that complainant's sanction policy in effect when this complaint was brought did not provide for a lengthy suspension order, and that complainant advised respondent prior to the hearing as to the sanction complainant would seek.

Complainant also considered three other "mitigating" circumstances when it originally decided to recommend a 35-day suspension period. First, complainant states (Complainant's Brief at 4–5):

> While the evidence introduced at the oral hearing clearly showed that Dennis Lake, as the owner with the accounting background, must have been and was aware of the check-kiting scheme, Paul Thompson was obviously the official most intimately involved with the scheme. Mr. Thompson died prior to the complaint being issued and while Blackfoot is responsible for his actions, a severe sanction for the check-kiting would not punish the most involved perpetrator.

However, for the reasons set forth above, it would be inconsistent with prior decisions to give any weight to that circumstance.

Complainant also states (Complainant's Brief at 5):

> Another factor was the Uinta Livestock Commission Company, the other participant in the scheme, was never charged because the evidence of the scheme was not discovered until months after Uinta's demise and it was determined that no useful purpose would be served by including a defunct and bankrupt corporation as a respondent.

The fact that a proceeding was not brought against Uinta is not a relevant consideration here, and to use that circumstance as a basis for reducing the sanction imposed here would be contrary to the Department's settled policy to impose severe sanctions for serious violations to serve as an effective deterrent to the respondent and to other potential violators.

Complainant further states (Complainant's Brief at 5):

> Still another factor was that the ultimate victim of the scheme was the Zions First National Bank, which was at the time vigorously seeking redress against Blackfoot in federal district court.

This, again, is not a circumstance that would be consistent with the Department's sanction policy, and, in addition, Zion was unsuccessful in its action against Blackfoot.

Complainant further states that "[s]uspending an auction market inevitably hurts local consignors" (Complainant's Brief at 5), but it has consistently been held that any hardship to the respondent's community, customers, or employees which might result from a suspension order is given no weight in determining the sanction since the national interest of having fair and competitive conditions in the livestock and meat industries prevails over the local interests which might be temporarily damaged as a result of a suspension order.[11] (In addition, Mr. Kienow, Regional Supervisor of Complainant's Omaha office, testified that there were seven other auction markets in the Blackfoot region that were competitors of Blackfoot (Tr. 464)).

Complainant cites a number of consent decisions involving check-kiting schemes in which the suspension period varied from 30 days (held in abeyance) to 4 months (Complainant's Brief at 5). But it is well settled that consent decisions are given no weight in determining sanctions in litigated cases. In re Worsley, 33 Agric. Dec. 1547, 1569 (1974) (Appendix A at 23a–24a). In the only contested case cited by complainant, a 90-day suspension order was imposed. In re Amaral & Brazil, 36 Agric. Dec. 872, 894 (1977). However, in the most recent check-swapping case, In re Farmers & Ranchers Livestock Auction, Inc., 45 Agric. Dec. ____ (Feb. 27, 1986), a 5-year suspension order was imposed. In that case, as in the present case, there were a number of other violations in addition to the check-kiting violations, but, in view of the similarity between this case and Farmers & Ranchers, a suspension order of 1 year or more would have to be imposed in the present case to be consistent with Farmers & Ranchers. However, in deference to complainant's continued recommendation for a lenient sanction in this case, and since this issue is raised sua sponte by the Judicial Officer on respondent's appeal, only a 6-month suspension order will be imposed here.

In respondent's brief as to the issues raised sua sponte by the Judicial Officer, respondent contends that the findings by the district court in Zions, discussed above, to the effect that Blackfoot was engaged in a financing arrangement with Uinta, are res judicata. However, the Department was not a party to the action brought by Zions First National Bank against Blackfoot Livestock Commission Company and, therefore, the action cannot be binding against the Department in this administrative proceeding. In addition, as set forth above, we do not know whether the district judge had before him the massive evidence that we have here showing that Blackfoot was engaged in a check-kiting scheme, rather than a financing arrangement. Moreover, as shown above, the district court's findings are fully supportive of complainant's position here that Blackfoot was engaging in an unfair and deceptive practice in violation of the Packers and Stockyards Act. Accordingly, the record fully supports the increase in the suspension period, which issue was raised sua sponte by the Judicial Officer.

The Department's practice which permits the Judicial Officer to increase sua sponte the sanction on respondent's appeal is stated in Campbell, "The Packers and Stockyards Act Regulatory Program," 1 Davidson, Agricultural Law, § 3.24 (1981 and Aug. 1985 Supp.), as follows:

> In addition, the judicial officer may raise additional issues on appeal sua sponte with notice to the parties [footnote omitted]. In one case, in which the judge suspended a registrant for 30 days, and the respondent appealed seeking to reduce the sanction, the judicial officer sua sponte raised the issue of whether the suspension should be for a longer period, and ultimately suspended the registrant for 60 days.[149]
>
> An appeal filed by a party cannot be withdrawn as a matter of right [footnote omitted]. Accordingly, a respondent planning to file an appeal in a case in which complainant does not appeal should consider whether the sanction in the initial decision is consistent with the sanctions imposed by the judicial officer in previous cases. The present judicial officer has frequently increased sanctions on > appeal [footnote omitted], but has only rarely reduced sanctions on appeal [footnote omitted].

However, that action was taken only because the sanction originally imposed was "so far out of line" with what the judicial officer regarded as appropriate. In re Esposito, 38 Agric Dec 613, 623 n 7 (1979); and see In re Unionville Sales Co, 38 Agric Dec 1207, 1207-10 (1979) (remand order), final decision, 40 Agric Dec 736 (1981). In re Rowland, 40 Agric Dec 1934, 1952-53 (1981), affd, 713 F2d 179 (6th Cir 1983). It does not violate due process or the equal protection clause of the Constitution for the judicial officer to increase the sanction when the respondent appeals, either sua sponte or at the request of complainant in its response to respondent's appeal. In re Thornton, 41 Agric Dec 870, 909-12 (1982), affd, 715 F2d 1508 (11th Cir 1983).

The authority of the Judicial Officer to raise the issue sua sponte as to whether the sanction should be increased, when only the respondent appeals, stems from the rules of practice, which provide (7 CFR § 1.145(e)):

> (e) Scope of Argument. Argument to be heard on appeal, whether oral or on brief, shall be limited to the issues raised in the appeal or in the response to the appeal, except that if the Judicial Officer determines that additional issues should be argued, the parties shall be given reasonable notice of such determination, so as to permit preparation of adequate arguments on all issues to be argued.

The authority of the Judicial Officer to increase sua sponte the sanction on respondent's appeal has been very sparingly exercised. It was never exercised during the 30 years the Department's first Judicial Officer served in this position, and it has been exercised on only two other occasions during the 15 years the present Judicial Officer has served in this position. On the first occasion in Mid-States, referred to in the preceding quotation, the sanction was increased from 30 days to 60 days by the Judicial Officer. On the other occasion, although the Judicial Officer sua sponte raised the issue as to whether the sanction should be increased under certain factual circumstances, he also explained that the sanction should be reduced under other factual circumstances. He remanded the case to the ALJ to determine the facts, which ultimately resulted in a reduction in the sanction. In re Unionville Sales Co., 38 Agric. Dec. 1207, 1209-10 (1979) (remand order), final decision, 40 Agric. Dec. 736 (1981).[12]

[12] In three other cases, the Judicial Officer increased the sanction on respondent's appeal because complainant had filed a cross-appeal in each case. In the latter

In Thornton v. USDA, 715 F.2d 1508, 1512–13 (11th Cir. 1983), the court expressly held that the Judicial Officer has the power to increase the sanction where respondent has appealed. The court held (id.):

> III. PENALTY ENHANCEMENT
>
> Relying upon the rationale of North Carolina v. Pearce, 395 U.S. 711, 724, 89 S.Ct. 2072, 2080, 23 L.Ed.2d 656 (1969) ("the imposition of a penalty upon the defendant for having successfully pursued a statutory right of appeal . . . would be . . . a violation of due procees of law"), respondent Thornton maintains that the Judicial Officer's enhancement of his penalty to include a one year disqualification violates his fifth amendment right to due process. He reasons that the severe sanction of disqualification is punitive rather than remedial and, because it could not have been imposed upon him had he not exercised his right of appeal, that the disqualification is actually a punishment for having appealed.
> We are not persuaded by respondent's argument. To the extent that the disqualification is punitive, it is punishment for the offense of soring and not for the appeal. Under section 8(a) of the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. § 557(b), "On appeal from or review of the initial decision, the agency has all the powers which it would have in making the initial decision." As the ninth circuit recognized in Containerfreight Transport Co. v. ICC, 651 F.2d 668, 670 (9th Cir. 1981), the review provision of the Administrative Procedure Act authorizes the agency "to decide all issues de novo." The review is actually a species of retrial. The Supreme Court recognized in North Carolina v. Pearce, 395 U.S. at 723, 89 S.Ct. at 2079 that a judge "is not constitutionally precluded . . . from imposing a new two of those cases, the Judicial Officer also sua sponte raised the issue as to whether the sanction should be increased as a precautionary tactic in the event that the court should erroneously hold that the issue could not be raised in a cross-appeal. In re McConnell, 44 Agric. Dec. ___ (Mar. 8, 1985); In re Thornton, 41 Agric. Dec. 870, 900–13 (1982), aff'd, 715 F.2d 1508 (11th Cir. 1983). That tactic was utilized since in In re Wall, 38 Agric. Dec. 1437 (1979), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, No. 79-3714 (6th Cir. July 10, 1981) (unpublished order), printed in 40 Agric. Dec. 927 (1981), the court set aside the Judicial Officer's increase of the sanction on the erroneous view that complainant had not filed a cross-appeal. (Since complainant had in fact filed a cross-appeal in Wall, the Judicial Officer did not notify the parties that he was sua sponte raising any issue as to the sanction.)

> sentence, whether greater or less than the original sentence" upon such a retrial. The only constitutional limitation upon this right is that any penalty already suffered prior to retrial must be "credited" towards the subsequent sentence so that the actual penalty imposed does not exceed the maximum limits for a single commission of the offense. Id. at 718, 89 S.Ct. at 2077. No such constitutional violation was committed in this case. The disqualification provision is supplementary to, not an alternative for, the imposition of a fine. 15 U.S.C. § 1825(c). It was lawfully imposed by the Judicial Officer.

In Wall (note 12, supra), the court, in addition to failing to recognize that complainant had filed a cross-appeal, relied upon North Carolina v. Pearce, which is distinguished by the court in Thornton, just quoted. Specifically, the court stated in Wall (slip op. at 2–3, reprinted in 40 Agric. Dec. 927, 927–28):

> Plaintiff also challenges the propriety of the Secretary's remedial order. After hearing the evidence in this case, the ALJ fined plaintiff $2,000.00 and ordered him disqualified from exhibiting any horse in a show for a period of two years. Plaintiff appealed the ALJ's decision to the Department of the Agriculture Judicial Officer. No cross-appeal was taken by the Secretary. In his decision, the Judicial Officer enhanced the penalties assessed by the ALJ and ordered plaintiff to pay $2,000.00 and to be disqualified from exhibiting any horse in a show for a period of five years [the minimum permitted by the statute for a second offense, which was the case here]. Absent notice by cross-appeal that the Secretary sought to augment the remedial order of the ALJ, the Judicial Officer's decision to do so is an abuse of discretion. The ALJ heard the evidence and his findings of fact in support of his remedial order are not clearly erroneous. Cf. North Carolina v. Pierce, 395 U.S. 711 (1969) (augmented sentence predicated upon pursuit of statutory right of appeal of criminal conviction is a denial of due process).

The erroneous reliance on North Carolina v. Pearce by the court in Wall is set forth at greater length by the Judicial Officer in Thornton, supra (41 Agric. Dec. at 909–12):

> Finally, the court's reliance in Wall on North Carolina v. Pearce, 395 U.S. 711 (1969), is misplaced. The Court held in Pearce that where a defendant successfully appeals a criminal conviction and is retried, the "original conviction has, at the defendant's behest, been wholly nullified and the slate wiped clean" (395 U.S. at 721); and, accordingly, there is no constitutional prohibition against increasing the penalty after the new trial (id. at 719–23), so long as the defendant is credited with the punishment already exacted on the basis of the original trial (id. at 717–19).

To the very limited extent, if any, to which Pearce is analogous to Wall, the Pearce case indicates that when Wall appealed the [ALJ's] initial decision, the slate was "wiped clean" (395 U.S. at 721), the initial decision was no longer in effect, and an increased sanction could constitutionally be imposed (395 U.S. at 719–23).

In Pearce, it was argued that the imposition of a more severe sentence upon retrial creates an invidious classification violative of the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. (This is analogous to the argument in the present case that the imposition of a more severe sanction after an appeal by a respondent creates an invidious classification upon those who choose to avail themselves of their appellate rights. See Brief and Argument of Respondent Thornton in Opposition to Complainant's Cross Appeal 2–3). In rejecting that argument, the Court held (395 U.S. at 722–23):

> The other argument advanced in support of the proposition that the Constitution absolutely forbids the imposition of a more severe sentence upon retrial is grounded upon the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. The theory is advanced that, since convicts who do not seek new trials cannot have their sentences increased, it creates an invidious classification to impose that risk only upon those who succeed in getting their original convictions set aside. The argument, while not lacking in ingenuity, cannot withstand close examination. In the first place, we deal here, not with increases in existing sentences, but with the imposition of wholly new sentences after wholly new trials. Putting that conceptual nicety to one side, however, the problem before us simply cannot be rationally dealt with in terms of 'classifications.' A man who is retried after his > first conviction has been set aside may be acquitted. If convicted, he may receive a shorter sentence, he may receive the same sentence, or he may receive a longer sentence than the one originally imposed. The result may depend upon a particular combination of infinite variables peculiar to each individual trial. It simply cannot be said that a State has invidiously 'classified' those who successfully seek new trials, any more than that the State has invidiously 'classified' those prisoners whose convictions are not set aside by denying the members of that group the opportunity to be acquitted. To fit the problem of this case into an equal protection framework is a task too Procrustean to be rationally accomplished.

In cases before the Department as in Pearce (see 395 U.S. at 722, just quoted), when a respondent appeals to the Judicial Officer, he has the opportunity to have the complaint dismissed (e.g., In re Hygrade Food Products Corp., 35 Agric. Dec. 129 (1976)), to have the sanction drastically reduced (e.g., In re Alex's Produce, 41 Agric. Dec. [287] (Feb. 3, 1982)), to receive the same sanction (e.g., In re Fleming, 40 Agric. Dec. 1521 (1981), appeal docketed, No. 82-3095 (6th Cir. Feb. 1, 1982)), or to have the sanction increased (e.g., In re Mid-States Livestock, Inc., 37 Agric. Dec. 547 (1977), aff'd sub nom. Van Wyk v. Bergland, 570 F.2d 701 (8th Cir. 1978)). Pearce suggests [21] that any of those possibilities are permitted by the constitution.

[21] Pearce is not directly in point since Pearce deals with a new trial (after appeal) whereas here [i.e., in Thornton], as in Wall, we are dealing with the same case on the initial appeal.

The concluding part of the decision in North Carolina v. Pearce, 395 U.S. 711, 723-26 (1969), which may have been relied on by the court in Wall, is not remotely in point or analogous to Wall. In that section of the Pearce opinion, the Court explains that it is a violation of due process to impose a heavier sentence upon every reconvicted defendant for the explicit purpose of punishing the defendant for having successfully appealed. Specifically, the Court held (395 U.S. at 723-26):

> It can hardly be doubted that it would be a flagrant violation of the Fourteenth Amendment for a state trial court to follow an announced practice of imposing a heavier sentence upon every reconvicted defendant for the explicit purpose of punishing the defendant for his having succeeded in getting his original conviction set aside. . . .

Due process of law, then, requires that vindictiveness against a defendant for having successfully attacked his first conviction must play no part in the sentence he receives after a new trial. And since the fear of such vindictiveness may unconstitutionally deter a defendant's exercise of the right to appeal or collaterally attack his first conviction, due process also requires that a defendant be freed of apprehension of such a retaliatory motivation on the part of the sentencing judge.[20] (Footnote omitted).

In order to assure the absence of such a motivation, we have concluded that whenever a judge imposes a more severe sentence upon a defendant after a new trial, the reasons for his doing so must affirmatively appear. Those reasons must be based upon objective information concerning identifiable conduct on the part of the defendant occurring after the time of the original sentencing proceeding. And the factual data upon which the increased sentence is based must be made part of the record, so that the constitutional legitimacy of the increased sentence may be fully reviewed on appeal.

That portion of the Court's opinion in Pearce has no relevancy to the present [Thornton] case or to the Wall case. When the Judicial Officer issued his decision in Wall, it was not after Wall had appealed an earlier order and had it set aside. Rather, Wall was appealing to the Judicial Officer for the first time. Hence there could be no possibility that the Judicial Officer had the motive of punishing the respondent for having succeeded in getting the Judicial Officer's original order set aside.

Furthermore, the concluding part of North Carolina v. Pearce merely holds that to assure the absence of motivation to penalize the defendant for having succeeded in getting his original conviction set aside, the judge imposing a more severe sentence after a new trial must affirmatively show his reasons for doing so. As stated above, the Judicial Officer affirmatively set forth the strongest possible reason for increasing the sanction in Wall, viz., the statute requires that any disqualification order for a repeat offender be for a minimum of five years.[22]

[22] Some of the decisions cited by the Court in North Carolina v. Pearce, 395 U.S. 711, 724-25 (1969), refer to the constitutional need not to "chill" the right of appeal. But the cases refer to procedural impediments to appeals, or to substantive policy to punish persons who exercise their right of appeal. No case holds that the constitution is violated merely because the defendant knows from past decisions that a particular judge (or Judicial Officer) imposes severe sanctions for serious violations in every case, irrespective of who appeals. The Judicial Officer will readily concede that it does not take an acute or legally trained mind, or much reading in Agriculture Decisions, to perceive that the present Judicial Officer imposes severe sanctions for serious or repeated violations in every case (generally including minimum disqualification orders in Horse Protection Act cases), so as to achieve the remedial purposes of the regulatory programs administered by the Department of Agriculture. If this uniform policy chills a respondent's desire to appeal, that does not present a constitutional issue. In the present case, respondent Thornton was not deterred from appealing to the Judicial Officer notwithstanding the fact that the Judicial Officer's severe sanction policy, and his application of the policy in Horse Protection Act cases, is set forth fully in In re Rowland, 40 Agric. Dec. 1934 (1981), appeal docketed, No. 82-3015 (6th Cir. Jan. 8, 1982), which was attached to Judge Weber's initial decision in the present case.

For the foregoing reasons, there is no procedural impediment to the increase in respondent's sanction by the Judicial Officer.

Respondent urges that the ALJ erred in denying its frequent requests for alleged Jencks Act material, and in failing to perform an in camera examination of complainant's documents (see Tr. 91-109, 183-223, 256-57, 304-05, 315-17, 349, 376, 401, 426-27, 464-78, 513-14, 610c-11, 792-98). However, for the reasons stated by the ALJ, no error was committed in this respect. See In re Machado, 42 Agric. Dec. ____ (Oct. 20, 1983) (decision as to respondent Cozzi), aff'd, 749 F.2d 36 (9th Cir. 1984) (attached as Appendix B to this decision).

For the foregoing reasons, the following order should be issued.

ORDER

Respondent Blackfoot Livestock Commission Co., its officers, directors, agents and employees, directly or indirectly through any corporate or other device, shall cease and desist from:

1. Engaging in business as a dealer or market agency while its current liabilities exceed its current assets;

2. Using funds received as proceeds from the sale of livestock sold on a commission basis for purposes of its own or for purposes other than the payment of lawful marketing charges and the remittance of net proceeds to shippers, and making such other use of shippers' proceeds in its possession or control as well endanger or impair the faithful and prompt accounting therefor and payment of the portions thereof due to the person or persons entitled thereto;

3. Failing to deposit in its "Custodial Account for Shippers' Proceeds," within the time prescribed by section 201.42(c) of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.42(c)), an amount equal to the proceeds receivable from the sale of consigned livestock;

4. Failing to otherwise maintain its "Custodial Account for Shippers' Proceeds" in conformity with the provisions of section 201.42 of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.42);

5. Exchanging drafts or checks with any person for the purpose or with the effect of concealing the true amount of funds available in any checking or other bank account, or of creating a false "float" or balance in any such account;

6. Permitting owners, officers, agents, or employees to buy livestock out of consignment for resale for their own speculative accounts; and

7. Paying for livestock with a draft which is not a check unless the seller expressly agrees in writing before the transaction that payment may be made by such a draft.

Respondent is suspended as a registrant under the Act for a period of 6 months and thereafter until it demonstrates that it is no longer insolvent and that the deficit in its Custodial Account for Shippers' Proceeds has been eliminated. When respondent demonstrates that it is no longer insolvent and that the deficit in its Custodial Account for Shippers' Proceeds has been eliminated, a supplemental order will be issued in this proceeding terminating this suspension after the expiration of the 6-month period.

The cease and desist provisions of this order shall become effective on the day after service of this order on respondent. The suspension provisions shall become effective on the 30th day after service on respondent.

DECISION AND ORDER UPON ADMISSION OF FACTS BY REASON OF DEFAULT

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, as amended and supplemented (7 U.S.C. § 181 et seq.), herein referred to as the Act, instituted by a complaint filed by the Administrator, Packers and Stockyards Administration, United States Department of Agriculture, charging that the respondent wilfully violated the Act and the regulations issued thereunder (9 CFR § 201.1 et seq.).

Copies of the complaint and Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.130 et seq.) governing proceedings under the Act were served on the respondent. Respondent was informed in a letter of service that an answer should be filed pursuant to the Rules of Practice and that failure to answer would constitute an admission of all the material allegations contained in the complaint.

Respondent has failed to file an answer within the time prescribed in the Rules of Practice, and the material facts alleged in the complaint, which are admitted by respondent's failure to file an answer, are adopted and set forth herein as findings of fact.

This decision and order, therefore, is issued pursuant to section 1.139 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.139).

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. (a) Kenneth Dee Sorrels, hereinafter referred to as the respondent, is an individual whose business mailing address is P. O. Box 131, Atkins, Arkansas 72823.

(b) Respondent is, and at all times material herein was:

(1) Engaged in the business of a market agency buying livestock in commerce on a commission basis; and

(2) Registered with the Secretary of Agriculture as a dealer to buy and sell livestock in commerce for his own account and as a market agency to buy livestock in commerce on a commission basis.

2. The Packers and Stockyards Administration notified respondent on June 5, 1985, that the $10,000.00 trust fund agreement he maintained to secure the performance of his livestock obligations under the Act was inadequate and that it was necessary to increase such trust fund agreement to $20,000.00. Respondent failed to increase his trust fund agreement. Respondent was notified on July 2, 1985, that his trust fund agreement would terminate on August 1, 1985, and that if he continued his livestock operations without adequate bond coverage or its equivalent, he would be in violation of section 312(a) of the Act and sections 201.29 and 201.30 of the regulations. Notwithstanding such notice, respondent has continued to engage in the business of a market agency buying livestock in commerce on a commission basis, without maintaining bond coverage or its equivalent, as required by the Act and the regulations.

CONCLUSIONS

By reason of the facts found in Finding of Fact 2 herein, respondent has wilfully violated section 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 213(a)), and sections 201.29 and 201.30 of the regulations (9 CFR §§ 201.29, 201.30).

ORDER

Respondent Kenneth Dee Sorrels, his agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, shall cease and desist from engaging in business in any capacity for which bonding is required under the Packers and Stockyards Act, without filing and maintaining a reasonable bond or its equivalent, as required by the Act and the regulations.

Respondent is suspended as a registrant under the Act until such time as he complies fully with the bonding requirements under the Act and the regulations. When respondent demonstrates that he is in full compliance with such bonding requirements, a supplemental order will be issued in this proceeding terminating this suspension.

In accordance with section 312(b) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 213(b)), respondent is assessed a civil penalty in the amount of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00).

This decision and order shall become final without further proceedings 35 days after service hereof unless appealed to the Judicial Officer within 30 days after service (7 CFR §§ 1.139, 1.145).

Copies hereof shall be served on the parties.

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, as amended and supplemented (7 U.S.C. § 181 et seq.), herein referred to as the Act, instituted by a complaint filed by the Administrator, Packers and Stockyards Administration, United States Department of Agriculture, charging that the respondent wilfully violated the Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder (9 CFR § 201.1 et seq.).

Copies of the complaint and Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.130 et seq.) governing proceedings under the Act were served on the respondent. Respondent was informed in a letter of service that an answer should be filed pursuant to the Rules of Practice and that failure to answer would constitute an admission of all the material allegations contained in the complaint.

Respondent has failed to file an answer within the time prescribed in the Rules of Practice, and the material facts alleged in the complaint, which are admitted by respondent's failure to file an answer, are adopted and set forth herein as findings of fact.

This decision and order, therefore, is issued pursuant to section 1.139 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.139).

1. (a) Ralph B. Shaw, hereinafter referred to as the respondent, is an individual whose business mailing address is Route #5, Box 294, Athens, Alabama 35611.

(b) The respondent is, and at all times material herein was:

(1) Engaged in the business of buying and selling livestock in commerce for his own account and buying livestock in commerce on a commission basis; and

(2) Registered with the Secretary of Agriculture as a dealer to buy and sell livestock in commerce for his own account and as a market agency to buy livestock in commerce on a commission basis.

2. Respondent was notified by certified mail on July 9, 1985, that the $35,000.00 surety bond he maintained to secure the performance of his livestock obligations under the Act was being terminated on July 31, 1985. Respondent was further notified that if he continued his livestock operations under the Act without providing adequate bond coverage or its equivalent, he would be in violation of section 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 213(a)), and sections 201.29 and 201.30 of the regulations. Notwithstanding such notice, respondent has continued to engage in the business of a dealer buying and selling livestock in commerce for his own account and the business of a market agency buying livestock in commerce on a commission basis without maintaining an adequate bond or its equivalent as required by the Act and the regulations.

CONCLUSIONS

By reason of the facts found in Finding of Fact 2 herein, respondent has wilfully violated section 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 213(a)), and sections 201.29 and 201.30 of the regulations (9 CFR §§ 201.29, 201.30).

ORDER

Ralph B. Shaw, his agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with his business subject to the Packers and Stockyards Act, shall cease and desist from engaging in business in any capacity for which bonding is required under the Packers and Stockyards Act, as amended and supplemented, and the regulations, without filing and maintaining an adequate bond or its equivalent, as required by the Act and the regulations.

Insofar as respondent is now in full compliance with the bonding requirements under the Act and the regulations, no suspension is warranted.

In accordance with section 312(b) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 213(b)), respondent is hereby assessed a civil penalty in the amount of One Thousand Eight Hundred Dollars ($1,800.00).

This decision and order shall become final without further proceedings 35 days after service hereof unless appealed to the Judicial Officer within 30 days after service (7 CFR §§ 1.139, 1.145).

Copies hereof shall be served on the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER UPON ADMISSION OF FACTS BY REASON OF DEFAULT

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, as amended and supplemented (7 U.S.C. § 181 et seq.), herein referred to as the Act, instituted by a complaint filed by the Administrator, Packers and Stockyards Administration, United States Department of Agriculture, charging that the respondent wilfully violated the Act.

Copies of the complaint and Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.130 et seq.) governing proceedings under the Act were served on the respondent. Respondent was informed in a letter of service that an answer should be filed pursuant to the Rules of Practice and that failure to answer would constitute an admission of all the material allegations contained in the complaint.

Respondent has failed to file an answer within the time prescribed in the Rules of Practice, and the material facts alleged in the complaint, which are admitted by respondent's failure to file an answer, are adopted and set forth herein as findings of fact.

This decision and order, therefore, is issued pursuant to section 1.139 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.139).

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. (a) Steve M. Mickelson, hereinafter referred to as the respondent, is an individual whose business mailing address is Route 2, Box 284A, Minong, Wisconsin 54849.

(b) The respondent is, and at all times material herein was:

(1) Engaged in the business of buying and selling livestock in commerce for his own account and the accounts of others; and

(2) Registered with the Secretary of Agriculture as a dealer to buy and sell livestock in commerce for his own account.

2. (a) As of March 28, 1985, the respondent's current liabilities exceeded his current assets. As of that date, the respondent had current liabilities in the amount of $124,962.51 and current assets in the amount of $300.00, resulting in an excess of current liabilities over current assets of $124,662.51.

(b) The respondent's current liabilities presently exceed his current assets.

3. The respondent, in connection with his operations subject to the Act, on or about the dates and in the transactions set forth in paragraph III of the complaint, purchased livestock and in purported payment for such livestock, issued checks which were returned unpaid by the bank on which they were drawn. Certain of the checks were returned because respondent did not have sufficient funds on deposit and available in the account on which they were drawn to pay such checks when presented and others because the account had been closed.

4. (a) Respondent, in connection with his operations subject to the Act, on or about the dates and in the transactions set forth in paragraph III of the complaint, purchased livestock and failed to pay, when due, the full purchase price of such livestock.

(b) As of April 17, 1985, there remained unpaid a total of $114,277.78 for such livestock purchases.

CONCLUSIONS

By reason of the facts found in Finding of Fact 2 herein, the financial condition of the respondent does not meet the requirements of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 204).

By reason of the facts alleged in Findings of Fact 3 and 4 herein, the respondent has wilfully violated sections 312(a) and 409 of the Act (7 U.S.C. §§ 213(a), 228b).

ORDER

Respondent Steve M. Mickelson, his agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with his operations subject to the Packers and Stockyards Act, shall cease and desist from:

1. Issuing checks in payment for livestock purchases without having and maintaining sufficient funds on deposit and available in the accounts upon which such checks are drawn to pay such checks when presented;

2. Failing to pay, when due, the full purchase price of livestock; and

3. Failing to pay the full purchase price of livestock.

Respondent is suspended as a registrant under the Act for a period of six (6) months, and thereafter until such time as he demonstrates that his financial condition meets the requirements of the Act, that is, that his current assets exceed his current liabilities. When the respondent demonstrates that his current assets exceed his current liabilities, a supplemental order will be issued in accordance with the terms of this decision, terminating the suspension after the expiration of the six (6) month period.

This decision and order shall become final without further proceedings 35 days after service hereof unless appealed to the Judicial Officer within 30 days after service (7 CFR §§ 1.139, 1.145).

Copies hereof shall be served on the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, as amended and supplemented (7 U.S.C. § 181 et seq., hereafter referred to as the "Act",) instituted by a complaint filed on February 23, 1984.

The complaint alleges that the respondent willfully violated sections 307 and 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. §§ 208, 213(a)), and section 201.42 of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.42), in that respondent failed to maintain and use properly its custodial account for shippers' proceeds. The complaint also charged respondent with willfully violating sections 307 and 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. §§ 208, 213(a)), and section 201.64 of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.64) by guaranteeing certain consignors of livestock the minimum price they would receive from the sale of their livestock at the stockyard. A third allegation charged that respondent willfully violated sections 307 and 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. §§ 208, 213(a)) by providing free or reduced trucking of livestock to consignors.

Respondent filed an answer on March 6, 1984, admitting the jurisdictional allegations of the complaint, but denying each of the substantive allegations of the complaint. On May 9, 1985, the parties filed stipulations wherein the respondent admitted the factual allegations of the complaint and stipulated to the authenticity and admissability of complainant's exhibit numbers 1–47.

An oral hearing was held on May 15, 1985, in Fort Smith, Arkansas. Respondent was represented by Gerard D. Eftink, Esquire, Kansas City, Missouri. Complainant was represented by Barbara S. Harris, Office of the General Counsel, United States Department of Agriculture. At the close of the hearing, the time was set for the filing of briefs.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Farmers Livestock Auction, Inc., hereafter referred to as the respondent, is a corporation with its principal place of business located at Springdale, Arkansas. Its business mailing address is 1301 East Emma Avenue, Springdale, Arkansas 72764.

2. Respondent is, and at all times material herein was:

(a) Engaged in the business of conducting and operating the Farmers Livestock Auction, Inc., stockyard, a stockyard posted under and subject to the provisions of the Act, hereafter referred to as the stockyard;

(b) Engaged in the business of selling livestock on a commission basis at the stockyard, and buying and selling livestock in commerce for its own account; and

(c) Registered with the Secretary of Agriculture as a market agency to sell livestock on a commission basis, and as a dealer to buy and sell livestock for its own account.

3. Mr. Harold Sargent is the president of Farmers Livestock Auction, Inc.

4. Custodial Account

Market agencies are required to establish and maintain an account in which are placed funds received from the sale of consigned livestock. Such account must be maintained apart from the market agency's other accounts, as a separate bank account and trust fund.

Such account may be used only to pay the livestock sellers and to reimburse the market for its lawful marketing charges.

All funds received from the sale of consigned livestock are deposited directly to the custodial account. The market agency is required to reimburse that account by the close of the next business day for livestock sold to owners, officers, agents, employees, and anyone to whom the market has extended credit. The market agency is required to reimburse that account within seven days of the sale date for any uncollected proceeds receivable.

A market agency is required to maintain a custodial account because such agency sells livestock on commission for others. It receives funds from the sale of livestock, which are proceeds due to the livestock sellers. The custodial account is established so that such funds are protected for the benefit of the livestock sellers, as trust funds.

If the account is not properly maintained there will be insufficient funds in the account to pay the livestock sellers. Funds not properly maintained in the account lose their trust nature, and are not available for the benefit of the livestock seller, in the event of a financial failure of the market agency. Where the market agency has the funds properly protected, as trust funds in the custodial account, a lending bank has no right of offset against those funds, since it is a trust account. Custodial funds are protected by the federal deposit insurance corporation for the full limits of the insurance coverage for each individual consignor. In other words each individual consignor, who has funds in that account is protected to the limits of $100,000.00, FDIC insurance.

When the market agency deposits its proceeds from a sale to its general account, rather than the custodial account, the funds are not protected as trust funds for the benefit of the livestock sellers, and lose the full benefits of the FDIC insurance.

The market agency is required to reimburse the custodial account for its owners, officers, and employees' purchases by the close of the next business day, rather than in seven days, as other buyers, because they are generally subject to the provisions of the Packers and Stockyard Act and subject to the payment requirements by section 409 of the Act. (7 U.S.C. 228 b). Further, such persons are involved with the market itself, and there is no need to allow additional time to collect the funds for the custodial account.

On the other hand, the market agency has seven days to reimburse the account for uncollected funds in order to give the market the opportunity to collect the funds from the buyer, rather than reimbursing the account from its own funds. (TR 9-12).

5. Prior to August 30, 1982, regulations were in effect which required that a market agency deposit to its custodial account on or before the third day after the sale of consigned livestock an amount equal to all uncollected proceeds receivable. The effect of this regulation was to require a market agency to borrow significant sums of money to put into the custodial account to cover uncollected proceeds. A task force, chaired by Mr. Harold Davis and composed of other employees of Complainant and attorneys from the Office of General Counsel reviewed this regulation along with others, and in a task force report made the following observations:

> "The current requirements of section 201.42 that market agencies establish and maintain a separate account designated as a custodial account for shippers' proceeds were reviewed at length by the task force. All of the task force members were convinced of the necessity and reasonableness of a custodial account requirement. The task force members were of the singular view, based upon their experiences with the marketing of livestock through stockyards and auction markets, that the primary basis for the protection afforded by custodial or trust accounts is the requirement that market agencies deposit to the account, directly and as soon as possible after receipt, the proceeds from the sale of consigned livestock. The principles that each payment made by a buyer for livestock is a trust fund, and that funds deposited into the custodial account are also trust funds are fundamental to this protection. The task force does not recommend any change in these concepts.
> We are also of the opinion that market agencies must be required to reimburse the custodial account, at some point in time, in the amount of the uncollected receivables. Our discussions focused on making a determination as to the appropriate and reasonable time to require such reimbursement. The task force concluded that a market agency should be allowed a period of 7 days following the sale of consigned livestock within which to reimburse the account for uncollected receivables. We were acutely aware in formulating this recommendation of two factors. The first is our firm conviction that it is necessary to have a reimbursement requirement to afford a reasonable measure of protection to consignors. The second factor is the current high cost of borrowed money.

We do not believe a 7-day period would significantly diminish the level of protection of consignors' funds. The recommended 7-day period gives market agencies adequate time to collect from the buyers of consigned livestock. Thus our recommendation, if adopted, should reduce substantially the amount of funds market agencies must, under current requirements, either maintain on hand or borrow in order to reimburse the account. These savings will reduce the cost of doing business, or alternatively will be released for new investment. We believe the savings can be significant for small businesses and for the industry as a whole.

If a market agency chooses to extend credit to its buyers, then it should continue to be required to reimburse the account by the close of the next business day. We believe strongly that consignors should not be made to bear the risks associated with such extensions of credit. . . . (Emphasis added)"

6. Pursuant to this recommendation, the regulation was changed, effective August 30, 1982, so that market agencies thereafter were allowed seven days in which to put money into the custodial account to cover uncollected receivables. 9 CFR 201.42.

7. On or about September 16, 1982, Jack Bellew, Regional Supervisor of the Packers and Stockyards Administration, sent a letter to respondent, which respondent received. That letter read as follows:

Dear Sirs:

Section 201.42 of the regulations issued under the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, was amended effective August 30, 1982. This regulation sets forth the current requirements for the establishment and maintenance of custodial accounts for shippers' proceeds.

The principle changes in the regulation:

1. Provide for reimbursement of the custodial account for uncollected proceeds within 7 calendar days instead of 3 business days as was previously required;

2. Provide for maintenance of custodial funds in interest-bearing savings accounts as well as certificates of deposit (the savings account or certificate of deposit must be in the same bank in which the custodial account is maintained and the market agency must maintain sufficient funds in the custodial account to pay all checks as they are presented);

3. Clarify the requirement that the proceeds received be deposited directly to the custodial account unless the account has been reimbursed in full for the uncollected proceeds; and

4. Eliminate the net method of handling custodial funds.

A copy of the amended regulation is enclosed for your information. If you have any questions, please feel free to contact this office. (Rx. 1)

8. In the spring 1983, Ms. Loretta Bailey, an auditor with the Packers and Stockyards Administration's Memphis, Tennessee, Regional Office, conducted an audit of the respondent's business records. Ms. Bailey's analysis of respondent's custodial account for shippers' proceeds revealed that as of May 3, 1983, respondent had a shortage in its custodial account in the amount of $9,764.92. As of that date, respondent had proceeds due shippers in the amount of $0.30 and issued and outstanding custodial account checks in the amount of $237,742.39, and had, to offset the outstanding checks, balances in its custodial bank accounts totalling $195,460.61, no deposits in transit or proceeds on hand, and current proceeds receivable in the amount of $32,517.16.

9. An analysis of respondent's general account as of May 3, 1983, revealed that respondent had insufficient funds in that account on that date to reimburse the custodial account for its shortage. As of May 3, 1983, respondent's general account had a balance per bank statement of $3,140.11, and outstanding checks totalling $46,253.15, resulting in a shortage of $43,113.04.

10. As of March 29, 1983, respondent had a shortage in its custodial account in the amount of $62,482.85. As of that date, respondent had issued and outstanding custodial account checks in the amount of $335,980.43, and had, to offset the outstanding checks, balances in its custodial bank accounts totalling $255,871.94, no deposits in transit, and current proceeds receivable in the amount of $17,625.64.

11. An analysis of respondent's general account as of March 29, 1983, revealed that respondent had insufficient funds in that account on that date to reimburse the custodial account for its shortage. As of March 29, respondent's general account had a balance per bank statement of $92,658.20, and outstanding checks totalling $240,935.67, resulting in a shortage of $148,277.47.

12. The shortages in respondent's custodial account described above were caused in part by the failure of respondent to deposit in its custodial account, within the respective time prescribed by the regulations an amount equal to the proceeds from purchases of consigned livestock by Harold Sargent, respondent's president.

13. The deficiencies in the custodial account were also caused by respondent's deposit to its general account of sale proceeds which should properly have been deposited immediately to its custodial account.

14. Respondent, during the period March 29, 1983, through May 3, 1983, failed to maintain and use properly its custodial account for shippers' proceeds thereby endangering the faithful and prompt accounting therefor and the payment of the portions thereof due the owners and consignors of livestock.

15. On December 9, 1969, the Judicial Officer of the United States Department of Agriculture issued a consent order against the respondent (In re Farmers Livestock Auction, Inc., P. & S. Docket No. 4240). The respondent was ordered, inter alia, to cease and desist from (1) using funds received as proceeds from the sale, in commerce, of livestock handled on a commission basis for purposes of its own and purposes other than the remittance of net proceeds to shippers; (2) using funds received as proceeds for the sale, in commerce, of livestock handled on a commission basis in such manner as to endanger or impair the faithful and prompt accounting therefor and payment of the portions thereof due owners and consignors of livestock; and (3) failing to maintain its custodial account for shippers' proceeds in conformity with the provisions of section 201.42 of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.42).

16. Respondent, for the purpose of inducing certain owners to consign their livestock to the stockyard for sale, guaranteed to such owners or consignors of livestock the minimum price or prices which they would receive from the sale of their livestock at the stockyard, and in connection with such guarantees made payments or rebates to some consignors in addition to the net proceeds due from the sale of their livestock. A tabulation of consignors receiving price guarantees for their livestock is set forth in paragraph III of the complaint.

17. Respondent, for the purpose of inducing certain owners to consign their livestock to the stockyard for sale, provided free transportation of livestock or paid half the transportation charges to certain consignors. A tabulation of consignors receiving free or reduced cost transportation of livestock is set forth in paragraph IV of the complaint.

CONCLUSIONS

All contentions of the parties have been considered in the light of the record evidence, and it is concluded that respondent has willfully violated the Act in that respondent:

a. has failed to maintain and use properly its custodial account; and

b. has committed unfair and unjust discriminatory practices in guaranteeing prices and providing free or reduced transportation costs to consignors.

Further, the order proposed by complainant is appropriate in view of the record evidence and is issued herewith.

CUSTODIAL ACCOUNT

The evidence introduced at the oral hearing establishes that on May 3, 1983, and March 29, 1983, respondent had shortages in its custodial account in the amounts of $9,764.92, and $62,482.85 respectively. By allowing such shortages to arise, respondent failed to maintain and use properly its custodial account in violation of the Act and regulations.

Every market agency subject to the Packers and Stockyards Act is required to establish and properly maintain a Custodial Account for Shippers' Proceeds (9 CFR § 201.42(b)). Section 201.42(c) of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.42(c)) in effect at the time of the alleged violations gives detailed instructions on how to properly maintain a custodial account:

> (c) Deposits in custodial accounts. The market agency shall deposit in its custodial account before the close of the next business day (the next day on which banks are customarily open for business whether or not the market agency does business on that day) after livestock is sold (1) the proceeds from the sale of livestock that have been collected, and (2) an amount equal to the proceeds receivable from the sale of livestock that are due from (i) the market agency, (ii) any owner, officer or employee of the market agency, and (iii) any buyer to whom the market agency has extended credit. The market agency shall thereafter deposit in the custodial account all proceeds collected until the account has been reimbursed in full, and shall, before the close of > the seventh day following the sale of livestock, deposit an amount equal to all the remaining proceeds receivable whether or not the proceeds have been collected by the market agency.

Respondent urges that the failure to properly use and maintain the custodial account resulted from a misunderstanding of the task force report (Finding 5) and of the letter sent to him by the Packers and Stockyards Administration (Finding 7) which summarized the changes in the custodial account regulation. Respondent asserts that after reading the letter, respondent thought it had seven days to reimburse the custodial account, and thereafter, began waiting until the Thursday or Friday following the Friday sale to make full reimbursement.

The letter is short, unambiguous and to the point. It makes no attempt to set out the new regulation in full, but states clearly that it is pointing out only the changes in the regulation. Where a provision of the regulation was left intact, it was not outlined in the letter. Since the provision of section 201.42, which requires that proceeds due from owners be deposited by the close of thenext business day was not specifically mentioned in the letter, it was unchanged by the amendment.

A copy of the amended regulation was enclosed with the letter and neither Mr. Sargent or Ms. Parsons, respondent's witnesses, could unequivocally state that the respondent did not receive such enclosure. The regulation states without qualification that proceeds due from owners must be deposited by the close of the next business day. By taking seven days, respondent succeeded in extending credit to itself.

Even under respondent's own view of the regulation, that it had seven days to reimburse the custodial account for uncollected funds, it was in violation. The evidence produced at the oral hearing established that respondent on two occasions took at least nine days to reimburse the custodial account. (Cx 3 p.2 and Cx 6 p.2). The teller's stamps show that the deposit to reimburse the custodial account for the April 29, 1983, sale was not delivered to the bank until May 9, 1983, and the deposit to reimburse the account for the March 25, 1983, sale was not made until April 4, 1983.

Complainant's exhibits numbered 1, 2, 4 and 5 reveal the reasons for the shortages in respondent's custodial account.

In the first instance, respondent consistently failed to deposit to its custodial account, in accordance with the regulations, amounts equal to the proceeds receivable due from Harold Sargent, its president and owner.

Under section 201.42(c) of the regulations, the respondent is required to reimburse the custodial account for its purchases or for the purchases of its owners or officers by the close of the next business banking day following the sale. Complainant's exhibits 1 (pages 1 and 7) and 4 (pages 1 and 8) show that contrary to the regulatory mandate, respondent failed to reimburse the custodial account for Mr. Sargent's purchases on the Mondays following the Friday sales. Thus, proceeds due from Harold Sargent for the sale date of April 29, 1983 were uncollected as of May 3, 1983 and proceeds due from him for purchases on March 25, 1983, remained uncollected on March 29, 1983.

The second reason for the shortages in respondent's custodial account was respondent's deposits to its general account of proceeds received from the sale of consigned livestock.

The Secretary has consistently held that the failure of a market agency to maintain its custodial account in accordance with the requirements of section 201.42 is a violation of sections 307 and 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. §§ 208, 213(a)), as well as a violation of section 201.42 of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.42). In re Arab Stock Yard, 37 A.D. 293, 301-02, 310-02, 310-11 (1978); aff'd 582 F.2d 39(CA 5 1978); In re Sechrist Sales Co., 36 A.D. 665, 666, 671-75 (1977); In re Hardy, 33 A.D. 1383, 1398-1406 (1974).

Further, the Secretary has determined time and again that a market agency's failure to make deposits to its custodial account in the manner and within the times prescribed in section 201.42 is an unfair and deceptive practice. "It is deceptive because shippers do not know that their money is being used to extend credit to buyers. It is unfair because it is using trust money for their own purposes (to extend credit to themselves and others). It creates a risk that the consignors will not be paid." In re Hardy, supra, 33 A.D. at 1400.

Respondent suggests that the concept of willfulness found in the case of Leon Farrow and Knoke Livestock Buyers v. U.S.D.A., 760 F.2d 211 (8th Cir. 1985) be applied in this case. This argument is not persuasive.

Leon Farrow and Knoke Livestock Buyers, Inc., were registered dealers under the Act authorized to buy and sell livestock in commerce. The dispute centered around the sale of "pound cows" at the Algona Livestock Auction and Exchange in Algona, Iowa. Knoke and Farrow were regular buyers at the exchange. Complainant had alleged that the two entered and carried out an agreement not to compete against each other in the purchase of pound cows. 760 F.2d at 212.

The Court of Appeals set aside the Judicial Officer's suspension order stating:

> "We cannot sustain the JO's view that petitioners must have known their agreement was unlawful" 760 F.2d at 216.

The Court noted further at page 216:

> "We are mindful that nothing in 7 U.S.C. § 204, authorizing suspensions, "confines its application to cases of 'intentional and flagrant conduct' or denies its application in cases of negligent or careless violations." Butz v. Clover Livestock Comm'n Co., 411 U.S. 182, 187 (1973). Butz was a case where the suspension order was based on violations committed in disregard of previous warnings, not present here. The Supreme Court also expressed doubt as to this court's premise that the Secretary's practice was to impose suspensions only in cases on international and flagrant conduct.
>
> Here, however, the JO's decision indicates that under Department policy the admittedly severe order is predicated on the violation being flagrant and serious.
> Although we think it the sounder view that the agreement between the two principal buyers at a small sale can be deemed an unfair practice, we have found no case on all fours."

The facts here and in Farrow are distinguishable. The latter case involved an agreement for the purchase of "pound cows" at a Livestock Auction. The present case involves the maintenance and proper use of the custodial account, a long standing regulatory requirement designed to protect the consignors of livestock. This requirement was not unknown to respondent.

A consent decision was issued against the respondent in 1969 for custodial account violations. Under the terms of the decision, respondent was ordered, inter alia, to cease and desist from failing to properly maintain its custodial account proceeds for its own purposes. (CX 46) It should also be noted that in September, 1982, respondent was notified by the Packers and Stockyards Administration of the August 30, 1982, changes in the custodial account regulations. (Finding 7) Despite its obvious awareness of the requirements of the regulations, however, respondent continued to deposit funds into the general account and to reimburse the custodial account for those deposits and its president's own purchases after the time set by regulations.

It must be concluded, therefore, that respondent's course of conduct with respect to the maintenance and use of its custodial account, as determined herein, constitutes a willful violation of the Act (7 U.S.C. §§ 208, 213(a)), and of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.42).

The definition of willfulness is well settled. A violation is willful if the respondent intentionally does an act which is prohibited, irrespective of evil motive or reliance on erroneous advice, or acts with careless disregard of statutory requirements. Butz v. Glover Livestock Commission Co., 411 U.S. 182 (1973). The Supreme Court's position in Glover has been adopted by the Judicial Officer and is controlling in cases brought under the Packers and Stockyards Act. In re Shatkin, 34 Agric. Dec. 296 (1975). Thus, it is the standard to be employed in this case notwithstanding respondent's reliance upon cases decided under other statutory programs, or the holding in Farrow.

Respondent asserts that there was no likelihood of injury to consignors and, therefore, the shortages were merely technical. This contention must fail, however, as proof of likelihood of injury is not required in a custodial account case.

With respect to respondent's bank credit arrangements, decisions under the Act and regulations have held that a line of credit or over-draft protection extended by a bank is no defense to a charge that a custodial account for shippers' proceeds is not being maintained properly. In re Sechrist Sales Co., supra, 36 A.D. at 668, 670–75. A line of credit does not provide the consignors of livestock and respondent's creditors the protection required by the Act and regulations. The relationship between Mr. Sargent and the First National Bank of Springdale may be cordial and longstanding, but as Mr. Parsons, the bank president, testified, the line of credit was subject to unilateral termination by the bank at his discretion.

Nor is respondent's assertion that no consignor was harmed by the shortages a meritorious defense. A consistent line of precedent has held that it is the duty of the Packers and Stockyards Administration to prevent potential injury by stopping unlawful practices in their incipiency. Farrow and Knoke v. U.S.D.A., supra, 760 F.2d at 215; In re Miller, 33 A.D. 53, 62, aff'd sub. nom. 498 F.2d 1088 (CA 5, 1974). As Harold Davis of the Packers & Stockyards Administration testified, the danger is ever present that a consignor will not get paid. (Tr. 10–12).

Guaranteed Prices to Certain Consignors, and Reduced Transportation Costs to Certain Consignors

Respondent guaranteed to certain consignors of livestock the minimum price they would receive from the sale of their livestock and in connection with such guarantees made payments to some consignors in addition to the net proceeds due from the sale of their livestock. Documentation of the transactions is found in complainant's exhibit numbers 8 through 19 representing the period of February 11, 1983, through May 13, 1983. Those exhibits show that of the individuals who received price guarantees, some received no money in excess of the proceeds due from the sale because the livestock was sold for an amount equal to or greater than the guarantee (CX 8, 9, 10, 12, 14, 16), while other consignors received additional compensation ranging from a low of $5.66 (CX 18) to a high of $143.48 (CX 13).

The Packers and Stockyards Administration has for many years considered this practice to be violative of sections 307 and 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. §§ 208, 213(a)), and has issued a regulation specifically prohibiting the practice. That regulation provides that:

> No market agency engaged in the business of selling livestock on a commission basis shall guarantee the price at which consigned livestock will be sold.

9 CFR § 201.64.

Harold Davis, Director of the Livestock Marketing Division of the Packers and Stockyards Administration, testified (Tr. 13–14) concerning why his agency considers price guaranteeing to be an unfair trade practice.

> The Packers and Stockyards Administration feels that there are certain basic problems with price guaranteeing. The first being that this is a competitive practice which is, in our view, unfair competition for other markets, in that small markets may not be able to afford to make these guarantees and then be able to stand behind them if the market drops.
>
> The Packers and Stockyards Administration also considers price guaranteeing to be a discriminatory practice, in that it's offers to certain consignors and not to all consignors and in that guarantee is not something that's offered to all consignors on an equal basis but rather something that's negotiated and offered on whatever it takes to get the livestock shipped to their market and not on the basis of offering the service to all consignors on an equal basis. Price > guarantees, in effect, are rebates on the commission or part of the commission that a consignor pays. This is an expense that the market incurs in doing business which is ultimately born by all the consignors and not just the consignors that receive a price guarantee.

As complainant contends, price guarantees are unjustly discriminatory regardless of whether or not they are offered to every consignor. There is no way to insure uniformity in the guarantees. For similar livestock, different consignors are likely to receive different guarantees, depending on what they negotiate. Further, when livestock fails to bring the guaranteed price, payments in the form of rebates are made to the consignor in the amount of the difference between the realized price and the guaranteed price. This payment will vary greatly between consignors, and as shown in CX 7, bears no relationship between the number of livestock consigned or the value of the livestock. The result of price guaranteeing is a chaotic situation in which some consignors receive no rebate while others receive rebates which vary greatly and at random. This is graphically illustrated in CX 20, an analysis of the price guarantee payments received by various consignors, which shows the variability of prices received for livestock and rebates received as a result of the guarantees.

Accordingly, respondent's practice of guaranteeing prices is an unfair and unjustly discriminatory practice in violation of sections 307 and 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. §§ 208, 213(a)).

Analogous to the question of guaranteed prices is the practice of offering free or reduced transportation costs to certain consignors. In connection with some consignments of livestock to the stockyard, respondent paid all or half of the transportation charges. This was done as an inducement to obtain consignments of livestock to respondent's stockyard. Documentation of the transactions is found in complainant's exhibit numbers 21 through 44. Those transactions are summarized in CX 21, which shows that in fourteen instances consignors were reimbursed for one half of their transportation expenses and in nine transactions other consignors were reimbursed for all of their transportation expenses.

Harold Davis explained that his agency considers providing free trucking to consignors to be unlawful for the same reasons that apply to price guaranteeing:

> Free trucking or reduced cost trucking is the same as price guaranteeing in that it is discriminatory between consignors. It's offered to certain consignors and not to others or its offered on an uneven basis to consignors. It's not of> fered on an equal basis to all consignors. So that it is unjustly discriminatory to the consignors. It is also considered to be unfair competition to competing markets and competing markets methods, in that the markets are competing on the basis of what gratuity they can offer to the consignor, rather than on the basis for the selling services and selling the livestock at the highest available bid in open competition.

TR. 15.

As the complainant correctly urges, the Packers and Stockyards Administration, considers free trucking unlawful for two reasons. The first reason is that it is an unfair method of competition which forces markets to compete on the basis of inducements rather than selling service, and places smaller markets at a competitive disadvantage. The second reason is that the provision of free trucking entails an unjust discrimination. In the present case, the discrimination occurs on one level because different consignors receive different "deals." Some have all of the trucking expenses paid, some have one half of their expenses paid, and others presumably receive no free trucking at all. On another level, the value of the free trucking varies among consignors, depending upon the distance of the haul. The net result is that, like in price guaranteeing, consignors receive rebates from the market in different amounts which vary in a random manner unrelated to the value of the livestock involved or the number of head consigned.

The Judicial Officer, adopting the conclusion of the administrative law judge in In re Hardy, 33 A.D. 1383, 1397 (1974), held:

> We conclude that providing free trucking to consignors as an inducement to consign livestock to a particular market is an unfair practice and willful violation of section 307 and 312(a) of the Act and discriminates against those consignors not given such free trucking as well as being an unfair and unjust practice against competing markets forcing them to give free trucking in order for them to "stay in the game".

Respondent cites several federal court cases in support of its contention that paying for trucking and guaranteeing prices do not violate the Act and regulations. However, these cases are not helpful to respondent, nor relevant to the issue here. Here, we are dealing with a seller of livestock, and auction markets are fiduciaries. They must treat all consignors fairly and equally. Some consignors got full trucking rebates and others only got half. Some consignors received money as a result of respondent's guaranteed prices and others did not.

SANCTION

Complainant requests that the respondent be ordered to cease and desist from the practices discussed above, and that it be suspended for a period of twenty-eight days (4 sale days) and thereafter until the deficits in its custodial account are corrected. The proposed suspension is proper in the circumstances of this proceeding.

The seriousness of the violations committed, especially the improper handling of the custodial account, go to the very essence of a market agency's responsibilities and, because of the firm's prior cease and desist order, the custodial account violations alone would warrant the proposed term of suspension.[1]

Using custodial account funds for purposes of its own, guaranteeing prices to consignors and providing free trucking, demonstrate clearly that the respondent deliberately and willfully placed its interests ahead of its consignors and others in the livestock industry. Accordingly, respondent has willfully violated sections 307 and 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. §§ 208, 213(a)), and sections 201.42 and 201.64 of the regulations (9 CFR §§ 201.42, 201.64), as alleged in the complaint.

ORDER

Respondent Farmers Livestock Auction, Inc., its officers, directors, agents and employees, in connection with its operations subject to the Act, shall cease and desist from:

1. Failing to deposit in its Custodial Account for Shippers' Proceeds, within the time prescribed in section 201.42 of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.42), amounts equal to the outstanding proceeds receivable due from the sale of consigned livestock;

2. Using funds received as proceeds from the sale of consigned livestock for purposes of its own or for any purpose other than for the payment of the net proceeds to the owners or consignors of such livestock, or for the payment of sums due the respondent as compensation for services rendered or for other lawful marketing charges;

3. Making such use or disposition of funds in its possession or control as will endanger or impair the faithful and prompt accounting therefor and the payment of the portions thereof which may be due the owners or consignors of livestock;

[1] With respect to respondent's alleged shut-down in December 1984, the parties never reached an effective settlement agreement and, any purported shut-down on respondent's part was unilateral.

4. Failing to otherwise maintain its Custodial Account for Shippers' Proceeds in strict conformity with the provisions of section 201.42 of the regulations (9 CFR § 201.42);

5. Guaranteeing to the owner or consignor of livestock the minimum price which the consignor will receive for such livestock if consigned to respondent for sale on a commission basis; and

6. Providing free transportation, or transportation at less than its actual cost or value, of livestock consigned to respondent's stockyard.

Respondent is suspended as a registrant under the Act for 28 days and thereafter until it demonstrates that the deficit in its Custodial Account for Shippers' Proceeds has been eliminated. When respondent demonstrates that the deficit in its Custodial Account for Shippers' Proceeds has been eliminated, a supplemental order will be issued in this proceeding terminating this suspension after the 28 day period.

The provisions of this order shall become final and effective 35 days after service of this order on respondent, unless appealed within 30 days after service. (9 CFR §§ 1.145(a) and 1.142(c)).

Copies of this decision and order shall be served upon the parties.

4. Failing to remit, when due, the net proceeds from the sale of consigned livestock in commerce on a commission basis to the consignors; and

5. Failing to remit the net proceeds from the sale of consigned livestock in commerce on a commission basis to the consignors.

Respondent shall keep and maintain accounts, records and memoranda which fully and correctly disclose the true nature of all transactions involved in their business subject to the Packers and Stockyards Act, including (a) a general ledger of accounts showing assets, liabilities, income, expenses and net worth; (b) a current check register of all checks issued to consignors in remittance of the net proceeds from the sale of consigned livestock; (c) monthly reconciliations of all bank accounts; and (d) all invoices of sales.

DECISION AND ORDER UPON ADMISSION OF FACTS BY REASON OF DEFAULT

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, as amended and supplemented (7 U.S.C. § 181 et seq.), herein referred to as the Act, instituted by a complaint filed by the Administrator, Packers and Stockyards Administration, United Stats Department of Agriculture, charging that the respondent wilfully violated the Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder (9 CFR § 201.1 et seq.).

Copies of the complaint and Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.130 et seq.) governing proceedings under the Act were served on the respondent by certified mail. Respondent was informed in a letter of service that an answer should be filed pursuant to the Rules of Practice and that failure to answer would constitute an admission of all the material allegations contained in the complaint.

Respondent has failed to file an answer within the time prescribed in the Rules of Practice, and the material facts alleged in the complaint, which are admitted by respondent's failure to file an answer, are adopted and set forth herein as findings of fact.

This decision and order, therefore, is issued pursuant to section 1.139 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.139).

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. (a) Bushelle Cattle Company, Inc., hereinafter referred to as the respondent, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Minnesota. Respondent's business mailing address is Route 2, Box 336, Gonvick, Minnesota 56644.

(b) The respondent is, and at all times material herein was:

(1) Engaged in the business of buying and selling livestock in commerce for its own account; and

(2) Registered with the Secretary of Agriculture as a dealer to buy and sell livestock in commerce for its own account and as a market agency to buy livestock in commerce on a commission basis.

2. Respondent was notified by certified mail on September 24, 1985, that the $10,000.00 surety bond it maintained to secure the performance of its livestock obligations under the Act was being terminated on October 22, 1985. Respondent was further notified that if it continued its livestock operations under the Act without providing a $20,000.00 bond or its equivalent, it would be in violation of section 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 213(a)), and sections 201.29 and 201.30 of the regulations. Notwithstanding such notice, respondent has continued to engage in the business of a dealer buying and selling livestock in commerce for its own account without maintaining an adequate bond or its equivalent as required by the Act and the regulations.

CONCLUSIONS

By reason of the facts found in Finding of Fact 2 herein, respondent has wilfully violated section 312(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 213(a)), and sections 201.29 and 201.30 of the regulations (9 CFR §§ 201.29, 201.30).

ORDER

Bushelle Cattle Company, Inc., its officers, directors, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with its business subject to the Packers and Stockyards Act, shall cease and desist from engaging in business in any capacity for which bonding is required under the Packers and Stockyards Act, as amended and supplemented, and the regulations, without filing and maintaining an adequate bond or its equivalent, as required by the Act and the regulations.

Respondent is suspended as a registrant under the Act until it complies fully with the bonding requirements under the Act and the regulations. When respondent demonstrates that it is in full compliance with such bonding requirements, a supplemental order will be issued in this proceeding terminating the suspension.

In accordance with section 312(b) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 213(b)), respondent is hereby assessed a civil penalty in the amount of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00).

This decision and order shall become final without further proceedings 35 days after service hereof unless appealed to the Judicial Officer within 30 days after service (7 CFR §§ 1.139, 1.145).

Copies hereof shall be served on the parties.

A copy of the Complaint was served upon Respondent. Respondent filed an Answer admitting the material allegations of the Complaint. The Respondent and Complainant have now agreed to the entry of a Decision and Order as set forth herein. Therefore, pursuant to Section 1.138 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 1.138), the following Decision and Order is issued without further procedure or hearing.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.) hereinafter referred to as the "Act", instituted by a complaint filed on September 23, 1985, by the Acting Director, Fruit and Vegetable Division, Agricultural Marketing Service, United States Department of Agriculture. It is alleged in the complaint that during the period November 1984 through March 1985, respondent purchased, received and accepted, in interstate and foreign commerce, from 21 sellers, 32 lots of fruits and vegetables, all being perishable agricultural commodities, but failed to make full payment promptly of the agreed purchase prices or balances thereof in the total amount of $203,514.55.

A copy of the complaint was served upon respondent which complaint has not been answered. The time for filing an answer having run, and upon the motion of the complainant for the issuance of a default order, the following Decision and Order is issued without further investigation or hearing pursuant to section 1.139 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 1.139).

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Respondent, J. P. Daniel Produce, Inc., is a corporation, whose address is 356-357 Hunts Point Terminal Market, Bronx, New York 10474.

2. Pursuant to the licensing provisions of the Act, license number 821824 was issued to respondent on September 7, 1982, was renewed annually, presently is in effect, and was next subject to renewal on or before September 7, 1985.

3. As more fully set forth in paragraph 5 of the complaint, during the period November 1984 through March 1985 respondent purchased, received and accepted in interstate and foreign commerce, from 21 sellers, 32 lots of fruits and vegetables, all being perishable agricultural commodities, but failed to make full payment promptly of the agreed purchase prices, or balances thereof, in the total amount of $203,514.55.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent's failure to make full payment promptly with respect to the 32 transactions set forth in Finding of Fact No. 3, above, constitutes willful, repeated and flagrant violations of Section 2 of the Act (7 U.S.C. 400b), for which the Order below is issued.

ORDER

Respondent's license is revoked.

This Order shall take effect on the eleventh day after this Decision becomes final.

Pursuant to the Rules of Practice governing procedures under the Act, this Decision will become final without further proceedings thirty-five days after service hereof, unless appealed to the Secretary by a party to the proceeding within thirty days after service as provided in sections 1.139 and 1.145 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 1.139 and 1.145).

Copies hereof shall be served upon the parties.

In re: WALTER GAILEY & SONS, INC. PACA Docket No. 2-6876. Decided April 8, 1986.

Failure to pay promptly for multiple produce transactions—License revoked

The Judicial Officer affirmed Judge Palmer's order revoking respondent's license for failure to pay promptly for about $1½ million of produce. The Bankruptcy Code does not bar the bringing of an administrative disciplinary action. There is no applicable statute of limitations. The argument that creditors will suffer if respondent's license is revoked is routinely rejected in PACA cases.

DECISION AND ORDER

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.),* in which Administrative Law Judge Victor W. Palmer (ALJ) filed an initial Decision and Order on January 23, 1986, revoking respondent's license for failure to pay promptly 57 sellers and one

* See generally Campbell, "The Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act Regulatory Program," in 1 Davidson, Agricultural Law, ch. 4 (1981 and Aug. 1985 Supp.), and Becker and Whitten, "Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act," in 10 Harl, Agricultural Law, ch. 72 (1980).

consignor almost $1½ million for 320 lots of produce from October 1984 through March 1985. Much (or, more likely, most) of that amount remains unpaid to this date.

On March 3, 1986, respondent appealed to the Judicial Officer, to whom final administrative authority to decide the Department's cases subject to 5 U.S.C. §§ 556 and 557 has been delegated (7 CFR § 2.35). On March 28, 1986, the case was referred to the Judicial Officer for decision.

Oral argument before the Judicial Officer, which is discretionary (7 CFR § 1.145(d)), was requested by respondent, but is denied inasmuch as the issues are not novel or difficult, the case has been thoroughly briefed, and oral argument would seem to serve no useful purpose.

Based upon a careful consideration of the entire record, the initial Decision and Order is adopted as the final Decision and Order in this case (with a few trivial changes), except that the effective date of the order is changed in view of the appeal. Additional conclusions by the Judicial Officer follow the ALJ's conclusions.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE'S INITIAL DECISION

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a disciplinary proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.), hereinafter referred to as the "Act", instituted by a complaint filed on July 8, 1985, by the Acting Director, Fruit and Vegetable Division, Agricultural Marketing Service, United States Department of Agriculture. It is alleged in the complaint that during the period January through March 1985, respondent received and accepted 17 lots of vegetables, all being perishable agricultural commodities, on consignment, in interstate commerce, from one shipper, but failed to make full payment promptly of the net proceeds to that shipper in the total amount of $58,677.74. Further, it is alleged that during the period October 1984 through March 1985, respondent purchased, received, and accepted, in interstate and foreign commerce, from 57 sellers, 303 lots of fruits and vegetables, all being perishable agricultural commodities, but failed to make full payment promptly of the agreed purchase prices or balances thereof in the total amount of $1,404,570.70.

 The position of Judicial Officer was established pursuant to the Act of April 4, 1940 (7 U.S.C. §§ 450c–450g), and Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1953, 18 Fed. Reg. 3219 (1953), reprinted in 5 U.S.C. app. at 1068 (1982). The Department's present Judicial Officer was appointed in January 1971, having been involved with the Department's regulatory programs since 1949 (including 3 years' trial litigation; 10 years' appellate litigation relating to appeals from the decisions of the prior Judicial Officer; and 8 years as administrator of the Packers and Stockyards Act regulatory program).

A copy of the complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto in which it generally denied the material allegations in the complaint, admitted the allegations in the complaint regarding its bankruptcy filing, and stated several affirmative defenses. Complainant now has filed a motion for a decision generally based on respondent's admission in its bankruptcy proceedings.[1] Based upon these admissions, the precedent which this forum is bound to follow [2] requires that complainant's motion be granted.[3] Therefore, upon the motion of the complainant for the issuance of a default order, the following Decision and Order is issued without further investigation or hearing pursuant to section 1.139 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 1.139).

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Respondent, Walter Gailey & Sons, Inc., is a corporation, whose address is 4400 Woodland Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio 44104.

2. Pursuant to the licensing provisions of the Act, license number 206076 was issued to respondent on October 2, 1964, was renewed annually, presently is in effect, and is next subject to renewal on or before October 2, 1986.[4]

3. As more fully set forth in paragraph 5 of the complaint, during the period January through March 1985, respondent received and accepted, on consignment, in interstate commerce, 17 lots of vegetables, all being perishable agricultural commodities, but failed to make full payment promptly to one consignor of the

[2] See Fava & Company, Inc., 43 Agric. Dec. ___ (PACA Docket No. 2-6547, December 4, 1984) (Ruling on Certified Question).

[3] In affirmative defense, respondent claims that the complaint "fails to state a claim * * * upon which relief can be granted"; however such an assertion is wholly without merit. See 7 U.S.C. § 499h. Respondent also claims that the provisions of the Bankruptcy Code bar the bringing of this action. Such an assertion also is without merit. In re Fresh Approach, Inc., 49 B.R. 494 (Bkrtcy N.C. Tex. 1985). Further, respondent's allegation that this action is barred by the "applicable statute of limitations" has no legal merit. Melvin Beene Produce v. Agricultural Marketing Serv., 728 F.2d 347 (6th Cir. 1984). In addition, respondent claims that the shippers are barred from asserting any claim against it. Although stated as an affirmative defense, such a claim is irrelevant since the complainant is an official of the agency to which Congress has assigned the duty to administer the Act. See 7 U.S.C. § 499a(a). Respondent's last claim, that it should be allowed to reorganize under the Bankruptcy Code, is not a defense to an action for failure to make prompt payment under the Act. Finer Foods Sales Co. v. Block, 708 F.2d 774 (D.C. Cir. 1983).

net proceeds received from the sale thereof in the total amount of $58,677.74.

4. As more fully set forth in paragraph 6 of the complaint, during the period October 1984 through March 1985 respondent purchased, received, and accepted in interstate and foreign commerce, from 57 sellers, 303 lots of fruits and vegetables, all being perishable agricultural commodities, but failed to make full payment promptly of the agreed purchase prices, or balances thereof, in the total amount of $1,404,570.70.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent's failure to make full payment promptly with respect to the 320 transactions set forth in Findings of Fact Nos. 3 and 4 above constitutes willful, repeated and flagrant violations of Section 2 of the Act (7 U.S.C. 499b), for which the Order below is issued.

ADDITIONAL CONCLUSIONS BY THE JUDICIAL OFFICER

This case is identical, in all material respects, to In re B. G. Sales Co., 44 Agric Dec. ____ (Oct. 9, 1985), a copy of which is attached as an appendix to this decision. The contentions argued by respondent on appeal are also rejected for the reasons set forth in Complainant's Reply to Respondent's Appeal. The argument that creditors will suffer if respondent's license is revoked was rejected in In re Gilardi Truck & Transportation, Inc., 43 Agric. Dec. ____ (Jan. 27, 1984), as follows (slip op. at 32-33):

> Respondent argues that it would be detrimental to its creditors if it were forced to discontinue business. Such arguments are frequently made and routinely rejected. Even where creditors of a respondent personally appear to urge the Department to permit the violator to continue in business, so that the violator will be able to make additional payments to the creditors, the Secretary routinely rejects such pleas for leniency made by creditors since the Secretary must consider the broader public interest involving thousands of suppliers and licensees throughout the country.[21] If lenient sanctions were imposed in the case of serious and flagrant violations of the Act for the benefit of a few of respondent's creditors, the sanctions would not have a strong deterrent effect and, therefore, such a policy would be contrary to the public interest.
> Similarly, under all of the regulatory programs administered by the Department, any hardship to the respondent's community, customers or employees which might result from a disciplinary order is given no weight in determining the sanction, in order to protect the broader public interest, which is best served by imposing severe sanctions for serious or repeated violations, to serve as an effective deterrent to future violations.[22]

REPARATION DECISIONS

P. TAVILLA CO. MIAMI INC., v. SANCO DISTRIBUTORS, INC., a/t/a SANDY'S MARKET BASKET. PACA Docket No. 2-6756. Decided March 7, 1986.

Unsworn answer given no consideration as evidence—Decision.

Respondent liable for the contract price alleged in the complaint, as its claims that the price was a lesser figure and that it made cash payments in its unsworn answer only, which is not given any evidentiary consideration.

Decision by Donald A. Campbell, Judicial Officer.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $5,840.00 in connection with the sale and shipment of five loads of mixed produce to respondent in interstate commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation prepared by the Department was served upon each of the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto, admitting liability for $3,721.75, but denying liability for the remainder.

Since the amount claimed as damages does not exceed $15,000, the shortened procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to such procedure, the report of investigation is considered part of the evidence, as is the verified complaint. The answer, since it is not verified, is not considered part of the evidence. The parties were given an opportunity to submit additional evidence in the form of verified statements and to file briefs, but elected not to do so.

FINDINGS OF FACTS

1. Complainant, P. Tavilla Co. Miami Inc., is a corporation whose address is 1243 N. W. 21st Street, Miami, Florida.

2. Respondent, Sanco Distributors, Inc., a/t/a Sandy's Market Basket, is a corporation whose address is 2840 North State Road 7, Hollywood, Florida. At the times of the transactions involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On approximately July 16, 19, 21, and 23, and August 11 and 17, 1984, complainant sold to respondent a total of six loads of mixed produce for a total contract price of $6,840.00, f.o.b. The produce was shipped to respondent, which received and accepted it.

4. Respondent has since paid complainant $1,000.00 for the six loads of produce, leaving $5,840.00 due and owing. A formal complaint was filed on January 29, 1985, which was within nine months from when the causes of action herein accrued.

5. Respondent filed an answer on March 5, 1985, in which it admitted liability for $3,721.75 in connection with the subject matter of the complaint. Accordingly, an Order Requiring Payment of Undisputed Amount was issued on April 29, 1985, ordering respondent to pay to complainant the admitted amount owing of $3,721.75.

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

In respondent's unsworn answer, it claims that it originally owed complainant $5,721.75 for the six loads of produce it admittedly purchased, received, and accepted, but contends that it made $1,000 cash payments on January 19 and February 22, 1985, thereby reducing its liability to $3,721.75, which it admits owing complainant. As a result of respondent's admission of liability, an Order Requiring Payment of Undisputed Amount was issued on April 29, 1985, awarding reparation to complainant in the amount of $3,721.75

Complainant alleges in its sworn complaint that the contract prices on the six lots of produce totaled $6,840.00, and claims that respondent has only paid $1,000.00, leaving $5,840.00 still owing. Complainant has provided invoices and statements to respondent which support its claim. Respondent's contentions that it originally owed $5,721.75 but has made two recent cash payments of $1,000.00 are contained in an unsworn answer and, therefore, are not worthy of evidentiary consideration. As respondent did not make any further submissions in this proceeding, we must conclude that the sworn allegations of the complaint and the supporting documentation are sufficient to establish respondent's liability for the amount claimed. Therefore, respondent is liable for $5,840.00 less the $3,721.75 already awarded, or $2,118.25. Respondent's failure to pay complainant this sum is a violation of section 2 of the Act, for which reparation should be awarded, with interest.

ORDER

Within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $2,118.25, with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from September 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

Change in contract terms—Breach of warranty—Accord and satisfaction—Decision.

Evidence in the record fails to support respondent's claims that complainant granted an allowance, the produce was in breach of warranty, and an accord and satisfaction occurred. Therefore, respondent is liable for the full contract price of the produce it admittedly accepted.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $1,008.00 in connection with the sale and shipment to respondent of a trucklot of cantaloupes in interstate commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation prepared by the Department was served upon each of the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto, denying liability.

Since the amount claimed as damages does not exceed $15,000.00, the shortened procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to such procedure, the report of investigation is considered part of the evidence, as is the verified complaint and answer. The parties were given an opportunity to submit additional evidence in the form of verified statements and to file briefs. Complainant submitted an opening statement, respondent submitted an answering statement, and complainant submitted a statement in reply. Complainant also filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, S. Stamoules, Inc., a/t/a Stamoules Produce Co., is a corporation whose address is P.O. Box 56, Mendota, California.

2. Respondent, Sol Salins, Inc., is a corporation whose address is 1325 Fifth Street, N.E., Washington, D. C. At the time of the transaction involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On approximately July 9, 1984, complainant sold and shipped in interstate commerce to respondent 1,008 cartons of S & S Brand size 18 cantaloupes at $5.00 per carton, plus $.70 per carton precooling, $.10 per carton palletization, $.15 per carton for brokerage fees and $22.50 for a temperature recorder, for a total f.o.b. contract price of $6,020.10. George DePaoli Distributing Company, Salinas, California, acted as the broker in this transaction, and both parties communicated exclusively through its president, George DePaoli.

4. After the cantaloupes arrived, respondent complained to Mr. DePaoli about the size of the melons, and requested an allowance. Mr. DePaoli contacted complainant's salesman, Rick Evans, who indicated that an allowance would be considered if respondent would provide an inspection report showing that the cantaloupes did not comply with the contract terms regarding their size. Respondent never provided the inspection report.

5. In August 1984, respondent sent complainant a check for $5,012.10 as payment for the load of cantaloupes. Nothing written on the check indicated that it was being offered as full payment. Complainant accepted and deposited the check. Respondent has not made any additional payments on this transaction.

6. A formal complaint was filed on March 1, 1985, which was within nine months from when the cause of action herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent does not deny purchasing, receiving and accepting the cantaloupes, but claims that after the cantaloupes arrived, complainant agreed to a $1.00 per crate allowance because the fruit was too small. Complainant denies having agreed to an allowance and has submitted the sworn statement of its salesman, Rick Evans, who states that he made clear to the broker that complainant would have to receive an inspection report showing that there was a problem with the size of the cantaloupes before any allowance could be considered. Respondent, as the party alleging that the contract terms were changed, has the burden of proving such a change by a preponderance of the evidence. American Banana Co., v. Marvin Gray, 41 Agric. Dec. 539 (1982).

The report of investigation contains a February 19, 1985, letter to the Department from the broker's president, George DePaoli, who states that after hearing from respondent about the size problems, "I called Rick and reported this to him, I told him I would get an inspection, my complaint was sizing never mentioning the condition. Several weeks later, Rick and I agreed on a $1.00 allowance, providing he had a federal inspection showing the sizing was small." Complainant's Mr. Evans claims an inspection report was never provided, and an allowance, therefore, was not warranted. The record in this proceeding does not contain any inspection reports. However, it is apparently respondent's position that the $1.00 per carton allowance was granted with no contingencies, and respondent has offered a sworn statement from Mr. DePaoli dated July 8, 1985, who asserts that in "late July 1984 Rick authorized this deduction." This statement does not specifically refute Mr. DePaoli's earlier statement that the allowance was contingent on respondent providing complainant with the inspection report. In addition, the February 9, 1985, statement is closer in time to the date of the alleged conversation than the statement of July 8, 1985. Further, Mr. DePaoli's February 9, 1985, statement sets forth the same facts as those expressed by complainant's Mr. Evans, the other party to the alleged conversation. Therefore, we believe the February 9, 1985, statement to be more credible, and conclude that respondent has failed to sustain its burden of proving that the allowance was granted.

Having accepted the load of cantaloupes, respondent became liable for the contract price, less damages resulting from any breach of warranty. Respondent has the burden of proving the breach and damages by a preponderance of the evidence. Farm Market Service Inc. v. Albertson's, Inc., 42 Agric. Dec. 429 (1983). As previously mentioned, respondent never submitted an inspection report showing that the cantaloupes were in breach of warranty. Since the record is devoid of any credible evidence of the existence of a breach of warranty by complainant, we conclude that respondent has failed to sustain its burden of proof in this regard, and is liable for the entire contract price of $6,020.10, less the $5,012.10 it has already paid.

Respondent contends that complainant's acceptance of its $5,012.10 check constituted an accord and satisfaction, thereby relieving respondent from any further liability. This contention is without merit, as an examination of the check shows that it did not contain any notation that it was offered in full settlement of the transaction for which it was given in payment. Dennis Produce Sales, Inc. v. Caruso-Ciresi, Inc., 42 Agric. Dec. 178 (1983).

Respondent is liable for the difference between the contract price of $6,020.10 minus the $5,012.10 paid to complainant, or $1,008.00, and its failure to pay this sum to complainant is a violation of section 2 of the Act, for which reparation should be awarded, with interest.

ORDER

Within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $1,008.00, with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from August 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

DEW-GRO INC., d/b/a CENTRAL WEST PRODUCE v. MINGS IMPORT, INC. PACA Docket No. 2-6814. Decided March 7, 1986.

Wrongful rejection—Mitigation of Damages

Where only evidence concerning quality of sugar peas shipped was respondent's admission that U.S.D.A. inspection graded them "A", complainant has met its burden of shipping goods in suitable shipping condition. Complainant gave notice that it was moving the goods to a wholesaler after receiver refused to pay. Even though the goods were ultimately dumped, complainant is entitled to receive full contract price because respondent failed to show that the complainant acted improperly in its efforts to mitigate its damages by finding an alternative outlet.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.), hereinafter referred to as the Act. A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $2,737.80 in connection with the sale of sugar peas in interstate commerce.

A copy of the formal complaint and a copy of the Department's report of investigation was served upon respondent. A copy of the report of investigation was served upon complainant.

Respondent failed to file a timely answer. However, prior to the issuance of a default order, respondent filed a motion to reopen the proceeding after default and allow the filing of an answer. This motion was granted on May 6, 1985, and respondent's answer was accepted. Respondent's answer denied that the goods received were as contracted for and asserted that they were, therefore, properly rejected.

Since the amount claimed in damages does not exceed $15,000.00, the shortened procedure provided for in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) applies. Pursuant to such procedure, the parties were given an opportunity to submit additional evidence in the form of verified statements. Complainant filed an opening statement in the form of an additional affidavit. Respondent did not file an answering statement. Complainant also filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Dew-Gro, Inc., doing business as Central West Produce, hereinafter referred to as complainant, is a corporation whose post office address is 1284 West Main Street, Santa Maria, California 93454.

2. Mings Import, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent, is a corporation whose post office address is 85 Essex Street, Boston, Massachusetts 02111.

3. Both complainant and respondent are, and at the time of the transaction in question herein were, licensed with the Secretary of Agriculture to do business under the Act.

4. On or about May 18, 1984, complainant sold to respondent, in the course of interstate commerce, 78 cartons of sugar peas at $33.25 per carton plus $1.05 per carton for cooling and pallets, and freight of $.80 per carton. The total F.O.B. contract price was therefore $2,737.80.

5. The sugar peas were shipped by complainant from California to respondent in Boston, Massachusetts on May 18, 1984.

6. Upon their arrival in Boston, however, respondent sought to reject them claiming they were not in acceptable condition.

7. Respondent, however, in a letter to the Acting Regional Director, Northeast Region, PACA Branch dated August 27, 1984 and contained in the Report of Investigation as Exhibit No. 3, admitted that a U.S.D.A. inspector inspected the peas and found them to be "Grade A".

8. In a telegram dated May 21, 1984, complainant informed respondent that based upon respondent's rejection, complainant was moving the peas to Peter Condakes, a local wholesaler, to be sold for the account of whom concerned.

9. The peas, were, however, ultimately dumped as having no salvage value, apparently on June 26, 1984.

10. Respondent has not paid for these peas.

11. The formal complaint was filed on October 26, 1984, within nine months of the accrual of the cause of action herein.

CONCLUSIONS

There is no dispute that the peas were shipped from California and received in Boston. The parties differ as to the quality and condition of the peas on their arrival. The record is not clear at what point in time respondent notified complainant it was refusing to pay for the peas. It, therefore, can not be determined whether the respondent had first accepted the goods. In view of the ultimate disposition made herein, however, it is not necessary to reach this question. It is sufficient to say that the parties treated respondent's actions as a rejection, and that complainant promptly arranged to have the peas moved to Peter Condakes for sale on account.

Respondent's defense to this action is that the peas were not of the quality contracted for. However, the only evidence relating to the quality of peas upon arrival is respondent's admission that a U.S.D.A. inspection resulted in a finding that the peas were "grade A". To argue that the inspector was wrong, without more, falls far short of establishing that complainant failed to ship goods conforming to the contract. The date and details of the inspection as the only impartial evidence indicates that the peas received were of the quality contracted for, we find that complainant met its burden of shipping goods in suitable shipping condition. Respondent has, therefore, wrongfully failed to pay for the peas.

There is no allegation or evidence that Peter Condakes was a firm unqualified to dispose of the disputed goods, or that the firm failed to properly do so. Therefore, it is found that complainant made reasonable efforts to mitigate its damages, but to no avail. The risk of loss after a wrongful rejection falls on the purchaser under the factual circumstances existing here, absent a showing that the shipper acted improperly in its efforts to find an alternative outlet. See, Sid Lipsig & Co. v. Joe Belsen, 34 Agric. Dec. 417, 422 (1975).

Complainant is entitled to receive the value of the goods shipped which is measured by the contract price of $2,737.80. Respondent's failure to pay that amount is a violation of section 2 of the Act for which reparation should be awarded with interest.

ORDER

Respondent Mings Import, Inc., is hereby ordered to pay complainant Dew-Gro, Inc. the amount of $2,737.80 plus interest at 13 percent per annum from June 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this Order shall be served on the parties.

Complainant was the seller—Payment made to the wrong party—Breach of warranty—Respondent failed to prove—Price arrival terms in effect—Failure to deliver—Decision.

The evidence is clear that complainant was the seller of the three loads of brussels sprouts. Respondent's payment to the broker for the first load did not relieve it of liability to the complainant seller. Respondent failed to prove a breach of warranty regarding the second load and is liable for the market price at destination, in accordance with the price arrival terms in effect. The evidence shows that the third load was not delivered to respondent. Respondent liable for only the first two loads.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $17,595.25, in connection with the alleged sale and shipment to respondent of three truckloads of brussels sprouts in interstate commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation prepared by the Department was served upon each of the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto, denying liability.

Although the amount claimed as damages exceeds $15,000.00, the parties waived oral hearing. Therefore, the shortened procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to such procedure, the report of investigation is considered part of the evidence, as is the verified complaint. The answer, since it is not verified, it not considered part of the evidence. The parties were given an opportunity to submit additional evidence in the form of verified statements and to file briefs, but elected not to do so.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Sun World International, Inc. a/t/a Sun World, is a corporation whose address P.O. Box 9110, Bakersfield, California.

2. Respondent, Corgan & Son, Inc., is a corporation whose address is 161-162 N.Y.C. Terminal Market, Bronx, New York. At the times of the transactions involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On approximately March 22, 1984, complainant sold and shipped to respondent 300 cartons of brussels sprouts in 25 pound cartons, at a price of $8.00 per carton, plus $.65 per carton pre-cooling, for a total of $2,595.00, f.o.b. The broker in this transaction was Go/Western Produce & Commodities Inc., Coachella, California. Complainant prepared an invoice, number 85-23880, reflecting these terms. Respondent received and accepted the sprouts.

4. On March 23, 1984, the broker prepared and sent to the parties a confirmation of sale and broker's invoice relating to complainant's invoice number 85-23880. The confirmation identified complainant as the seller and respondent as the buyer.

5. Respondent issued a check to the broker on April 26, 1984, for $4,418.60, including payment of $1,500.00 for the 300 cartons of sprouts which are the subject of complainant's invoice number 85-23880. Respondent has never made any payment to complainant on this transaction.

6. On or about April 5, 1984, complainant sold to respondent 1,930 cartons of brussels sprouts in 25 pound cartons, at a price of $6.00 per carton, plus $.65 per carton cooling, for a total of $13,128.50, f.o.b. Go/Western Produce & Commodities Inc. also acted as the broker in this transaction. Complainant prepared an invoice, number 70-24058, reflecting the contract terms. The price terms were eventually changed to price arrival.

7. On April 16, 1984, respondent received and accepted the sprouts pertaining to complainant's invoice number 70-24058. According to the April 16, 1984, listings of the Market News Service Reports for Bronx, New York, the market price for brussels sprouts in 25 pound cartons was $7.00 to $8.00 per carton.

8. On May 4, 1984, the broker prepared and sent to the parties a confirmation of sale relating to complainant's invoice number 70-24058, which indicated thereon that the price terms were "P/A".

9. On April 19, 1984, complainant loaded 295 cartons of brussels sprouts on a Pathfinder truck for shipment to respondent. The sprouts were instead shipped to Veg-A-Mix, Castroville, California.

10. On October 26, 1984, complainant's Director of Transportation, Fred Kendel, stated in a letter to the Department that with respect to the 295 cartons of brussels sprouts, "Pathfinder Trucking, Los Angeles, does not perform transport to the eastern states. I have contacted their office to ascertain the exact location of their delivery and we should have an answer from them in the very near future."

11. On November 8, 1984, Mr. Kendel wrote a letter to Veg-A-Mix concerning the 295 cartons of brussels sprouts set forth, in part, as follows:

> We are tracing the final disposition of product we shipped earlier this year. We have discovered your firm was involved in the distribution of our product and we would appreciate your assistance in helping us to identify the ultimate receiver.
>
> On April 19, 1984, we loaded 295 cartons Sun World label brussels sprouts and 785 cartons sprouts (Go/Western-packer) into a Pathfinder truck. We understood the product was destined to Corgan and Son in New York City as arranged by Diamond Trading, Palm Desert, California, but this information was erroneous. Instead, Pathfinder Trucking delivered the product to your facility on April 20, 1984. Distribution from that point in time is the unknown factor and we would ask for your assistance.

12. Respondent has not paid anything to complainant for the 295 cartons of sprouts referred to above.

13. An informal complaint was filed on July 5, 1984, which was within nine months from when the alleged causes of action herein accrued. A formal complaint was filed on February 19, 1985.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent denies liability for the three loads of brussels sprouts at issue. Respondent claims it never made any purchases from complainant, although it admits having purchased from Go/Western 300 cartons of sprouts shipped on March 20, 1984, and 1,930 cartons of sprouts which it received on April 16, 1984. Respondent claims that it paid Go/Western for the 300 cartons of sprouts, and that it lost money on its resales of the 1,930 carton load.

The evidence is clear that respondent purchased the 300 cartons of sprouts from complainant, not from Go/Western. Complainant has submitted a confirmation of sale and brokers invoice from Go/Western dated March 23, 1984, which shows clearly that complainant was the seller, respondent the buyer, and Go/Western the broker (Finding of Fact 4). Therefore, respondent's admitted acceptance of the 300 cartons of sprouts renders it liable to complainant, the seller, for the entire contract price. Respondent alleges that it has paid for the sprouts, and the report of investigation indicates that respondent did pay $1,500.00 to Go/Western for 300 cartons of sprouts on August 17, 1984. However, since such payment was made after the March 23, 1984, confirmation was issued, respondent, at the time of the payment, knew or should have known that complainant was the seller. Thus, respondent's payment to the broker had no effect on its liability to complainant for the entire $2,595.00 contract price for the 300 cartons of sprouts.

Regarding the 1,930 cartons of sprouts, respondent's insistence that it purchased them from Go/Western is contradicted by its own submission of Go/Western's May 4, 1984, confirmation of sale, showing complainant as the seller and respondent as the buyer, with Go/Western acting as the broker (Finding of Fact 8). As respondent does not deny accepting these sprouts when they arrived at its place of business on April 16, 1984, respondent became liable for the f.o.b. contract price therefor, less damages resulting from any breach of warranty, which respondent bears the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence. Farm Market Service Inc. v. Albertson's, Inc., 42 Agric. Dec. 429 (1983). Respondent has presented no evidence of any breach of warranty and is thus liable for the contract price for the 1,930 cartons of sprouts.

However, we cannot agree with complainant's assertion that the contract price for the 1,930 cartons was $13,128.50, as the May 4, 1984, confirmation of sale indicates that the applicable terms were P/A, or price arrival. In a price arrival sale, the price is subject to an agreement between the buyer and seller upon the arrival of the produce at the buyer's destination. 7 CFR 46.43(cc). As no price was apparently agreed to here, we accept the market price for 25 pound cartons of brussels sprouts in New York on the date of arrival, April 16, 1984, as representing the price to which the parties would have agreed. John Livacich Produce, Inc. v. Ben Gatz Co., 33 Agric. Dec. 1155 (1974). The applicable Market News Service Reports show a price of $7.00 to $8.00. Using the lower figure, we arrive at a market price of $13,510.00, for which respondent is liable.

Although complainant claims that it sold and shipped 295 cartons of brussels sprouts to respondent on April 19, 1984, there is evidence that the load was never delivered to respondent. Complainant's invoice and manifest show that on approximately April 19, 1984, the 295 cartons of sprouts were loaded on a Pathfinder truck for delivery to respondent. The report of investigation contains a November 8, 1984, letter from a Fred Kendel, Director of Transportation for complainant, to Veg-A-Mix, Castroville, California, in which Mr. Kendel admits that the 295 cartons were delivered to Veg-A-Mix, instead of respondent (Finding of Fact 11). The report of investigation also contains an October 26, 1984, letter to the Department, in which Mr. Kendel admits that the Pathfinder trucking company does not deliver to the eastern United States (Finding of Fact 10). Complainant contends that on June 5, 1984,

Mr. Kendel discussed this lot with respondent, and respondent did not mention having failed to receive it. However, the record does not contain any statement by Mr. Kendel that this alleged discussion ever occurred. Further, Mr. Kendel's phone records state that the respondent said with respect to the 295 carton lot only that it would "research [its] records." It is the seller's burden to prove that the produce was received and accepted by the buyer, and it is our view that complainant has failed to sustain this burden with respect to the 295 carton load.

We have determined that respondent is liable to complainant for $2,595.00 for the 300 carton load, and $13,510.00 for the 1,960 carton load, for a total of $15,105.00 Respondent's failure to pay this sum is a violation of section 2 of the Act, for which reparation should be awarded, with interest.

ORDER

Within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $15,105.00, with interest thereon at the rate of 13 percent per annum from May 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

Accepted—Noted of Breach—Not timely—Accounting—Inadequate to show damages—Settlement—Failure to prove—Decision and Order.

Respondent's acceptance of a mixed load of cantaloupes and pineapples made it liable to complainant for the purchase price less any damages resulting from any breach by complainant. Although the amount of decay shown by inspection indicated a breach by complainant respondent was found to have failed to give timely notice of the breach. In addition respondent's accounting of the resale of the goods was inadequate to show respondent's damages. Respondent also failed to establish that a settlement agreement was entered into by the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks an award of reparation against respondent in the amount of $3,454.02 in connection with the shipment in interstate commerce of one truckload of mixed produce.

A copy of the Report of Investigation made by the Department was served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto denying liability to complainant.

The amount claimed in the formal complaint does not exceed $15,000.00, and the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to this procedure the verified pleadings of the parties are considered a part of the evidence in the case, as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition, the parties were given an opportunity to file evidence in the form of sworn statements, however, neither party did so. Neither party filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Val-Mex Fruit Company, Inc., is a corporation whose address is P.O. Box 1178, Hidalgo, Texas.

2. Respondent, Louis Kaleck, is an individual doing business as Kaleck Distributing Company, whose address is P.O. Box 1432, MacAllen, Texas. At the time of the transaction involved herein respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On or about February 13, 1984, complainant sold to respondent one truckload containing 816 crates of various sizes of cantaloupes and 100 cartons of pineapples for a total invoice price of $13,165.50, f.o.b. Hidalgo, Texas. The invoice price included $22.50 for a Ryan temperature recorder.

4. Complainant shipped the mixed load of cantaloupes and pineapples to respondent's customer, Gullo Produce Company, Inc., in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, on February 13, 1984. Respondent's customer accepted the load after arrival, and on February 16, 1984, at 7:05 a.m., the 816 crates of cantaloupes were federally inspected in the warehouse of respondent's customer. The inspection showed temperatures in various containers to range from 36 to 40 degrees Fahrenheit, and condition to be as follows:

> Mostly firm, some ripe and firm. From 1 to 4 melons, (3 to 27%) in most crates many none, average 6% decay, Cladosporium Rot, early stages.

5. On March 15, 1984, respondent paid complainant $9,139.80 for the mixed load of produce, and on March 17, 1984, respondent paid complainant an additional $571.68 for the produce. There remains due to complainant a balance of $3,454.02.

6. An informal complaint was filed on May 1, 1984, which was within nine months after the cause of action herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

Complainant seeks to recover the balance of the purchase price of a mixed load of cantaloupes and pineapples sold to respondent and shipped to respondent's customer in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania from Hidalgo, Texas. Respondent accepted the load of produce by unloading the truck on arrival, and is, therefore, liable to complainant for the full purchase price thereof less any damages shown by any breach of contract proven by respondent.

The federal inspection of the cantaloupes taken on February 16, 1984, in Pittsburgh shows an average of 6% decay which is in excess of what we allow for good delivery. See G. & S. Produce Co. Inc., v. Schnunk Distributing Co., Inc., 34 Agric. Dec. 1604 (1975). In addition, respondent alleges that complainant breached the contract of sale by not shipping fresh cantaloupes and by failing to ship U.S. No. 1 cantaloupes. However, it is not necessary for us to discuss these issues in view of the fact that complainant has alleged that respondent failed to give timely notice of any breach of contract, and respondent has not replied to this allegation. Apparently the first notice given by respondent to complainant that there was any problem with the load was when payment was made to complainant on March 15, 1984, in the reduced amount of $9,139.80. The Uniform Commercial Code Section 2-607(3) provides in relevant part that:

> Where a tender has been accepted the buyer must within a reasonable time after he discovers or should have discovered any breach notify the seller of breach or be barred from any remedy; . . .

We find that respondent is barred from any remedy for any breach by complainant by reason of respondent's failure to give timely notice. See Produce Specialists v. Gulfport Tomatoes, 42 Agric. Dec. 1194 (1938); and Rio-Ray Citrus Corp. v. Joy Citrus, 31 Agric. Dec. 794 (1972).

In addition we note that even had respondent established that it had given timely notice to complainant of a breach of contract the accounting submitted by respondent from its customer, Gullo Produce Company, Inc., in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, is inadequate as a basis for proving damages in that it is not dated and does not give a breakdown of the prices received for individual sales of the produce. The accounting merely gives an average price for each size of the cantaloupes and for the pineapples. See Sunkist Growers v. Fishman Produce, 41 Agric. Dec. 137 (1982).

Respondent also contends that it entered into a final settlement with complainant for an additional payment of $571.68 which it paid to complainant on March 17, 1984. Complainant denies this allegation, and we deem it highly significant, and determinative of the issue, that the check stub which accompanied the $571.68 payment from respondent merely stated "ADDITIONAL PAYMENT ON YOUR INV. # $50543 OUR INV. # 1971" If the payment was rendered in full settlement there should have been a statement to that effect accompanying respondent's check.

On the basis of all the evidence herein we conclude that there remains due and owing from respondent to complainant the sum of $3,454.02. Respondent's failure to pay complainant such amount is a violation of section 2 of the Act for which reparation should be awarded to complainant with interest.

ORDER

Within thirty days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $3,454.02 with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from March 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this order will be served upon the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $3,198.00 in connection with the sale and shipment to respondent of a truckload of lettuce in interstate commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation prepared by the Department was served upon each of the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto, denying liability, and also asserted a counterclaim in connection with the subject matter of the complaint. Complainant filed a reply to the counterclaim, denying liability.

Since the amount claimed as damages does not exceed $15,000.00, the shortened procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to such procedure, the report of investigation is considered to be part of the evidence, as are the verified complaint and answer. The parties were given an opportunity to submit additional evidence in the form of verified statements and to file briefs. Complainant submitted an opening statement, respondent submitted an answering statement, and complainant submitted a statement in reply. Complainant also filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Richard S. Brown, Inc., is a corporation whose address is P.O. Box 4729, 635 South Sanborn Road, Suite 13, Salinas, California. At the time of the transaction alleged in the counterclaim, complainant was licensed under the Act.

2. Respondent, Sloan's Supermarkets, Inc., is a corporation whose address is 2 Bennett Avenue, New York, New York. At the time of the transaction alleged in the complaint, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On approximately May 8, 1984, complainant sold to respondent, through a broker, Panorama Produce Sales, Inc., Fort Lee, New Jersey, 870 cartons of lettuce, at $3.00 per carton, plus $.65 per carton cooling and $22.50 for a temperature recorder, for a total f.o.b. contract price of $3,198.00.

4. Complainant shipped the lettuce, in interstate commerce, to respondent. A bill of lading was prepared which indicated that the pulp temperature of the lettuce, when loaded, was 36°F, and a temperature range of 34°F to 36°F was to be maintained in transit. The lettuce arrived at respondent's place of business on approximately May 14, 1984. Upon arrival, respondent unloaded and disposed of approximately 100 cartons. Respondent then requested a federal inspection, which took place on May 15, 1984, at 8:15 a.m. The inspection found as follows, in relevant part:

VARIOUS CONTAINERS Range 44 To 50°F

* * * * * * *

Applicant States: 775 cartons

Quality: Grade defects average 2% mechanical damage.

Condition: Wrapper leaves: Average 3% decay. Head leaves: Average 2% damage by Tipburn. Average 2% damage by Rib Discoloration. Average 2% damage by bruising. 2 to 3 decayed heads in ½ of cartons, none in remainder, average 6% decay. Decay is Bacterial Soft Rot in various stages.

REMARKS Inspection restricted to 30 cartons being unloaded and 4 stacks nearest rear doors.

5. After receiving the inspection results, respondent notified Jeff Nagelberg, an employee of the broker, who contacted complainant and informed complainant. Complainant did not grant protection or authorize an allowance, but indicated that it would honor any damages respondent sustained due to any breach of contract by complainant. Thereafter, on May 15, 1984, complainant sent the following telegram to respondent: "WILL CONFIRM CONVERSATION WITH MR NAGELBERG 8 AM 5/15/84 AS DISCUSSED YOUR FIRM HAS BEEN GRANTED NO PROTECTION OR AUTHORIZATION FOR ANY ALLOWANCE. HOWEVER RICHARD S BROWN INC WILL HONOR ANY DAMAGES YOU SUSTAIN DUE TO BREACH OF CONTRACT."

6. On May 16, 1984, respondent resold 772 cartons of the lettuce that it purchased from complainant to Square Produce Co., Inc., Bronx, New York, for $2,430.00.

7. Sometime in July 1984, complainant received a copy of the inspection taken on May 15, 1984. Complainant then sent the following telegram to the broker:

> UPON RECEIPT OF COPY OF INSPECTION SHOWING INSPECTION RESTRICTED TO 30 CARTONS AND 4 STACKS NEAREST REAR DOOR AND RANGE OF TEMPERATURES 44 to 50 DEGREES, RICHARD S BROWN INCORPORATED TAKES THE POSITION THAT SUITABLE SHIPPING CONDITION WAS BREACHED IN TRANSIT. RICHARD S BROWN REQUIRES PAYMENT OF SAID INVOICE IN FULL.

8. Respondent has failed to pay any part of the contract price to complainant, and complainant has failed to make any payment to respondent for the load of lettuce.

9. A formal complaint was filed on November 23, 1984, which was within nine months from when the cause of action herein accrued. Respondent filed a timely counterclaim on March 6, 1985, in connection with the subject matter of the complaint.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent denies accepting the load of lettuce. However, respondent admits unloading and selling approximately 100 cartons when the load arrived at its place of business. Respondent's partial unloading of the lettuce constituted acceptance of the entire load. Mario Saikhon v. Russell-Ward Company, Inc., 34 Agric. Dec. 1940 (1975).

Respondent contends that complainant agreed to honor any damages it sustained as a result of a breach of contract by complainant. Respondent asserts that the May 15, 1984, inspection demonstrated that complainant breached its warranty of suitable shipping condition (7 CFR 46.43(j)) and respondent is thus not liable to complainant. We cannot agree. Having accepted the lettuce, respondent became liable for the agreed upon contract price, less any damages resulting from a breach of warranty by complainant, and it is respondent's burden to prove the breach and resulting damages by a preponderance of the evidence. Stonoca Farms Corporation v. S & S Produce Inc., 42 Agric. Dec. 937 (1983). The May 15, 1984, federal inspection shows that the lettuce exhibited a total of 15% condition defects, including 6% decay. This is 1% in excess of the maximum decay allowed for lettuce of this type to meet the good delivery standards set forth in the Department's regulations. (7 CFR 46.44a(2)). The inspection also revealed that the pulp temperatures were quite high, from 44 to 50°F. Further, the inspection was restricted to 30 cartons being unloaded and four stacks near the doors. These high pulp temperatures and the small number of cartons inspected cause us to question the accuracy of the inspection results as representative of the actual condition of the lettuce when it arrived at respondent's place of business. Respondent argues that the high pulp temperatures resulted from local custom and practice, which dictates that vans be left open while awaiting federal inspection because of the shortage of inspectors. Respondent also asserts that the limited number of cartons inspected should not be a factor, as the inspector was not instructed to so limit his inspection. However, these arguments are immaterial, as the only question with which we are concerned is the accuracy of the inspection results, and not the circumstances that caused the allegedly inaccurate results to occur. Therefore, it is our conclusion that respondent has failed to sustain its burden of proving any breach of warranty by complainant.

Having failed to prove a breach of warranty by complainant, respondent is liable for the entire contract price of $3,198.00, and its failure to pay this sum to complainant is a violation of section 2 of the Act, for which reparation should be awarded with interest. Further, as respondent has failed to prove any breach by complainant, its counterclaim is without merit and must be dismissed.

ORDER

Within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $3,198.00, with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from June 1, 1984, until paid.

Respondent's counterclaim is hereby dismissed.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

ORDER REQUIRING PAYMENT OF UNDISPUTED AMOUNT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed on November 7, 1985. Complainant seeks to recover $6,234.64, which amount is alleged to be the total purchase price for melons sold to and accepted by respondent on or about January 17, 1986. Respondent filed an answer to the formal complaint on December 24, 1985, admitting that $3,340.50 of the amount claimed by complainant was due and owing to complainant on account of the transaction involved herein.

Section 7(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 499g(a)) provides, in part:

> If after the respondent has filed his answer to the complaint, it appears therein that the respondent has admitted liability for a portion of the amount claimed in the complaint as damages, the Secretary . . . may issue an order directing the respondent to pay the complainant the undisputed amount . . . leaving the respondent's liability for the undisputed amount for subsequent determination.

Accordingly, under the authority of the above quoted section, respondent shall pay to complainant, as an undisputed amount, $3,340.50. Payment of this amount shall be made within 30 days from the date of this order with interest thereon at the rate of 13 percent per annum from February 1, 1986, until paid. A failure to pay this amount within 30 days will constitute a violation of section 2 of the Act, 7 U.S.C. § 499b.

Respondent's liability for payment of the disputed amount is left for subsequent determination in the same manner and under the same procedure as if an order for the payment of the undisputed amount had been issued.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

ORDER REQUIRING PAYMENT OF UNDISPUTED AMOUNT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed on September 12, 1985. Complainant seeks to recover $4,793.95, which amount is alleged to be the total purchase price for mixed produce sold to and accepted by respondent between August 8 and September 29, 1984. Respondent filed an answer to the formal complaint on December 26, 1985, admitting that $2,630.60 of the amount claimed by complainant was due and owing to complainant on account of the transaction involved herein.

Section 7(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 499g(a)) provides, in part:

> If after the respondent has filed his answer to the complaint, it appears therein that the respondent has admitted liability for a portion of the amount claimed in the complaint as damages, the Secretary . . . may issue an order directing the respondent to pay the complainant the undisputed amount . . . leaving the respondent's liability for the undisputed amount for subsequent determination.

Accordingly, under the authority of the above quoted section, respondent shall pay to complainant, as an undisputed amount, $2,630.60. Payment of this amount shall be made within 30 days from the date of this order with interest thereon at the rate of 13 percent per annum from November 1, 1984, until paid. A failure to pay this amount within 30 days will constitute a violation of section 2 of the Act, 7 U.S.C. § 499b.

Respondent's liability for payment of the disputed amount is left for subsequent determination in the same manner and under the same procedure as if an order for the payment of the undisputed amount had been issued.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

Failure to deliver produce on schedule—Reparation.

Respondent failed to deliver two loads of lettuce on schedule and complainant was consequently unable to meet his commitments for an advertised sale. From calculations made, it was judged that complainant's total damages amounted to $6460 for respondent's failure to deliver. However, complainant sought only the $5620 of its customers alleged cover purchases. Thus, respondent's liability to complainant restricted to that amount, i.e. $5620, plus 13% interest.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks an award of reparation in the amount of $5,620.00 against respondent in connection with a contract for the sale of two truckloads of lettuce in interstate commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation prepared by the Department was served upon each of the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent which filed an answer thereto denying liability to complainant.

Since the amount of damages claimed in the complaint did not exceed $15,000, the shortened method of procedure provided in the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Under this procedure, the verified pleadings of the parties are considered as part of the evidence, as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition the parties were given the opportunity to submit further evidence in the form of verified statements. Complainant submitted an opening statement, respondent submitted an answering statement, and complainant submitted a statement in reply. Neither party filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant H. Hall and Co., Inc., is a corporation whose address is P.O. Box 5125, Salinas, California.

2. Respondent, Action Produce, is a partnership composed of Davis Packing Co., Pat H. Hodges, John Kai, and Rala Singh, whose address is P.O. Box 1712, Glendale, Arizona. At the time of the transactions involved herein this respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On or about August 4, 1983, respondent contracted to sell to complainant one truckload of lettuce for shipment on August 6, 1983, from Center, Colorado, to complainant's customer at Jamaica, Long Island, New York. The agreed f.o.b. price of the lettuce was $4.00 per carton, plus 70¢ per carton vacuum cooling, and $3.00 per carton for freight. On the same day, respondent agreed to sell to complainant an additional truckload of lettuce for shipment on August 8, to the same destination, for an f.o.b. price of $5.00 per carton, plus 70¢ per carton for vacuum cooling, and $3.00 per carton for freight.

4. Respondent did not harvest or ship lettuce on August 6, because of rain and so notified complainant at 8:00 a.m. on the morning of August 6, 1983. The lettuce which was scheduled to be shipped on August 8, was also not shipped due to mechanical difficulty with the truck on which it was to be shipped. Complainant was not notified until the morning of August 9, 1983, that the shipment scheduled for August 8, had not been made, and at that time complainant informed respondent that it was too late for any lettuce to be shipped since arrival would not be in time for the previously advertised sale scheduled by complainant's customer for Thursday, August 11, 1983.

5. The formal complaint was filed on February 14, 1984, which was within nine months after the causes of action herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

The parties agree that the lettuce which was scheduled for shipment on August 6, 1983, was not shipped by respondent due to weather conditions. However, complainant claims that this did not excuse respondent from its failure to ship the lettuce.

The parties are in disagreement over whether respondent stood ready to make the shipment scheduled for August 8, 1983, in a timely fashion. Respondent claims that it was ready to make shipment on August 8, but states that complainant gave notice on the morning of August 8, that shipment should not be made. Complainant disputes this contention, and instead maintains that respondent failed to ship on August 8, because of mechanical difficulty with the truck on which shipment was scheduled to be made. Complainant asserts that when complainant called respondent on the morning of August 9, 1983, complainant found out for the first time that a shipment had not been made on August 8. Complainant states that it was on the morning on August 9, 1983, that respondent gave the excuse that there had been mechanical difficulty with the truck. Complainant maintains that at this time it informed respondent that it was too late for any shipment of lettuce to be made. We have found that complainant's version of the events relative to the second load of lettuce is supported by a preponderance of the evidence.

We have long held that, in the absence of express conditions which are made a part of the contract, weather and transportation difficulties do not furnish an excuse for failure to ship, unless it is known and agreed ahead of time that the produce which is the subject of the contract is to come from a specific acreage. See Christensen Bros. v. Hecht Produce Company, 17 Agric. Dec. 473 (1958). It is clear that Section 2–615 of the Uniform Commercial Code, which relates to excuse by failure of presupposed conditions, was intended to embody the existing law in this regard. Official comment 9 to section 2–615 states in relevant part that:

> The case of a farmer who has contracted to sell crops to be grown on designated land may be regarded as falling either within the section on casualty to identified goods in this section, and he may be excused, when there is a failure of the specific crop. . . .

In the absence of a specific understanding between the parties that the produce is to come from a specified tract of land, a shipper can protect himself by simply specifying as a condition of the contract that shipment will be made "weather permitting" or some similar language. The shipper could also have made availability of transportation a condition as to time of shipment. As we stated in Christensen Bros. v. Hecht Produce Company, supra,:

> Under the contract, it was respondent's duty to go into the open market if necessary and obtain the cabbage to enable him to fulfill his part of the contract. Respondent says there was no Arizona cabbage available and he was therefore prevented from obtaining cabbage to fulfill the contract. This contention is without merit. The contract did not specify Arizona cabbage. If complainant could obtain a replacement load of cabbage, obviously respondent could have obtained cabbage with which to fill the contract.

In this case complainant states that its customer purchased lettuce to cover the contract. This was certainly permissible under the circumstances of this case. However, the only documentation which complainant furnished of the cover purchase was an invoice to complainant from its customer for the difference in price between its customer's purchase cost and contract cost for the lettuce. This is not sufficient documentation for the cover purchase. In addition there was no explanation as to why the cover purchase was effectuated in Philadelphia rather than on the New York market.

The Uniform Commercial Code § 2-711 provides in relevant part that where the seller fails to make delivery or repudiates the buyer may either cover "or . . . recover damages for non-delivery" as provided in section 2-713. Accordingly, we will attempt to assess damages for non-delivery. Section 2-713 of the U.C.C. states that "the measure of damages for non-delivery or repudiation by the seller is the difference between the market price at the time when the buyer learned of the breach and the contract price together with any incidental and consequential damages provided in this Article (Section 2-715), but less expenses saved in consequence of the seller's breach." This is not an anticipatory repudiation case (see V. V. Vogel & Sons Farms, Inc. v. Continental Farms, Inc., (PACA Docket 2-6191, decided March 21, 1985), 44 Agric. Dec. (1985)), and the "time when the buyer learned of the breach" must be interpreted as the time when complainant learned that shipment had not been made as scheduled, or the mornings of Aug. 6 and 9, 1983. See White & Summers, Uniform Commercial Code, § 6-4, and § 6-7 at p. 199 (1972). Section 2-713 of the U.C.C. further provides that in cases of non-delivery or repudiation by the seller "[m]arket price is to be determined as of the place for tender or, in cases of rejection after arrival or revocation of acceptance, as of the place of arrival." The place for tender in a f.o.b. shipping point contract is at shipping point. See White and Summers, Uniform Commercial Code, § 6-4, p. 184-188 (1972). See also Globe Products Co. v. Laurence Frozen Foods 19 Agric. Dec. 125 (1960); Pearce-Young-Angel Co. v. Turlock, 18 Agric. Dec. 43 (1959); and Western Fruit Dist'rs v. Turlock Frozen Foods, 17 Agric. Dec. 780 (1958). However, comment No. 1 to U.C.C. section 2-713 states that the prices to be used in calculating damages should come from "the market in which the buyer would have obtained cover had he sought that relief." On this basis, where cover was unobtainable the shipping point market, we have used destination market prices as the basis for computing damages. Bliss Produce Co. v. A.E. Albert & Sons, 35 Agric. Dec. 742 (1976).

As to the first load complainant had time to obtain cover in the shipping area and still meet its customer's requirements in a timely manner. However, complainant stated that it immediately attempted to book another load in the shipping area and was unable to do so at any price. This was not rebutted by respondent. Under the circumstances it is appropriate that we look to the destination market for the computation of damages for this load. As to the second load, when complainant learned of the breach on August 9, 1983, there was not sufficient time left to seek cover on the shipping point market and still meet the scheduled delivery time. Consequently we will also look to the destination market in order to compute damages for the second load.

There were no quotations for Colorado lettuce for New York City during the applicable period. The closest market for which quotations are available is Philadelphia, and the first date during the applicable period with Colorado lettuce quotations on the Philadelphia market is August 10, 1983. See U.C.C. section 2-723(a). The Market News Service report for Philadelphia on that date shows Colorado lettuce quoted at $12 to $13. Respondent's shipping schedule for the period in question showed shipments containing from 748 to 908 cartons with an average of 850 cartons. Using this latter figure for the two loads, and subtracting the respective contract price plus freight of $7.70 for the first load, and $8.70 for the second load, from the lower Market News Service reported price of $12.00, gives us $6,460.00 as complainant's total damages for respondent's failure to deliver. Since complainant requested only the $5,620 cost of its customer's alleged cover purchases, complainant's recovery should be restricted to such amount. Respondent's failure to pay complainant the sum of $5,620 is a violation of section 2 of the Act for which reparation should be awarded to complainant with interest.

ORDER

Within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant as reparation, $5,620, with interest thereon at the rate of 13 percent per annum from September 1, 1983, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

THE KATZ COMPANY, INC. v. THE KUNKEL CO. INC. PACA Docket No. 2-6647. Decided March 14, 1986.

Acceptance of potato load with rot—not occurable over shipment period—Respondent meets burden of proof—Finding for respondent.

Respondent's customer accepted a shipment of potatoes bought from complainant. Respondent subsequently, on advice from customer, informed complainant that there was substantial mahogany rot in consignment, as verified by federal inspection. It was held that this was a condition that could not have occurred during the shipment period. Respondent tendered a check for $1600 for the damaged consignment, having subtracted a $2721 loss from the invoice price. Complainant refused that payment, demanding the entire invoice amount. Our analysis held complainant must bear the loss resulting from the poor condition of the potatoes. Thus, respondent was directed to pay complainant the $1600 originally tendered, plus 13 per cent interest per annum until paid.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This case was brought pursuant to the reparation provisions of the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award in the amount of $4,320.80, in connection with a shipment of potatoes in interstate commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation prepared by the Department of Agriculture was served upon each party. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent which filed an answer thereto denying liability. As the amount claimed in the complaint does not exceed $15,000.00, the shortened method of procedure provided for in the Rules of Practice is applicable (7 CFR § 47.20). Pursuant to this procedure, the verified pleadings of the parties are considered part of the evidence, as is the Department's report of investigation. The parties were given the opportunity to file additional evidence in the form of verified statements. Neither party did so. Although given an opportunity to do so, neither party filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, the Katz Company, Inc., is a corporation whose address is P. O. Box 708, Plover, Wisconsin 54467.

2. Respondent, the Kunkel Company, Inc., is a corporation whose address is Room 105, 1301 Cambridge Street, Hopkins, Minnesota 55343.

3. On March 8, 1984, the parties entered into an oral contract whereby respondent purchased 440 sacks of U.S. No. 1A potatoes, 100 pounds per sack at a price of $9.82 per cwt. delivered to Albert Lea, Minnesota.

4. Complainant shipped 440 sacks of potatoes to Mrs. Gerry's Kitchen, Inc. on March 9, 1984, and such potatoes arrived at the delivery point on March 12, 1984. Respondent's customer accepted the shipment on March 12, 1984.

5. Respondent notified complainant on March 14, 1984, that an internal defect identified as "mahogany rot" had been discovered in the shipment of potatoes. Respondent also requested a federal inspection of the potatoes on that date.

6. On March 15, 1984, at 1:40 p.m., a federal inspection was made of the potatoes which showed, in relevant part, as follows:

> CONDITION OF LOAD: Stacked on pallets in warehouse.
>
> CONDITION OF PACK: XXX
>
> TEMPERATURE OF PRODUCT: In various sacks 37° to 52°F.
>
> SIZE: Generally 1⅞ to 3½ inches, mostly 2 to 3 inches in diameter. Average 3% under 1⅞ inches.
>
> QUALITY: Fairly clean to clean; mature; generally fairly well to well formed. External grade defects from 2 to 8%, average 4%, mostly old bruises and misshapen.
>
> CONDITION: Firm. From 2 to 10% per sample, average 7% damage by sunken discolored areas with underlying flesh gray to black. From 2 to 16% per sample, average 11% serious damage by Internal Mahogany Browning. No soft rot.
>
> GRADE: Fails to grade U.S. No. 1 account toal [sic] grade defects including 11% Internal Mahogany Browning.

7. Mrs. Gerry's Kitchen, Inc., had to dispose of many of the potatoes because they were unusable. That business also expended extra labor resulting in more costs in processing the shipment. As a result, respondent suffered losses totalling $2,720.80.

best copy available

8. Respondent tendered a check in the amount of $1,600.00 in payment for the load of potatoes. This amount was arrived at by subtracting the loss suffered by respondent ($2,720.80) from the invoice price ($4,320.80). Such payment was refused by complainant, which demanded the entire invoice amount.

9. The informal complaint was filed on May 4, 1984. The formal complaint was filed on July 23, 1984. These filings were within nine months after the cause of action alleged herein occurred.

CONCLUSIONS

There are two issues in this case. The first issued is whether there was an inordinate delay between acceptance of the potatoes by the purchaser and notification of breach to the seller. A second issue is whether the mahogany rot occurred prior to acceptance, in which case complainant must bear responsibility, or after acceptance, in which case respondent is responsible. Based upon our analysis of the facts and the law, we find the complainant must bear the loss resulting from the poor condition of the potatoes.

There are two circumstances in which the delay in notification could cause respondent to bear the loss resulting from the poor condition of the potatoes. First, the amount of time passing between acceptance of the shipment and notification of breach to the seller could be so unfair to complainant that it would be inequitable to grant respondent a remedy for breach. The rule of law regarding notification time limits provides that "[w]here a tender has been accepted, (a) the buyer must within a reasonable time after he discovered or should have discovered any breach notify the seller of breach or be barred from any remedy. . . ." U.C.C. § 2-607, See also Smith v. Fischer, 16 Agric. Dec. 1008, 1011 (1957); Quality Potatoe Co. v. Cooney & Korschack, 13 Agric. Dec. 1104 (1954). Applying this authority to the facts of this case, the issue may be stated as whether respondent discovered the breach and reported it to complainant within a reasonable time after acceptance.

Complainant maintains that respondent should have immediately inspected the potatoes at the time of delivery, and therefore, discovered the breach before or immediately following acceptance. Respondent argues that the defect was internal, and therefore, not discoverable unless the potatoes were cut open. Since mahogany rot is an internal defect, in order to detect it, potato purchasers would have to slice the potatoes open for a proper inspection. If the potatoes are to be processed within a relatively short time, as in the instant case, it is reasonable to wait until processing before cutting the potatoes, unless the buyer has notice of a potential internal defect. There is no evidence presented that would indicate the respondent should have been alerted to the possibility of mahogany rot occurring in the load of potatoes it received prior to receipt.

The second issue is whether the potatoes conformed to the specifications agreed to by the parties at the time of acceptance. We do not believe that they did. Nowhere does complainant offer any evidence that the potatoes did not have mahogany rot at the time of processing—two days after acceptance. The only question is whether the rot could have occurred during the two-day period.

Having accepted the potatoes, respondent bears the burden of proof on this issue. See, U.C.C. § 2-607(4); Roy Rucker Produce v. J. P. Miller Wholesale Produce, 33 Agric. Dec. 871, 873 (1974). Respondent argues that mahogany rot is a condition that occurs in potatoes over a period of time longer than two days. In support of its position, respondent cites USDA Market Bulletin # 479 which provides that mahogany browning is a defect "caused by lengthy storage at too cold a temperature, generally three months or more." While the language cited by respondent is not specific, we conclude that it would be an extraordinary and unlikely occurrence for mahogany rot to occur over a two-day period in potatoes.

Since complainant does not dispute either the condition of the potatoes at the time respondent had them inspected or the results of that inspection, and since mahogany rot is not produced in normal circumstances over a two-day period, we hold that respondent has met its burden of proof. We, therefore, find for the respondent.

As set forth in Finding of Fact No. 8 supra, respondent tendered, and complainant refused to accept, a check in the amount of $1,600.00 in payment for the potatoes. Complainant does not dispute the amount of loss suffered by respondent ($2,720.80), therefore; it is held that respondent owes complainant $1,600.00, for which reparation shall be awarded. A valid tender was made thereby precluding an award of interest to complainant from the date of the transaction. Salinas Marketing Cooperative v. Leonard O'Day Company, 16 Agric. Dec. 719, 725 (1957). Respondent shall remit $1,600.00 to complainant. Its failure to pay this amount as ordered herein will constitute a violation of section 2 of the Act.

ORDER

Within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant as reparation, $1,600.00, with interest at the rate of 13 percent per annum from the first day of the month beginning after the date of this order.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.), hereinafter referred to as the Act. A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $3,894.00 in connection with the sale of mixed vegetables in interstate commerce.

A copy of the formal complaint and a copy of the Department's report of investigation were served upon respondent. A copy of the report of investigation was served upon complainant.

Respondent filed an answer in which it denied liability asserting that it had been billed twice for the same produce.

Since the amount claimed in damages does not exceed $15,000.00, the shortened procedure provided for in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) applies. Pursuant to such procedure, the parties were given an opportunity to submit additional evidence in the form of verified statements. Complainant declined to file an opening statement. Respondent's proposed Answering Statement was not timely filed and was therefore not accepted. Both parties declined an opportunity to file briefs.

References to Exhibits refer to the exhibits made a part of the report of investigation compiled by Department officials.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant Yates Bros. Produce, hereinafter referred to as the complainant, is a trade name of Yates Bros. Farm, Inc. Complainant's mailing address is P.O. Box 249, Morven, Georgia 31638.

2. Respondent Norman M. Coffin, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent, is a corporation whose mailing address is State Farmers Market, Administration Building, Office No. 26, Pompano Beach, Florida 33060.

3. Both parties are, and at all times material herein were, licensed with the Secretary of Agriculture to do business under the Act.

4. Between November 5, 1983, and November 9, 1983, complainant sold to respondent eight truckloads of mixed vegetables. The invoice numbers were 5421, 5432, 5442, 5452, 5467, 5438, 5462, 5469 and totalled $8,284.00.

5. Respondent paid $4,390 on September 11, 1984, in full payment of invoices 5421, 5469, 5438 and 5442.

6. Respondent has not paid for invoices 5432, 5452, 5462, and 5467 totalling $3,894.00.

7. The formal complaint was filed on December 11, 1984. An informal complaint was filed on June 18, 1984, which was within nine months after the cause of action herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

This case involves a dispute over whether respondent ever received the goods complainant purportedly shipped. Respondent claims that it was double billed twice for the same shipment of goods. An examination of the trucking records and invoices in question, however, shows that there were eight different, albeit in some cases similar, shipments.

Exhibit 1a of the report of investigation is invoice 5438 and the delivery ticket showing that on November 5, 1983, complainant shipped to respondent 250 hampers of snap beans, 60 hampers of wax beans and 50 hampers of pole beans. The trucker was Steve Herr. Respondent claims that this transaction was the same shipment as was billed on November 8, 1983, as invoice number 5467. An examination of that invoice and delivery ticket which appear as exhibit 1g of the report of investigation shows that the delivery ticket was signed by a Joe Matosis not Steve Herr. Additionally, there is no mention on #5467 of the shipment of any wax beans and there were only 240 hampers of green beans shipped not 250 as in invoice 5438. It is clear, therefore, that these are two separate transactions.

Comparing invoices 5421 and 5432 which are very close in price, $600 and $612, respectively, show that they, too, relate to separate shipments. Invoice 5421 (Exhibit 1f) shows that 100 hampers of snap beans and 25 hampers of was beans were shipped to an A. Vissalo and that the trucker was named Demby. Invoice 5432 (Exhibit 1c) makes no mention of wax beans, is for 102 hampers of snap beans and indicates that the produce was shipped to Patterson, N.J. by a Joey Tucker. These invoices refer to different loads, different destinations and different truckers. They are, therefore, clearly separate transactions.

Invoices 5462 and 5452 are for similar amounts but are once again shipped by different truckers and are for different loads. Invoice 5462 (Exhibit 1e) shows that Monroe Gibbs was the trucker who delivered 100 cartons of fancy green squash or zucchini, 100 cartons of medium green squash or zucchini and 22 hampers of snap beans and that the total invoice price was $732.00. Invoice 5452 (Exhibit 1d) shows an entirely different load consisting of 60 hampers of snap beans, 10 hampers of wax, 20 hampers of pole beans and 40 hampers of fancy green squash for a total invoice price of $760.00. The trucker was designated as Paul T. These are clearly different transactions.

The last disputed set of shipments refer to invoices 5469 and 5442. These are clearly different transactions. Invoice 5469 (Exhibit 1h) was for only $500.00 and covered the shipment of 50 hampers of pole beans and 50 cartons of fresh green squash via Associated Trucking. Invoice 5442, (Exhibit 1b) on the other hand, was for $1440.00 covering the shipment of 200 hampers of snap beans, 20 hampers of pole beans and 10 hampers of wax beans via Eagle Trucking. These two transactions involve different loads shipped via different truckers.

Respondent's defense that it had already paid for the transactions because it had, in essence, been double-billed is without merit. We find that complainant did ship the produce indicated by the eight invoices, and that respondent has only paid for four the transactions and still owes $3,894.00.

Complainant is entitled to receive the value of the goods shipped which is measured by the contract price of $8,284.00 less $4,390.00 already paid, or $3,894.00. Respondent's failure to pay that amount is a violation of section 2 of the Act for which reparation should be awarded with interest.

ORDER

Within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant as reparation, $3,894.00, with interest thereon at the rate of 13 percent per annum from December 1, 1983, until paid.

Copies of this Order shall be served upon the parties.

REPARATION ORDER

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $30,604.00 in connection with shipments of mixed produce in interstate commerce. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto, admitting the material allegations of the complaint, including the indebtedness claimed by complainant. Accordingly the issuance of an order without further procedure is appropriate, pursuant to section 47.8(d) of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 47.8(d)).

Complainant, Adams Brothers Produce Co., Inc., is a corporation whose address is P. O. Box 2682, Birmingham, Alabama 35202. Respondent, Meat Distributors, Inc., is a corporation whose address is P. O. Box 9608, Mobile, Alabama 36691. At the time of the transaction involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

The facts alleged in the formal complaint are hereby adopted as findings of fact of this order. On the basis of these facts, we conclude that the actions of respondent are in violation of section 2 of the Act (7 U.S.C. 499b) and have resulted in damages to complainant of $30,604.00. Accordingly, within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $30,604.00, with interest thereon at the rate of 13 percent per annum from September 1, 1985, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

Complainant found to be the proper party to file the complainant. Respondent buyer sustained his burden of proving that the contract terms were changed to a consignment on one of the three lots of produce involved. Complainant liable for buyer's loss incurred in handling consigned lot. Where buyer had given the respondent broker authority to order produce in his name and terminated the grant of authority without notifying the produce industry, buyer is estopped from denying the apparent authority of the broker to purchase the other two lots from complainant. Buyer liable for the purchase price of the two lots. Broker breached its brokers duties with respect to the two lots, but incurred no liability because of the wording of the complainant. DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent Pete Guinta, d/b/a Top of The Hill Produce or, if such respondent is not found to be liable, respondent Lloyd Myers Co., Inc., in the amount of $23,936.80 in connection with three loads of lettuce allegedly sold and shipped to respondent Pete Guinta, d/b/a Top of The Hill Produce, in interstate commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation prepared by the Department was served upon each of the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon each respondent. Respondent Lloyd Myers Co., Inc. filed an answer, denying liability. Respondent Pete Guinta, d/b/a Top of The Hill Produce, initially failed to file an answer and was held in default but, after its motion to reopen the hearing was granted, it filed an answer denying liability and asserting a counterclaim for $727.82.

The amount claimed as damages exceeds $15,000 and an oral hearing was requested. Therefore, an oral hearing took place on May 7, 1985, at Syracuse, New York. At the hearing, one witness testified for complainant, one witness testified for respondent Pete Guinta, d/b/a Top of The Hill Produce, and one witness testified for respondent Lloyd Myers Co., Inc. Evidence was introduced by the Presiding Officer as well as by all three parties. Pursuant to section 47.7 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.7) the report of investigation prepared by the Department is also considered part of the evidence. The parties were given an opportunity to file briefs and claims for fees and expenses. Complainant and respondent Pete Guinta, d/b/a Top of the Hill Produce filed briefs. Complainant also filed a claim for fees and expenses.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Sun Valley Packing Company, is a partnership whose address is P.O. Box 869, Blythe, California. At the time of the transaction involved in the counterclaim, complainant was licensed under the Act.

2. Respondent, Pete Guinta, d/b/a Top of The Hill Produce (hereinafter, "Guinta") is an individual whose address is 2100 Park Street, Syracuse, New York. At the times of the transactions involved herein in the complaint, Guinta was licensed under the Act.

3. Respondent, Lloyd Myers Co., Inc. (hereinafter, "Myers"), is a corporation whose address is 23742 Rotunda Road, P.O. Box 55818, Valencia, California. At the times of the transactions involved herein in the complaint, Myers was licensed under the Act.

4. In early March 1982, Guinta and Myers entered into an agreement providing that Guinta would accept billing on certain invoices for produce purchased on his behalf by Myers but shipped to another buyer. When Myers received payment from the buyer, it would issue a check payable to Guinta, at which time Guinta would pay the original invoice. The agreement did not provide that Myers would purchase the produce from Guinta, or that Myers was not obligated to pay Guinta until Myers received payment from the third party buyer. Guinta set forth the provisions of this arrangement in an August 9, 1983, letter to the Department, which was placed into evidence by the Presiding Officer at the oral hearing. Complainant was never notified of the existence of this arrangement. Several loads of produce were purchased by Myers and billed to Guinta pursuant to this arrangement. Towards the end of March 1982, Guinta may have informed Myers that it was terminating the agreement, but complainant was never notified of this.

5. On approximately March 29, 1982 and April 1, 1982, complainant's agent, Dave Garcia, sold to Guinta, through Myers acting as the broker, two truckloads of lettuce. The March 29, 1982 load consisted of 794 cartons of 2½ dozen Nunn Brand lettuce at $12.00 per carton plus $.65 per carton cooling and $22.50 for a Ryan recorder, for a total contract price of $10,066.60, f.o.b. The April 1, 1982, load consisted of 825 cartons of 2½ dozen Sir Jason Brand lettuce at $12.00 per carton plus $.65 per carton cooling and $22.50 for a Ryan recorder, for a total contract price of $10,458.75, f.o.b. Complainant loaded the lettuce onto trucks, and prepared a bill of lading showing the destination as Guinta at Syracuse, New York. However, both loads of lettuce were diverted by Myers to a receiver in Kansas City, Missouri. Neither Guinta nor complainant were notified of the diversion. Guinta did not learn of the purchases by Myers on his behalf until shortly after they were made, when it received complainant's invoices.

6. Soon after arranging the March 29, 1982, transaction, Myers issued and sent to complainant and Guinta a confirmation of sale noting that the seller was High & Mighty Farms, Blythe, California, and the price terms were $7.00 per carton plus $.65 per carton cooling. The confirmation did not mention that the lettuce was to be diverted to Kansas City, Missouri.

7. Complainant was never paid for the March 29 and April 1, 1982, loads.

8. On approximately April 6, 1982, complainant sold to Guinta, through Myers acting as the broker, 513 cartons of Sir Jason Brand lettuce at $6.00 per carton, plus $.65 per carton cooling, for a total contract price of $3,411.45, f.o.b.

9. The April 6, 1982, load of lettuce was shipped to Guinta, along with produce from another shipper, and arrived on approximately April 12, 1982. Upon receipt of the load, Pete Guinta wrote on the bill of lading that only 507 cartons were present. The load was then federally inspected, which resulted as follows, in relevant part:

Products Inspected:	Iceberg Type LETTUCE in cartons branded: . . . "SIR JASON, LETTUCE 2½ DOZ. HEADS, SUNVALLEY PACKING CO., BLYTHE, CA.".
	Applicant states: 513 cartons Sir Jason Brand . . . .
Condition of Pack:	EACH LOT: Stacked at above location on pallets, in cooler. EACH LOT: Some cartons are crushed in at various locations, from 1 to 2 inches.
Condition of Pack:	EACH LOT: Mostly fairly tight, some slack 1 to 2 inches. . . .

Sir Jason Lot: Range 29.50 pounds to 43.00 pounds, average 37.07 pounds net weight per carton.

TEMPERATURE OF PRODUCT: Range 37 to 39°F.

Quality: EACH LOT: Heads or portions of heads not affected by condition defects are fresh and crisp.

Condition J.H.K. LOT: WRAPPER LEAVES: Range 5 to 18 heads per carton, average 36% damage by yellow leaves. Range 1 to 4 heads per carton, average 10% Bacterial Soft Rot, in various stages, affecting wrapper leaves only. HEAD LEAVES: Range 2 to 6 heads per carton, average 12% damage by yellow leaves. Range 1 to 3 heads per carton, average 7% Bacterial Soft Rot, in various stages, affecting 1 to 4 outer leaves.

10. After the inspection, Guinta notified Myers of the condition problems, and Myers contacted complainant, which agreed to allow Guinta to handle the April 6 load on consignment. Myers then issued a confirmation of sale on April 14, 1982, reflecting this change in the contract terms.

11. Guinta resold the lettuce of the April 6 load and prepared an account of sales, which he sent to complainant. The account of sales reads as follows:

Sun Valley Packing Company

Account of sales: Received only 507

12. Complainant was never paid for the April 6, 1982, shipment.

13. Complainant has never paid Guinta the $727.82 which Guinta claims to be due and owing for the April 6, 1982, shipment.

14. An informal complaint was filed by complainant on December 30, 1982, which was within nine months from when the alleged causes of action herein accrued. A formal complaint was filed on June 17, 1983.

15. Guinta originally failed to file an answer and was held in default. However, Guinta's motion to reopen was granted and Guinta filed an answer on February 24, 1984, in which he asserted a counterclaim in connection with the subject matter of the complaint.

CONCLUSIONS

The first issue which must be resolved is whether the complainant is the proper party to bring the complaint filed herein. Both respondents deny that the three loads of lettuce at issue were purchased from complainant. Myers claims that the purchases were made from Dave Garcia, selling for High & Mighty Farms, Blythe, California. The record contains confirmations of sale issued by Myers for the March 29, 1982, and April 6, 1982, loads which indicate that High & Mighty Farms, not complainant, was the seller. However, Dave Garcia testified (Tr. at 11, 12, 16, 17) that the three loads of lettuce sold to Guinta through Myers were from a small lot owned by complainant. Guinta admits receiving complainant's invoices for the loads. In addition, an April 12, 1982, inspection taken on the April 6 load when it arrived at Guinta's place of business shows that the lettuce originated from complainant (Finding of Fact 9). Further, Guinta sent his account of sales to complainant (Finding of Fact 11). Therefore, while Myers may not have been aware of complainant's involvement, it is apparent that Guinta was well aware that complainant was the seller of the three loads of lettuce.

We will next discuss the April 6, 1982, shipment, which was admittedly received by Guinta. Guinta claims that when the truck arrived, it contained only 507 cartons, not the 513 cartons it had ordered. The record contains a bill of lading on which Pete Guinta wrote that only 507 cartons were received (Finding of Fact 10). Although the April 12, 1982, federal inspection says that the applicant, Guinta, asserted that 513 cartons were present at that time, we believe the writing on the bill of lading is more convincing evidence of the number of cartons actually received by Guinta.

Guinta also claims that the 507 cartons were severely deteriorated upon arrival, and this is borne out by an April 12, 1982, inspection report (Finding of Fact 9). Guinta contends that the contract terms were changed to a consignment. Complainant denies this, but the record contains a confirmation of sale issued by the broker reflecting this change (Finding of Fact 10). The burden is on the party asserting a change in the contract terms to prove such a change by a preponderance of the evidence (American Banana Co. Inc. v. Marvin Gray, 41 Agric. Dec. 539 (1982)), and it is our view that Guinta has sustained his burden of proof in this regard. Guinta has submitted an account of sales, which shows that only $982.00 was received on resale. This is a reasonable figure considering the severe deterioration shown by the lettuce upon its arrival. In his account of sales, Guinta claims that after deducting freight and handling, complainant owes him $727.82. We conclude that Guinta's claim is valid, and find that complainant is liable for $727.82 in connection with the April 6, 1982, shipment. The complainant alleges that if Guinta is not found to be liable, Myers should be liable for failing to properly perform its broker's duties. However, we do not perceive any breach of duty by Myers with respect to this transaction.

Guinta claims it never ordered or received the March 29, 1982, and April 1, 1982, loads of lettuce. Myers contends that it had an arrangement with Guinta whereby Myers would order the produce on behalf of Guinta and then purchase it from him. Myers would then send the produce to a third party. Myers claims that it was only obligated to pay Guinta if it received payment for the loads from the third party to whom the loads eventually were shipped, and since it did not receive such payment, it had no obligation to pay Guinta. Guinta agrees to having arranged with Myers for Myers to order produce in Guinta's name, with the understanding that the produce would be shipped elsewhere. However, Guinta does not agree that Myers bought such produce from him for shipment to a third party, or that Myers had no obligation to pay him until Myers received payment by the third party. In addition, Guinta claims that it ended this arrangement towards the end of March 1982, shortly before the two transactions at issue occurred.

Guinta's version of this arrangement with Myers is set forth in his August 9, 1983, letter to the Department (Finding of Fact 4), and we believe it accurately describes the arrangement.

Respondents do not allege that complainant was ever notified of the arrangement between them, and admit having failed to pay complainant for the two loads of lettuce. The question to be resolved is which respondent is liable for the lettuce. A similar situation was presented in George Arakelian Farms, Inc. v. Leonard O'Day Co. and/or O–K Distributors, 31 Agric. Dec. 1395 (1972). In that case, the respondents claimed that they had agreed to a business arrangement allegedly prompted by O–K's recordkeeping problems. For a limited period of time, O–K would order produce on behalf of O'Day. O–K would sell the produce to third parties, collect the purchase price, and remit it to O'Day. O'Day would then use these funds to pay the produce sellers. According to the respondents, the purchases at issue in that case were made by O–K after its arrangement with O'Day had terminated. Therefore, the respondents contended that O–K rather than O'Day was liable. The Judicial Officer found O'Day to be solely liable, stating (at 1401) as follows:

> By placing Kirchberg [O–K] in a position of having apparent authority to act for him, O'Day thus became liable to complainant not withstanding his alleged lack of actual authority. In situations such as this where a principal by any act or conduct knowingly causes or permits another to appear as his agent, either generally or for a particular purpose, he will be estopped to deny such agency.

The Judicial Officer went on to note (at 1404) that no notice was ever given to the perishable agricultural commodities industry that this arrangement had ever been terminated and O–K no longer had authority to make purchases for O'Day. Similarly, in this case, by permitting Myers to order produce in Guinta's name, for which Guinta was to be billed, and failing to notify the perishable agricultural commodities industry that this arrangement was no longer in effect, Guinta is now estopped from denying that Myers was no longer acting as his agent at the time it made the two purchases at issue. Therefore, Guinta must be held liable for the full purchase price of the two loads in the amounts of $10,066.60 and $10,478.75, totalling $20,525.35.

Myers' conduct as a broker was certainly in breach of its broker's duties set forth in section 46.28 of the regulations (7 CFR § 46.28), as it did not fully inform complainant that Guinta was not going to be receiving the March 30 and April 1, 1982, loads, and did not prepare memoranda of sale stating truthfully who was going to be receiving them. As reprehensible as Myers' conduct was, it cannot be held liable, as complainant has alleged that Myers is liable only if Guinta is found not to be.

We have determined that Guinta is liable to complainant for the contract prices of the two loads it purchased, through Myers, in the amount of $20,525.35, less the $727.82 lost by Guinta as a result of the consigned load, or $19,797.53. Guinta's failure to pay complainant this amount is a violation of section 2 of the Act, for which reparation should be awarded, with interest.

Complainant, as the prevailing party, is entitled to reasonable fees and expenses in connection with the oral hearing. Complainant has submitted a claim for such fees and expenses in the amount of $4,367.17. Complainant's claim is reasonable, and will be awarded in full.

ORDER

Within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent Pete Guinta, d/b/a Top of The Hill Produce, shall pay to complainant $19,797.53, with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from May 1, 1982, until paid.

Within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent Pete Guinta, d/b/a Top of The Hill Produce, shall pay to complainant, as reparation for fees and expenses, $4,367.17, with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from the date of this order, until paid.

The complaint against respondent Lloyd Myers Co., Inc. is dismissed.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

TRI PRODUCE, INC., v. GIANT FOOD, INC. PACA Docket No. 2-6812. Decided March 18, 1986.

Rejection without reasonable cause—transportation conditions abnormal—resale would have been futile—after buyer rejects, seller may retain possession.

Respondent rejected the cantaloupes without reasonable cause and held liable for the contract price, as the warranty of suitable shipping condition was voided by the existence of abnormal transportation conditions, evidenced by the freezing damage affecting the melons upon arrival at respondent's place of business. Complainant was not required to resell the melons because such an effort would have been futile. Complainant was not obligated to turn the melons over to respondent for resale after respondent's rejection.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $5,062.50 in connection with the sale and shipment of a truckload of cantaloupes to respondent in interstate commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation prepared by the Department was served upon each of the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto, denying liability.

Since the amount claimed as damages does not exceed $15,000.00 the shortened procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to such procedure, the report of investigation prepared by the Department is considered part of the evidence, as are the verified complaint and answer. The parties were given an opportunity to submit additional evidence in the form of verified statements and to file briefs. Respondent submitted an answering statement and complainant submitted a statement in reply. Respondent also filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Tri Produce Co., is a corporation whose address is 1795 North Fine Avenue, Fresno, California.

2. Respondent, Giant Food, Inc., is a corporation whose address is P.O. Box 1441, Washington, D. C. At the time of the transaction involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On approximately August 31, 1984, complainant sold to respondent a truckload of size 15 cantaloupes consisting of 1,050 cartons at a price of $4.00 per carton, plus $.55 per carton precooling, $.25 per carton palletizing, and $22.50 for a temperature recorder, for a total contract price of $5,062.50, f.o.b. The contract did not specify that the cantaloupes were to be U.S. number one.

4. On August 31, 1984, complainant shipped the truckload of cantaloupes in interstate commerce to respondent, where it arrived on September 7, 1984, and was federally inspected. The inspection revealed as follows, in pertinent part:

VARIOUS CONTAINERS Range 35 To 38°F.

CANTALOUPES IN CARTONS: "Tri Brand 15, Ca."

Many top layer cartons and some 6th layer cartons show from one to two melons adjacent to sides or top of cartons being glassy and translucent following freezing injury up to ¼ inch in depth.

Remainder of Stock: Quality: Grade defects average 2% scars and misshapen.

Condition: Mostly ripe and firm, many firm. Mostly turning yellow, some green. 1 to 3 melons in most cartons, none in some, average 9% damage by bruising, generally affecting ripe and firm melons and located at bottoms or sides of cartons. Average 2% damage by sunken areas, affecting ripe and firm melons. Less than 1% decay.

GRADE: Meets quality requirement but fails to grade U.S. No. 1 only account of condition.

REMARKS Restricted 10 pallets being unloaded and 4 pallets nearest rear doors.

5. After the inspection, respondent refused to unload the melons, and indicated to the truck driver that it was rejecting the load. Complainant was notified and instructed the truck broker to dispose of the cantaloupes. The truck broker, on September 7, 1984, sent the following telegram to respondent:

> MAX SHAPIRO [respondent] IS REJECTING CANTALOUPES THAT MADE GOOD DELIVERY PER BOB STOCKTON OF TRI PRODUCE THE TEMPERATURES ON ARRIVAL WERE 35 TO 38 DEGREES USDA INSPECTION SHOWS 14 PERCENT CONDITION DEFECT ALAMO TRUCK BROKERS IS SELLING MELONS FOR SHAPIRO ACCOUNT WILL DEDUCT FREIGHT OF $2,800 PLUS $250 TO HAUL LOAD TO RICHMOND VIRGINIA AND WILL REMIT REMAINDER TO TRI PRODUCE.

Complainant subsequently called the truck broker and told him that if it should receive any net proceeds from its resale of the cantaloupes, those proceeds should be turned over to respondent, not complainant.

6. The truck broker disposed of the cantaloupes and remitted no proceeds to respondent.

7. A formal complaint was filed on March 6, 1985, which was within nine months from when the cause of action herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

Complainant contends that respondent rejected the cantaloupes without reasonable cause and is thus liable for the $5,062.50 contract price. Respondent argues that the condition of the cantaloupes upon arrival at its place of business was poor and justified their rejection. Respondent also claims that complainant deprived respondent of the ability to resell the cantaloupes after rejection by instructing the truck broker to take possession of the load and resell it in Richmond, Virginia.

Complainant, as the party alleging that respondent rejected the cantaloupes without reasonable cause, has the burden of proving its own compliance with the terms of its contract with respondent. Tom Bengard Ranch, Inc. a/t/a Keen Harvest v. Prevor-Mayrsohn International, Inc., 40 Agric. Dec. 1781 (1981). As this was an f.o.b. contract, complainant gave an implied warranty of suitable shipping condition, "that the commodity, at the time of billing, is in a condition which, if the shipment is handled under normal transportation service and conditions, will assure delivery without abnormal deterioration at the contract destination agreed upon between the parties." 7 CFR 46.43(j). Accordingly, in the absence of normal transportation conditions, the suitable shipping condition warranty is inapplicable.

The September 7, 1984, federal inspection indicates that many cartons of the load suffered severe freezing damage. This damage obviously occurred during transit. Therefore, it is apparent that transportation conditions in this case were abnormal, which voids the suitable shipping condition warranty. We conclude, therefore, that complainant has met its burden of proving its compliance with the terms of its contract, and respondent had no reasonable cause to reject the melons.

Having rejected the cantaloupes without reasonable cause, respondent became liable for the difference between the contract price and the amount realized from complainant's resale, provided the resale was made in good faith and in a commercially reasonable manner. Byrd Produce Company v. Albany Public Markets, Inc., 31 Agric. Dec. 136 (1972); U.C.C. 2-706. The record does not reflect the actual disposition of the melons, but complainant contends in its sworn statement in reply that the trucking company sold them to recover the cost of freight. In order for complainant to be able to recover the contract price under the circumstances present in this case, it must show that it was unable to resell the cantaloupes at a reasonable price after having made a reasonable effort to do so, or show that such an effort would have been futile. R.V. Saur & Sons Orchards, Inc. v. Affy Tapple, Inc., 42 Agric. Dec. 458 (1983); U.C.C. § 2-709. We can assume from the deterioration and severe freezing damage shown by the September 7, 1984, inspection report that the melons were sufficiently deteriorated that their resale price could not have been in excess of the transportation costs. Therefore, any effort by complainant to resell the melons for a price greater than that obtained by the trucking company would have been futile.

Respondent claims that it was wrongly deprived of possession of the melons and the opportunity to resell them on its own. However, the Uniform Commercial Code, at section 2-703, provides in relevant part that "where the buyer wrongfully rejects . . . the aggrieved seller may . . . (d) resell and recover damages as hereafter provided (section 2-706. . . ." See also Gwin White & Prince, Inc. v. National Food Corporation, 42 Agric. Dec. 445 (1983). Therefore, complainant was legally entitled to turn over the melons to the trucking company, and under no obligation to provide them to respondent for resale.

Complainant is entitled to the contract price of $5,062.50. Respondent's failure to pay this sum to complainant is a violation of section 2 of the Act for which reparation should be awarded, with interest.

ORDER

Within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $5,062.50, with interest thereon at the rate of 13 percent per annum from October 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

PACA Docket No. 2-6833. Decided March 18, 1986.

Undisputed amount—Order issued—Payment in full of disputed amount.

Respondent admitted liability for 9 of the 10 loads of tomatoes alleged in the complaint, in the amount of $89,079.50, and an Order Requiring Payment of Undisputed Amount was issued requiring payment of that sum. Respondent's claim that the remaining $10,868.00 was paid to complainant, supported by evidence that complainant deposited the check, was not disputed by complainant. DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $99,947.50 in connection with the sale and shipment of 10 truckloads of tomatoes to respondent in interstate commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation prepared by the Department was served upon each of the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto admitting liability for $89,079.50, but denying liability for $10,868.00.

Although the amount claimed as damages is greater than $15,000.00, the parties waived oral hearing. The shortened procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 47.20) is, therefore, applicable. Pursuant to such procedure, the report of investigation is considered to be part of the evidence, as are the verified complaint and answer. The parties were given an opportunity to submit additional evidence in the form of verified statements and to file briefs, but chose not to do so.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Robert L. Meyer d/b/a Meyer Tomatoes, is an individual whose address is P.O. Box 606, King City, California.

2. Respondent, Otay Packing Co., is a corporation whose address is P.O. Box 3247, Chula Vista, California. At the times of the transactions involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On approximately August 28 and 30, September 1, 8, 11, 15, 20, 21, 26, and 28, 1984, complainant sold to respondent 10 truckloads of tomatoes. The contract price for the August 28, 1984, truckload was $10,868.00, f.o.b. The contract prices for the remaining nine truckloads totaled $89,079.50, f.o.b. The tomatoes were sold in contemplation of eventual movement in interstate commerce.

4. Respondent received and accepted the tomatoes, but has paid complainant only for the August 28, 1984, load in the amount $10,868.00, by means of a check which complainant accepted and deposited into his account. Respondent has failed to pay complainant the contract prices for the remaining nine loads of tomatoes in the amount of $89,079.50.

5. A formal complaint was filed on March 1, 1985, which was within nine months from when the causes of action herein accrued.

6. On May 8, 1985, respondent filed its answer, in which it admitted liability for all but one of the truckloads of tomatoes alleged in the complaint, in the amount of $89,079.50. Therefore, on June 25, 1985, an Order Requiring Payment of Undisputed Amount was issued against respondent, ordering it to pay to complainant the undisputed amount of $89,079.50.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent admits liability for all the transactions alleged in the complaint except for the shipment of tomatoes of August 28, 1984, with a contract price of $10,868.00, which respondent claims it paid to complainant in a check dated September 28, 1984. Respondent has submitted with its verified answer a copy of the check which shows that it was accepted and deposited by complainant. Complainant has not responded to respondent's allegations of payment. Therefore, we conclude that respondent has fully paid the $10,868.00 contract price for the August 28, 1984, shipment. As we have already issued an Order Requiring Payment of Undisputed Amount for the remaining $89,079.50, we conclude that respondent is without any further liability, and the complaint against it must, therefore, be dismissed.

ORDER

The complaint is hereby dismissed.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

UNIVERSAL FRUIT CO. INC. v. JERRY'S FRUIT & GARDEN CENTER, INC.
PACA Docket No. 2-6692. Decided March 24, 1986.

Produce delivered must be same as that inspected for a "Purchase After Inspection". Parties must specify or clearly act in accordance with a "Purchase After Inspection." A "Purchase After Inspection" makes inapplicable all implied warranties.

Complainant sold 1,056 boxes of strawberries to respondent after respondent made two detailed inspections. Respondent claimed complainant warranted that the uninspected boxes were same quality and condition as those inspected. Complainant denied this. Since respondent accepted the goods after inspection and there was no showing goods were not same as those inspected, reparation was awarded to complainant.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.), hereinafter "PACA." A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks an award of reparation against respondent in the amount of $3,696.00, in connection with the sale to respondent of 1,056 cases of strawberries in interstate commerce.

A copy of the Department's report of investigation was served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon the respondent. Respondent filed an answer denying any liability to complainant. The amount claimed as damages in the formal complaint does not exceed $15,000.00, and the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Under this procedure, the verified pleadings of the parties are considered part of the evidence, as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition, the parties were given an opportunity to file evidence in the form of sworn statements. Complainant filed opening statements and respondent filed answering statements. Complainant then filed a statement in reply. Neither party filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Universal Fruit Company, Inc., is a corporation whose address is 35 South Water Market, Chicago, Illinois.

2. Respondent, Jerry's Fruit & Garden Center, Inc., is a corporation whose address is 7901 N. Milwaukee Avenue, Niles, Illinois. At the time of the transaction involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On or about May 16, 1984, complainant sold to respondent 1,056 boxes of strawberries, which were all that remained from a load of 2,496 cases of strawberries which had been purchased by complainant, and which had arrived at complainant's place of business from California on May 11, 1984. Respondent had agreed to purchase the 1,056 cases of strawberries at a price of $3.50 per case following two separate inspections made by respondent's agents on the day of purchase. The strawberries were picked up and delivered by a cartage truck to respondent's store on May 16, 1984.

4. On the morning of May 17, 1984, respondent's buyer phoned complainant's salesman to propose the return of the strawberries on the ground that the quality and condition was unsuitable. Complainant refused to accept the return of the strawberries.

5. The formal complaint was filed on August 13, 1984, which was within nine months after the cause of action alleged herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

Complainant seeks to recover the full amount of the purchase price of 1,056 cases of strawberries, alleging that the respondent made a "purchase after inspection" as that term is defined in section 46.43(ff) of the regulations promulgated under the PACA (7 CFR § 46.43(ff)). If a "purchase after inspection" took place, respondent waived all implied warranties of qualitiy or condition. Respondent contends, however, that despite having inspected the strawberries, complainant's agent expressly represented that the uninspected boxes were of the same quality as those inspected. Respondent further contends that upon the arrival of the strawberries it discovered that they were not as represented, and that 65% were offered for sale as canning fruit at $1.00/case and 35% were unsaleable and, therefore, thrown out.

There were two basic areas of factual dispute. The first concerns whether any express warranties were made at the time of sale. Complainant claims none were made while respondent claims complainant's employee expressly represented that the uninspected boxes were of the same quality as the inspected boxes. The second factual dispute concerns the actions and statements of the parties after the strawberries arrived at respondent's store. Complainant contends that when respondent complained about the quality the following day, complainant agreed to reduce the purchase price $1.50 per case as a "courtesy." Respondent contends that complainant's salesman acknowledged the unmerchantable condition, and told respondent to sell the strawberries for whatever it could get, and that the parties would later make a settlement. Respondent further states that it informed complainant that it planned to sell the strawberries for $1.00 per case before actually doing so.

It is complainant's burden to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the transaction in question was a "purchase after inspection." Crouse Farms v. Dublin Produce Co., 29 Agric. Dec. 1439 (1970). To carry this burden, complainant must show that the goods shipped were the same as the goods inspected, Kirby & Little v. United Fruit, 16 Agric. Dec. 1066 (1957), and that the parties used the term "purchase after inspection" or acted in accordance with a belief that the contract was governed by it, Ritepak Produce v. Green Grove Markets, 29 Agric. Dec. 165 (1970). First, there is little or no dispute concerning the identity of the goods. The sworn statement of complainant's salesman states that the strawberries were first offered to respondent's buyer at $4.00 per case, but were reduced to $3.50 per case if respondent desired to take all the remaining cases. Neither respondent's buyer, who inspected the strawberries at complainant's facility on two occasions on the day of shipment, nor respondent's owner, who was present during the second inspection, question whether the strawberries delivered were the same as those available for inspection.

The record also supports complainant's contention that the contract was for "purchase after inspection" as that term is defined by section 46.43(ff) of the regulations. Complainant's salesman states in his affidavit that first the respondent's buyer and then the buyer and the owner made two separate inspections on the day in question, and describes in detail the extensive and unrestricted inspections which took place in complainant's cooler. The accomplishment or details of these inspections are not denied by respondent's buyer and owner. Respondent claims, instead, that complainant's salesman expressly represented that the uninspected cases were of like quality and condition. However, this claim is not in conformity with respondent's previous statement that it purchased the produce "under the assumption that it was saleable merchandise." Moreover, respondent does not explain how the circumstances of the alleged representation by complainant's salesman came about, particularly when the two full and complete inspections would tend to make it unnecessary. Finally, respondent offers absolutely no documentary evidence to substantiate its claims that 35% of the strawberries had to be thrown out and 65% had to be sold for canning. Even if this was not a purchase after inspection, the lack of such documentary evidence would tend to undermine respondent's claim of damages as a result of breach of contract.

It has been held that full and complete inspection makes inapplicable all implied warranties. Max Feldman & Sons v. Alderiso Bros., Inc., 27 Agric. Dec. 763 (1968); Roll Packing v. Bracker, 18 Agric. Dec. 975 (1959). At times, even "doorway inspections" have been found to form the basis for a purchase after inspection. Leo & Sons v. Wesco Foods Co., 12 Agric. Dec. 188 (1953). The two inspections conducted by respondent herein provide ample support to find a "purchase after inspection," making all implied warranties inapplicable. The evidence further supports a finding that no express warranties were made. Since respondent rejected complainant's offer to settle the dispute by reducing the purchase price $1.50 per case, complainant is entitled to the full purchase price of $3,696.00 as originally agreed to by the parties. Respondent's failure to pay this amount is a violation of section 2 of the Act for which reparation should be awarded with interest.

ORDER

Within thirty days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $3,696.00, with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum, from July 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

DENICE AND FILICE PACKING CO., v. CORGAN & SON, INC. PACA Docket No. 2-6743. Decided March 24, 1986.

Burden of proving breach and damages upon respondent—Damages resulting from breach—Respondent failed to prove—Resale of consigned peppers not prompt and proper—Purchase price—Reasonable value of peppers on quantum merit basis.

As respondent made no attempt to justify its failure to pay for three of the five loads of peppers it admittedly received and accepted, it is liable for their contract prices. Regarding one of the remaining loads, while respondent may have proved a breach of warranty by complainant, respodent has failed to sustain its burden of proving damages as it did not provide any evidence of resales. With respect to the other remaining load, although there is evidence to support respondent's allegation that the peppers were consigned, respondent failed to make prompt and proper resales and is liable for the reasonable value on a quantum meruit basis. Complainant's damages are limited to the amount sought.

DECISION AND ORDER

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $12,586.20 in connection with the sale and shipment of five lots of peppers in interstate commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation prepared by the Department was served upon each of the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto denying liability with respect to three of the lots.

Since the amount claimed as damages does not exceed $15,000.00, the shortened procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to such procedure, the report of investigation is considered to be part of the evidence, as is the verfied complaint. The answer, since it is not verified, is not considered part of the evidence. The parties were given an opportunity to submit additional evidence in the form of verified statements and to file briefs. Complainant submitted an opening statement, but respondent elected not to submit any additional evidence. Neither party filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Denice and Filice Packing Co., is a corporation whose address is 10001 Fairview Road, Hollister, California.

2. Respondent, Corgan & Son Inc., is a corporation whose address is 161-162 N.Y.C. Terminal Market, Bronx, New York. At the times of the transactions alleged herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On approximately July 27, 1984, complainant sold and shipped 80 cartons of large red bell peppers in interstate commerce to Shopwell Stores, Inc., Bronx, New York. Colvin Distributing Company, Millbrae, California, acted as the broker. Upon arrival at the receiver's place of business on August 1, 1984, the receiver reported to the broker that the peppers had been inspected and found to have condition defects averaging 25 percent damage by slightly sunken discolored areas affecting over ⅛ to ½ of the surface of the peppers, five to 12 percent, average nine percent damage by shriveling, and two to seven percent, average four percent damage by decay. The broker reported this to complainant, which authorized respondent to handle the peppers for complainant's account. The parties then agreed that respondent would pay complainant $7.00 per carton for the peppers, totaling $560.00, f.o.b. Respondent has not made any payment to complainant for the 80 cartons of peppers.

4. On approximately July 24 and August 2, 7, and 15, 1984, complainant sold and shipped to respondent, in interstate commerce, four lots of peppers for f.o.b. prices of, respectively, $400.00, $4,539.30, $4,343.40, and $2,743.50. All four loads were accepted by respondent. The price terms for the July 24, 1984, shipment were eventually changed to a consignment, but respondent did not remit an account of sales, or any payment. Respondent has not made any payment for the other three lots of peppers as well.

5. On August 21, 1984, respondent secured a federal inspection of the August 15, 1984, shipment. That inspection stated as follows, in relevant part:

Temperature of Product:	Ranges 48 to 50F.
Condition:	Mostly fresh, firm and crisp. Red color 5 to 34%, average 20% damage by shriveling. 13 to 26%, average 18% damage by numerous slightly sunken discolored areas. Decay ranges 2 to 9%, average 6% Gray Mold Rot and/or Bacterial Soft Rot in various stages affecting walls and calyxes.

6. Respondent did not resell any peppers from the August 15, 1984, shipment.

7. A formal complaint was filed on December 24, 1984, which was within nine months from when the causes of action herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent does not deny receiving and accepting the five loads of peppers at issue, but claims in its unverified answer that three of the loads were abnormally deteriorated upon arrival at its place of business. Having accepted the five loads, respondent became liable for the agreed upon contract prices, less any damages resulting from any breach of warranty by complainant. Respondent has the burden of proving the breach and damages by a preponderance of the evidence. Magic Valley Produce, Inc. v. Art Kramer's Produce Buying Service, Inc., 39 Agric. Dec. 464 (1980)

Complainant admits that the August 15, 1984, load of peppers was deteriorated upon arrival at respondent's place of business, and a federal inspection report contained in the report of investigation confirms this (Finding of Fact 5). However, complainant claims that respondent refused to negotiate any settlement and has not provided an accounting on the shipment. The record does not contain any evidence of resales by respondent on the August 15, 1984, shipment. Therefore, we conclude that while there might have been a breach of warranty by complainant on this load, respondent has failed to sustain its burden of proving any damages resulting from such breach. Therefore, respondent is liable for the full contract price of $2,743.50.

Although respondent does not allege in its unsworn answer that there was any problem with the July 27, 1984, load, the report of investigation contains a letter from the broker, who states that it received notice from respondent on August 1, 1984, that the July 27, 1984, load had condition problems when it arrived at the place of business of the original receiver, Shopwell Stores Inc., Bronx, New York. The broker claims that the peppers were sent to respondent to handle for complainant's account. In its opening statement, complainant does not agree that the peppers were consigned, but claims that respondent agreed to accept them at a fixed price of $7.00 per carton, or $560.00 for the load. Even if the peppers were consigned to respondent, respondent had the duty to promptly and properly resell them, render an accounting to complainant, and pay over to complainant the net proceeds after deducting its necessary expenses incurred in the resale. Stoops & Wilson, Inc. v. Wholesale Produce Exchange, 41 Agric. Dec. 290 (1982). Respondent has not provided any evidence of resales, and has made no payment at all to complainant for this load. Therefore, we conclude that even if respondent accepted the peppers on consignment, it breached its duty to complainant and is liable for the reasonable value of the peppers on a quantum meruit basis. Grady Pruette v. E. Vega & Sons Produce, 41 Agric. Dec. 1196 (1982). In the absence of any other evidence as to the reasonable value of the peppers, we take judicial notice of the Bronx, New York, Market News Service Reports for August 1, 1984, which shows a price of $25.00 per carton for the type of peppers involved herein, or $2,000.00 for all 80 cartons. However, this exceeds the $560.00 requested by complainant, and we conclude that respondent is liable for this lesser sum only.

With respect to the three remaining loads of peppers at issue, those sold on July 24, August 2, and August 7, 1984, respondent has not presented any evidence whatsoever to justify its failure to pay complainant the agreed upon contract prices. Therefore, we find respondent to be liable for the full amount claimed in the complaint for all five shipments, totaling $12,586.20. Respondent's failure to pay complainant this sum is a violation of section 2 of the Act, for which reparation should be awarded, with interest.

ORDER

Within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $12,586.20, with interest thereon at the rate of 13 percent per annum from September 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

BLESSINGS IN ACRES v. ROBERT W. THURSTON d/b/a THURSTON MARKETING CO. PACA Docket No. 2-6843. Decided March 24, 1986.

Contract terms—Specific F.O.B. price agreed to—Contract terms not changed—Burden of proof as to breach and damages upon respondent—Breach of suitable shipping condition warranty—Damages incurred by respondent exceed contract price.

It was determined that the parties agreed to a specific F.O.B. contract price, and the price terms were not changed after the truckload of strawberries arrived at respondent's place of business. Respondent sustained his burden of proving a breach of complainant's suitable shipping condition warranty. The damages incurred by respondent exceeded the contract price. Therefore, the complaint was dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $3,154.80 in connection with the sale of a truckload of strawberries shipped in interstate commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation prepared by the Department was served upon each of the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto, denying liability.

Since the amount claimed as damages does not exceed $15,000.00, the shortened procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to such procedure, the report of investigation is considered part of the evidence, as are the verified complaint and answer. The parties were given an opportunity to submit additional evidence in the form of verified statements and to file briefs. Complainant submitted an opening statement, respondent submitted an answering statement, and complainant submitted a statement in reply. Respondent also filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Blessings In Acres, is a partnership whose address is P.O. Box 355, Soledad, California.

2. Respondent, Robert W. Thurston d/b/a Thurston Marketing Co., is an individual whose address is P.O. Box 1903, Bakersfield, California. At the time of the transaction involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On approximately June 16, 1984, complainant sold to respondent a truckload of strawberries consisting of 1,128 flats, U.S. number one, at the price of $6.00 per flat, plus $.60 per flat for cooling and $222.00 for tectrol, for a total of $7,666.80, f.o.b.

4. The truckload of strawberries was shipped, in interstate commerce, to respondent's customer, Kleiman & Hochberg, Inc., Bronx, New York, where it arrived at approximately 8:00 a.m. on June 21, 1984. The temperature recorder shows that a temperature of approximately 35° was maintained throughout transit.

5. The truckload of strawberries was federally inspected at 4:45 a.m. on June 22, 1984, and revealed as follows, in relevant part:

VARIOUS CONTAINERS	Range 42° To 45°F.
STRAWBERRIES:	California Strawberries "Blessings In Acres Co."
Applicant States:	1,000 flats.
Quality:	Grade defects average 3% misshapen.
Condition:	Mostly ripe and firm, mostly fairly bright, some dull. [Unintelligible] fresh and green 15 to 35% average 22% ripe and soft, many which are leaking. Decay ranges 12 to 28% average 20% Gray Mold Rot in various stages, some of which in [unintelligible].

6. Respondent received $2,820.00 from its resale of the strawberries to Kleiman & Hochberg, Inc., which sum it remitted to complainant as the undisputed amount owing. Respondent has not made any additional payment to complainant for the strawberries at issue.

7. In a letter to the Department dated October 8, 1984, respondent's owner, Robert W. Thurston, Jr., states as follows, in pertinent part, concerning the load of strawberries at issue:

> We purchased these berries, if you can call it a purchase, based on an FOB price of $6.00, but the terms of the purchase were FOB as to price, delivered as to terms, U.S. 1 grade and excellent quality on arrival.

8. A formal complaint was filed on February 25, 1985, which was within nine months from when the alleged cause of action herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

The first issue which must be resolved is the parties' dispute over the agreed upon contract price. Complainant asserts that respondent agreed to an f.o.b. price of $6.00 per flat, plus cooling and tectrol. Respondent maintains that the price was to be determined after arrival because respondent's Mr. Thurston had no prior knowledge of the shipper or label. The report of investigation contains a letter dated October 8, 1984, from Mr. Thurston to the Department in which he admits that he purchased the strawberries based on an f.o.b. price of $6.00 (Finding of Fact 7). Therefore, we conclude that a specific contract price was agreed to by the parties, in the amount claimed by complainant.

Respondent admits receiving and accepting the strawberries, but claims they were extremely deteriorated and, when complainant was advised of this, complainant agreed that respondent should handle the strawberries for complainant's account. Complainant denies that any authorization was given respondent to handle the strawberries for its account. The burden is upon respondent, the party alleging a change in the contract terms from f.o.b. to a consignment, to prove such a change by a preponderance of the evidence. American Banana Co., Inc. v. Marvin Gray, 41 Agric. Dec. 539 (1982). Respondent has not presented any evidence, other than its own assertions, of the alleged change in contract terms. Therefore, we conclude that respondent has failed to sustain its burden of proof in this regard.

Having accepted the strawberries, respondent became liable for the agreed upon contract price less damages resulting from any breach of warranty by complainant. Respondent has the burden of proving the breach and damages by a preponderance of the evidence. Farm Market Service, Inc. v. Albertson's Inc., 42 Agric. Dec. 429 (1983). As this was an f.o.b. sale, complainant gave the implied warranty of suitable shipping condition, which is defined in the regulations (7 CFR 46.43(j)) as meaning that "the commodity, at time of billing, is in a condition which, if the shipment is handled under normal transportation service and conditions, will assure delivery without abnormal deterioration at the contract destination agreed upon between the parties." The record contains a federal inspection dated June 22, 1984 (Finding of Fact 5), which shows that the strawberries at issue were extremely deteriorated, containing an average of 22% soft and 20% decay. The inspection also reveals that the temperature of the product ranged from 42° to 45°F. Complainant argues that this high temperature caused the deterioration found by the inspection. However, transportation conditions were normal, as the temperature recording tape shows that a temperature of approximately 35° was maintained throughout transit (Finding of Fact 4). Even if the strawberries were mishandled from the time they arrived at respondent's place of business on June 21, 1984, at 8:00 a.m. to the time of the inspection on June 22, 1984, at 4:45 a.m. such as to cause the pulp temperature to rise to 42 to 45°F., such a rise in pulp temperature would not cause strawberries in suitable shipping condition to experience a total of 44% deterioration after only 21 hours. It is quite clear that the strawberries were excessively deteriorated when they arrived at respondent's place of business and, therefore, were in breach of warranty.

Respondent's damages resulting from complainant's breach of warranty are the difference at the time and place of acceptance between the value of the strawberries if they had been as warranted and their actual value. Tom Bengard Ranch, Inc. a/t/a Kleen Harvest v. Garden State Farms, Inc., 42 Agric. Dec. 922 (1983). The Market News Service Reports for Bronx, New York shows that on June 21, 1984, the value of the strawberries involved herein if they had been as warranted was from $.75 to $1.00 per pint, mostly $.90 to $1.00 per pint. Using the $.90 per pint figure results in a price of $10.80 per flat, or $12,182.40 for the entire 1,128 flat load. For the actual value of the strawberries, we look to the proceeds of a prompt and proper resale. Respondent claims that $2,820.00 was received from its buyer, Kleiman & Hochberg, Inc. While the documentation in the record as to this resale is not as complete as we would like, it is apparent from the condition problems of the strawberries that respondent was extremely fortunate to recover even $2,820.00. Therefore, we find respondent's resale to have been prompt and proper.

Respondent's damages were thus $12,182.40 less $2,820.00, or $9,362.40. This exceeds the contract price of $7,666.80 and, therefore, respondent had no obligation to remit anything to complainant. Respondent has paid $2,820.00 to complainant and is not liable for any additional sum. Accordingly, the complaint must be dismissed.

ORDER

The complaint is hereby dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks $3,884.50 in connection with a transaction in interstate commerce involving the shipment of cherry tomatoes, a perishable agricultural commodity.

A copy of the Department's report of investigation was served on each of the parties. In addition, respondent was served with a copy of the formal complaint, and filed an answer thereto denying any liability to complainant.

Since the amount claimed as damages did not exceed $15,000.00, the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice was followed. Under this procedure the verified pleadings of the parties are considered a part of the evidence in the case, as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition, the parties were given the opportunity to submit further evidence by way of verified statement. Complainant filed an opening statement, and respondent filed an answering statement. Neither party filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Kent W. Northcross is an individual doing business as Northcross Distributing, with an address at Rio Rico Industrial Park, Nogales, Arizona 85621.

2. Respondent, Carnival Fruit Co., Inc., is a corporation with an address at 475 N.E. 185th Street, North Miami Beach, Florida 33179. At the time of the transaction involved in this proceeding respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On May 28, 1984, complainant sold to respondent 1,080 trays of cherry tomatoes at $6.30 per tray plus $.40 per tray for palletizing, and $22.50 for a temperature recording device, for a total contract price of $7,258.50, f.o.b. The cherry tomatoes were shipped from Arizona to Florida on that date, and arrived in Florida on May 31, 1984, where they were received and accepted by respondent.

4. The transaction was brokered jointly by Joe Yrigoyen Brokerage of Nogales, Arizona, and by The Tobi Company, located in Miami, Florida. Joe Yrigoyen Brokerage issued a Broker's Memorandum of Sale which reflected the terms of the contract, as set forth in paragraph 3, above.

5. Upon arrival of the tomatoes in North Miami Beach, Florida, respondent unloaded the truck, thereby accepting the tomatoes. Its visual inspection revealed that a number of the trays of the tomatoes were already ripe. Therefore, it called for a federal inspection, which was held on May 31, 1984. That inspection showed in pertinent part that the range of temperature for the containers of cherry tomatoes was 58° to 60°F, far in excess of the 45° to 48° temperatures requested by complainant upon the loading of the truck. It also showed as regards condition as follows:

630 Lot:	Average approximately 90% red. Ranges 2 to 28%, average 11% Soft Average 1% decay.
450 Flat Lot:	Average approximately 20% turning and pink, 80% Light red & red. No decay.

Under the remarks section of the inspection certificate the inspector wrote "Applicant states above lot unloaded and reloaded onto trailer. Above lots separated for inspection by applicant."

6. Although divided into two lots, the cherry tomatoes inspected by the inspection reflected in paragraph 5, above, were the 1,080 trays delivered to respondent by complainant.

7. As a result of the federal inspection the respondent notified complainant through the brokers that it was rejecting the 630 trays of cherry tomatoes which were red because they were overripe. However, it stated that it was accepting the 450 trays of cherry tomatoes which were turning and pink. Complainant initially notified respondent that it accepted respondent's actions in rejecting a part of the load of the cherry tomatoes. It placed the 630 trays of cherry tomatoes with another company in Miami, Florida known as Caribe Produce at $1.00 per tray plus $.40 per tray for palletizing and handling for a total contract price of $882.00. Complainant issued an invoice to Caribe Produce for that amount which it dated May 28, 1984, although such invoice was issued later, and which invoice contained the same invoice number as did the original invoice to Carnival Fruit Company. Caribe Produce paid Northcross Distributing $882.00 with respect to its purchase of the 630 trays of tomatoes.

8. Respondent paid complainant $3,002.50 for the remaining 450 trays of cherry tomatoes which it kept. That left $3,374.00 unpaid out of the total contract price of $7,258.50.

9. A formal complaint was filed in this proceeding on September 13, 1984, which was within nine months of the time the cause of action herein arose.

DISCUSSIONS

This proceeding involves a situation in which respondent wrongfully rejected a portion of a truckload of cherry tomatoes because of their ripe condition upon arrival. However, it also involves a circumstance in which we find that complainant accepted respondent's wrongful rejection, as a result of which respondent must prevail.

Upon arrival of the cherry tomatoes in Miami, Florida respondent determined after visual and federal inspection that 630 of the 1,080 trays were riper than it wished. However, the other 450 trays met its requirements for ripeness. As a result of the federal inspection respondent notified complainant through two brokers, The Tobi Company of Miami, Florida and Joe Yrigoyen Brokerage of Nogales, Arizona that it was rejecting the 630 trays which were overly ripe. It has long been held that a receiver cannot accept a portion of a truckload of a commodity while rejecting the rest. Salinas Lettuce Farmers Corporative v. Larry Ober Company, 39 Agric. Dec. 65 (1980). The evidence also reflects that the respondent unloaded and reloaded the tomatoes. This is also an act of acceptance. Theron Hooker Company v. Ben Gatz Co., 30 Agric. Dec. 1109, 1112 (1971). Therefore, respondent's rejection of the 630 trays of cherry tomatoes was a wrongful rejection. However, complainant accepted respondent's rejection of the 630 trays of cherry tomatoes. Because complainant agreed to the action of respondent, respondent is absolved from any liability which might arise from its wrongful rejection. See Walters Produce, Inc. v. Francis Produce, Inc. 44 Agric. Dec. ____ (1985); Admiral Packing Co. v. Prevor-Mayrsohn International, Inc., 41 Agric. Dec. 99 (1982).

Subsequent to accepting the rejection complainant advised respondent that it was not accepting respondent's rejection of the 630 trays of cherry tomatoes. It told respondent that it considered the problem to be a transportation problem, as a result of which respondent should look to the trucking company for reimbursement for any damages it might have suffered, and that complainant was seeking to recover the full contract price. However, complainant's actions were inconsistent with such action. Complainant issued an invoice to the secondary receiver of the 630 trays, Caribe Produce of Miami, Florida. Caribe Produce paid the full invoice amount of $882.00 directly to complainant, thereby showing that, indeed, complainant had assented to the rejection by respondent. Furthermore, Bobby Wagner, the employee of Northcross Distributing who negotiated the contract with respondent, and who discussed the matter with Joe Yrigoyen Brokerage, signed a letter along with Joe Yrigoyen concerning the transaction involved. Those individuals stated that there had been a delay in receipt of a sufficient quantity of cherry tomatoes to fill respondent's order, from May 25, to May 28, 1984. Both Mr. Wagner and Mr. Yrigoyen stated that:

> After several phone conversations between Joe Yrigoyen and Bobby Wagner it was agreed that Carnival Fruit Co., would unload the 450 Flats of Pink to Light Red Cherry Tomatoes at the invoice price, and pay the trucker for that portion of the Freight, and that Northcross Distributing would find another receiver in the Miami area to handle the balance of 630 Flats of Cherry Tomatoes.

The information quoted above was conveyed to The Tobi Company, and apparently it was not until sometime later that other issues with respect to the payment of freight arose. The statement by complainant's broker and employee is very damaging to complainant's case, and must be given great weight.

In review of the above we find that respondent did not violate the Act.

ORDER

The complaint is dismissed.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant sought an award of reparation in the amount of $11,668.00 in connection with the sale of a truckload of pickles in interstate commerce.

Copies of the report of investigation made by the Department were served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent which filed an answer thereto denying liability to complainant. Because the amount claimed as damages was less than $15,000.00, the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Under this procedure the verified pleadings of the parties are a part of the evidence in the case, as is the Department's Report of Investigation. In addition, the parties were given the opportunity to file evidence in the form of verified statements. Complainant filed an opening statement consisting of two sworn affidavits. Respondent filed an answering statement consisting of an affidavit. Neither party filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Tyre Inc., is a corporation with an address at 1304 Forest Drive, Sanford, Florida 32771.

2. Respondent, Dandrea Produce, Inc., is a corporation with an address at P.O. Box 184, Harding Highway, Landisville, New Jersey 08326. At the time of the transaction involved in this proceeding. Respondent was subject to license under the Act.

3. On May 26, 1984, complainant sold to respondent a truckload of pickles consisting of 250 bushels of 3/400 green pickles at $14.00 per bushel for a total price of $3,500.00, 412 bushels of dill pickles at $14.00 per bushel for a total price of $5,768.00, and 200 bushels of choice pickles at $12.00 per bushel for a total price of $2,400.00, and a total contract price of $11,668.00, f.o.b. The pickles were shipped in interstate commerce on May 26, 1984, and were received and accepted by respondent on or about May 27, 1984. Spike Miller of Parkland, Florida acted as the broker in this proceeding. Respondent has not paid any part of the purchase price for the pickles.

4. A formal complaint was filed in this proceeding on October 31, 1984, which was within nine months of the time of the cause of action herein arose.

DISCUSSION

This proceeding involves a controversy in which complainant claims that it sent a truckload of three different types of pickles to respondent, which truckload was received and accepted by respondent, as a result of which respondent is obligated to pay $11,668.00, the full contract price. Respondent, on the other hand, claims that the pickles arrived in such deteriorated condition that they were not merchantable, as a result of which because of certain actions on the part of the broker and complainant, it owes complainant nothing for the load. In support of their respective claims the complainant submitted affidavits of itself and the broker, and respondent submitted affidavits of itself and several individuals. The affidavits reflect total disagreement as to the essential facts in this proceeding.

The evidence shows clearly that the load of pickles left Florida on May 26, 1984, and arrived by truck in Landisville, New Jersey on or about May 27, 1984. The evidence further shows that the contract was free on board, as a result of which respondent is responsible for any problems during transport. Furthermore, because the truckload of pickles was unloaded at respondent's place of business before there was an attempted rejection, the pickles were received and accepted by respondent. Theron Hooker Company v. Ben Gatz Co., 30 Agric. Dec. 1109, 1112 (1971); Sunfresh Distributing Company v. Frank Donia Company, 43 Agric. Dec. ____ (1984). Therefore, respondent's claim that the goods were rejected on arrival cannot be given recognition.

Respondent claims that after unloading the goods it called the broker, Spike Miller of Parkland, Florida, and talked with him and Tyre Farm on the telephone. Respondent claims that while both parties were on the phone Mr. Miller said that a federal inspection was not needed, but rather that respondent should regrade the pickles, which respondent said it did twice, and that they were rejected twice for resale. Complainant's story in this regard is different. Complainant claims that the respondent said there was no need for an inspection, but rather that he would work out the pickles and cause the trucker to stand the loss. Complainant proved his point through the affidavit of Spike Miller, the broker, whereas the respondent utilized its own affidavit. As an ostensibly neutral third party the testimony of the broker must be given great weight. See Homestead Tomato Packing Co. v. Mims Produce, Inc., 43 Agric. Dec. ____ (1984); Kern Ridge Growers v. T.J. Power & Co., 40 Agric. Dec. 425 (1981). Therefore, insofar as the vying claims as to whether complainant said not to inspect the pickles or respondent said it would take responsibility for the pickles by working them out is concerned we must find in favor of complainant.

Respondent also provided affidavits from three individuals who were not associated with it directly, and who were not federal inspectors, which affidavits were signed much later than at the time of the transaction. These individuals stated that they had looked at the pickles at the time they arrived, and that they were not suitable for human consumption. Spike Miller, in his affidavit, stated that he had talked to one of the individuals and the wife of another of the individuals who signed the affidavits on behalf of respondent, and that there was strong evidence that either the affidavits were not looked at before they were signed or that they were signed merely as a favor to respondent. Respondent sought to rebut the statements of Mr. Miller with his own affidavit rather than replying with affidavits by the same individuals in which they would controvert the claims of the broker. Respondent's efforts in this regard must fail. In view of the strong statements by Mr. Miller that the affidavits of respondent were concoctions of respondent rather than truly reflective of the facts, the proper rebuttal, and that which could be recognized in this proceeding, would have been from the same individuals. Therefore, we must discount the evidentiary value which might have been attached to the affidavits of the individuals. We should, however, caution in this regard that even those affidavits would not have been sufficient to overcome the requirement that damages after acceptance of goods be shown by a cognizable federal inspection. It has long been held that inspections by individuals who are not neutral should be discounted. See Mutual Vegetable Sales v. Select Distributors, Inc., 38 Agric. Dec. 1359 (1979).

Finally, respondent claimed that there were also pickles from Turner Farm on the truck, and that those pickles were equally unmarketable, but that no complaint was made about its failure to pay for them. This matter was not pleaded in the answer. It was raised for the first time in respondent's answering statement. The claim was vague and general, and cannot be given weight. In view of the above we find that respondent has failed to pay complainant $11,668.00 with respect to the transaction involved in this proceeding. Its failure to pay this amount is a violation of section 2 of the Act for which reparation should be awarded to complainant with interest.

ORDER

Within thirty days of the date of this Order respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $11,668.00, with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from July 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

HUNT OIL CO., a/t/a PLANTATION PRODUCE CO., v. ANTON T. KASTNER d/b/a TONY KASTNER & SON WHOLESALE PRODUCE CO.
PACA Docket No. 2-6729. Decided April 10, 1986.

Delivered sale—Shipper responsible for transit conditions—Merchantable—Defined—Damages—Accepted goods—Contracts—Non-negotiated terms added to bill of lading by shipper do not contractually bind buyer.—Evidence—lack of motive to falsify records considered.

Cabbage sold on a delivered basis was found to have been sold without any grade specification. Necessity that cabbage be of merchantable quality required that it be of fair average quality—neither the best nor the poorest quality. Federal inspections made promptly after arrival and acceptance of the cabbage showed breach of warranty of merchantability. Market reports did not cover cabbage in same size containers as shipped and damages were awarded based on difference between the delivered contract price and the gross proceeds of respondents prompt and proper resale. Statement placed on bill of lading by complainant declaring that no claims would be honored unless temperature recorder was secured and noted on trucks receipts was not contractually binding on respondent buyer. Respondent lost temperature recorder and tape but read the tape on arrival and noted on the bill of lading that temperature was 36°. In view of the fact that transit temperature was responsibility of complainant in delivered sale, respondent had no motive to falsify temperature notation.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks an award of reparation against respondent in the amount of $9,397.35 in connection with the shipment in interstate commerce of a mixed truckload of cabbage and parsley.

A copy of the report of investigation made by the Department was served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto denying liability to complainant, and asserting a counterclaim against complainant arising out of the same transaction in the amount of $814.50. Respondent later amended the amount of damages claimed in the counterclaim to $1,782.15. Complainant filed a reply to the counterclaim denying any liability thereunder.

The amount claimed in neither the formal complaint nor counterclaim exceeds $15,000, and the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to this procedure, the verified pleadings of the parties are considered a part of the evidence in the case, as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition, the parties were given an opportunity to file evidence in the form of sworn statements. Complainant filed an opening statement, respondent filed an answering statement, and complainant filed a statement in reply. Both parties filed briefs.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Hunt Oil Company, is a corporation also trading as Plantation Produce Co., whose address is P.O. Box 1043, Mission, Texas. At the time of the transaction involved herein complainant was licensed under the Act.

2. Respondent, Anton T. Kastner, is an individual doing business as Tony Kastner & Son Wholesale Produce, whose address is 2225 North Humbolt, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. At the time of the transaction involved herein respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On or about February 9, 1984, complainant sold to respondent 273 sacks of New Cabbage brand green cabbage at $12.00 per sack; 150 1 2/5 wirebound crates of cabbage at $12.00 per crate; 200 sacks of Valley Kist brand slaw cabbage at $15.25 per sack; 40 wirebound crates of Plantation brand curly parsley, 5 dozen size, at $12.00 per crate; and 86 cartons of Valley Kist brand green cabbage at $17.25 per carton, or a total price of $10,089.50 delivered to respondent's place of business in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

4. The produce was shipped by complainant on February 10, 1984, at 2:00 a.m. from Mission, Texas to respondent in Milwaukee. The bill of lading stated that the expected delivery date was February 12, at midnight. The produce arrived at respondent's place of business sometime on February 14, 1984, and was accepted by respondent.

5. Complainant included a Ryan temperature recorder on the load, and the bill of lading had stamped in block print on its face "RECEIVER: This load contains a temperature recorder. No claims honored unless recorder secured and noted on truck's receipts."

Upon receiving the load respondent made notations on the face of the bill of lading indicating that the 273 sacks of New Cabbage brand green cabbage and the 150 1 2/5 wirebound crates of cabbage both showed decay and slime. Respondent looked at the tape from the Ryan recorder and recorded on the bill of lading that the temperature was 36°.

6. Respondent notified complainant through the broker of the poor condition of the cabbage on arrival, and was instructed to secure a federal inspection. A federal inspection was made on February 15, 1984, at 8:30 a.m. of cabbage located in respondent's warehouse. The certificate issued as a result of such inspection showed in relevant part as follows:

Products Inspected:	Domestic type CABBAGE in crates stamped "Produce of Mexico" or in open mesh bags printed "Produce of U.S.A., 50 Lbs. Net Wt., New Cabbage." Applicant states lot consists of 373 sacks and 150 crates.
Condition of Load:	Crate lot: Stacked on pallets in applicant's cooler. Bag lot: Stacked in applicant's warehouse.
Temperature of Product:	Crate lot: At various locations 43°F. Bag lot: At various locations 54° to 55°F.
Condition:	Crate lot: Serious damage by numerous black sunken areas ranges from 60 to 80% per crate, averages 75%. Damage by yellowing in most crates 10 to 20%, some none averages 10%. Decay in most crates 10 to 30%, some none, average 15%. Bag lot: Serious damage by yellowing ranges from 50 to 90% per crate, averages 67%. Decay ranges from 10 to 50% per crate, averages 33%. Each lot: Decay is Bacterial Soft Rot generally in advanced stages.

7. Respondent communicated the results of the inspection through the broker to complainant, and informed complainant that respondent would pay for the parsley, but would only handle the cabbage for the shipper. Later on February 15, complainant communicated to respondent its request that another inspection be made which would cover all of the cabbage on the load. Respondent requested a second federal inspection and on February 16, 1984, at 2:05 p.m., a second inspection was made at respondent's warehouse which showed in relevant part as follows:

Products Inspected:	Domestic Type CABBAGE in crates stamped, "Produce of Mexico", or in cartons printed, "Valley Kist Brand, Produce of U.S.A., Cabbage, 1 2/5 Bushel, Plantation Produce Company, Mission, Texas" or in bags printed, "Valley Kist Cabbage, Produce of U.S.A., net wt. 50 lbs., Plantation Produce Co., Mission, Texas," or in bags printed, "New Cabbage, Produce of U.S.A., 50 lbs. net wt." Applicant states: 150 crates, 86 cartons and 573 sacks.
Condition of Load:	Each Lot: Stacked on pallets in applicant's cooler.
Temperature of Product:	Each Lot: Various locations; 41°F.
Condition:	Each Lot: Heads or portions of heads not affected by condition defects are fresh, crisp and green color. Carton Lot: Damage by numerous sunken discolored areas ranges 16 to 24% averages 20%, including 7% serious damage. No Soft Rot. Crate Lot: Serious damage by yellowing ranges 6 to 14%, averages 10%. Serious damage by numerous sunken discolored areas ranges 66 to 84%, averages 75%. Soft Rot ranges 10 to 20%, averages 15%. Open Mesh Sack New Cabbage Lot: Serious damage by yellowing ranges 50 to 70%, averages 60%. Soft Rot ranges 30 to 50%, averages 40%. Open Mesh Sack Valley Kist Brand: Larger Cabbage Lot: Damage by yellowing ranges 12 to 26%, averages 20%, including 5% serious damage. No soft Rot.

Open Mesh Sack Valley Kist Smaller Cabbage Lot:T1 Serious damage by numerous sunken discolored areas ranges 20 to 30%, averages 25%. Serious Damage by yellowing ranges 30 to 46%, averages 40%. Soft Rot ranges 26 to 50%, averages 35%. Each Lot: Soft Rot is Bacterial Soft Rot in advance Stages.

8. On Februrary 29, 1984, at 2:00 p.m. a third federal inspection was made at respondent's processing plant of 50 sacks of the New Cabbage brand cabbage and 150 crates of the wirebound crate cabbage stamped "Produce of Mexico, 50 lbs. Net Wt.". The inspection showed that the temperatures in each lot in various locations ranged from 35° to 42°F. Decay in each lot averaged 100% Bacterial Soft Rot in advanced stages. This cabbage was dumped by respondent.

9. Respondent dumped 200 containers of the cabbage and sold the remaining cabbage in a prompt and proper manner for $1.00 per container, or a total of $509.00.

Respondent has paid complainant a total of $692.14 which included $480.00 as payment in full for the 40 wirebound crates of parsley. The remaining $212.14 was the remainder of the $509.00 gross proceeds realized from the resale of the cabbage, after deduction of a commission of $50.90, inspection fees in the total amount of $195.95, and an unloading charge of $50.00.

10. The formal complaint was filed on October 1, 1984, which was within nine months after the cause of action alleged herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

Complainant brings this action to recover the balance of the purchase price of four lots of cabbage sold and shipped to respondent on a delivered basis, and accepted by respondent on arrival. Since respondent accepted the cabbage respondent became liable to complainant for the full purchase price thereof less any damages resulting from any breach of contract on the part of complainant. Although respondent maintained that the cabbage was sold as U.S. No. 1, the broker's Memorandum of Sale, as well as complainant's invoice, show otherwise. We conclude that the cabbage was sold on a no grade basis.

Under the terms of the delivered sale contract complainant was obligated to deliver cabbage at respondent's place of business in merchantable condition. In this context, merchantable does not mean merely that the goods can be sold. We have stated that:

> The term "merchantable" has been defined as "goods which are reasonably suited for the ordinary uses and purposes of goods of the general type described by the terms of the sale and which are capable of passing in the market under the name or description by which they are sold," and though not descriptive of goods of the best quality, neither does it imply goods of the poorest quality, but covers goods of a fair, average quality. See L. Gillarde Sons Co. v. Moritz, 21 Agric. Dec. 590 (1962) and Samuel P. Mandell Co. v. Sam Catanzaro, 17 Agric. Dec. 21 (1958).

The federal inspections made of the cabbage on February 15, and 16, 1984, show that none of the lots of cabbage were in merchantable condition according to the definition quoted above. The record shows that respondent promptly secured buyers for the cabbage, and although the price secured was low, considering the extremely poor condition of most of the cabbage we find that respondent acted reasonably under the circumstances.

Complainant argues strenuously that the 150 wirebound crates of no brand cabbage which it shipped to respondent had no markings on the crates indicating that such cabbage was "Produce of Mexico." Complainant submitted several affidavits by persons who stated they had seen the crates prior to shipment and who affirmed that no such markings were on the crates. Complainant contends that the 150 wirebound crates of cabbage which were the subject of the federal inspections at destination were not the same 150 crates which complainant shipped. Complainant requested on this basis that a personal investigation be done of respondent's records by the Department to ascertain what cabbage from other sources was on hand during the time period when complainant's cabbage arrived. Such investigation was done by this Department with the following results:

> Respondent's receiving book showed the only cabbage it received from Texas was the lot involved in the complaint. The receiving book showed other cabbage received during January, February and March, 1984 was purchased from Borzynski Farms, Inc., Sturtevant, Wisconsin. There was no evidence in respondent's records to show it received any other cabbage originating from Texas or other lots of cabbage which contained the marking "Produce of Mexico."

We conclude on the basis of all of the evidence that the 150 wire-bound crates of cabbage shipped by complainant were stamped with the marking "Produce of Mexico".

As stated earlier respondent has shown by the prompt federal inspections made after arrival of the produce that complainant breached the contract of sale. UCC § 2-714 provides in relevant part that "where the buyer has accepted goods and given notification . . . He may recover as damages for any non-conformity of tender the loss resulting in the ordinary course of events from the seller's breach as determined in any amount which is reasonable." The same section of the UCC provides that the measure of damages for breach of warranty is "the difference at the time and place of acceptance between the value of the goods accepted and the value they would have had if they had been as warranted. . ." Respondent submitted Market News Reports for Chicago covering sales on February 14, 15, and 16, 1984, in an effort to show the value which the cabbage would have had if it had been as warranted. However, such reports give quotations only for 1 3/4 bushel cartons and crates rather than the 1 2/5 bushel cartons and crates which were sold by complainant. In addition the reports give quotations for 50 pound sacks, but such quotations are broken down in categories of large or small to medium size sacks. There is no adequate indication in this record as to what size cabbage was contained in the sacks sold by complainant. While the second federal inspection does indicate that the 200 sacks of slaw cabbage consisted of a "larger cabbage lot and a smaller cabbage lot," we do not know the number of sacks in either lot. In the absence of official market reports we will use the contract delivered price of the cabbage as the closest possible approximation of its market value. See Corte & Sons v. Lerner & Son, 14 Agric. Dec. 320 (1955). Accordingly, the value of the cabbage if it had been as warranted was $9,609.50. The actual value of the cabbage delivered is shown by the gross proceeds of a prompt and proper resale which in this case amounted to $509.00. Deducting the latter amount from the former leaves $9,100.50 as respondent's basic damages in regard to the cabbage. The UCC § 2-714 provides that in a proper case any incidental and consequential damages may also be recovered. The $50.90 commission, as well as the $195.95 inspection fees, are allowable as incidental and consequential damages. Respondent's total damages for the cabbage thus amount to $9,347.35. This amount deducted from the total delivered price for all of the produce leaves $742.15 as the correct amount owed by respondent to complainant. Of this amount respondent has already paid complainant $692.15, which leaves a balance still due and owing from respondent to complainant of $50.00. This $50.00 was an unloading fee which respondent claimed as a part of its damages but which cannot be allowed since, as far as this record shows, such fee would have been incurred by respondent regardless of complainant's breach. Respondent's failure to pay complainant the amount of $50.00 is a violation of section 2 of the Act for which reparation should be awarded to complainant with interest.

Complainant also alleged as an additional basis of recovery that respondent failed to secure the temperature recorder tape as requested pursuant to the instructions stamped on the bill of lading which stated "NO CLAIMS HONORED UNLESS RECORDER SECURED AND NOTED ON TRUCKS RECEIPTS." However, respondent did secure the recorder, read the tape, and noted on the bill of lading that the temperature was 36°. What complainant really complains of is respondent's subsequent loss of the temperature tape and its inability to supply such tape as evidence in this proceeding. Even if we were to find that this was a failure to conform with the instructions on the bill of lading, complainant has not shown any reason why we should consider respondent contractually bound by such instructions. Furthermore, since this was a delivered sale with complainant being responsible for transit conditions, respondent had no motive to note any temperature on the bill of lading other than the correct temperature which respondent read from the tape. We conclude that complainant has failed to state an adequate basis on which it can recover against respondent in this proceeding for loss of the temperature tape.

Respondent's counterclaim arose out of the same transaction as that alleged in the formal complaint and was predicated on the basis of alleged Market News Service Report values for the cabbage which were in excess of the contract price used by us to compute damages. Consequently respondent's counterclaim must be dismissed.

ORDER

Within thirty days of the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $50.00 with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from March 1, 1984, until paid.

The counterclaim is dismissed.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

REPARATION ORDER

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant sought a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $38,392.50 in connection with three shipments of potatoes in interstate commerce. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto, admitting the material allegations of the complaint, and admitting indebtedness to the complainant in the amount of $10,392.50, claiming that it had already paid complainant $28,000.00 of the amount sought by complainant. Complainant was informed by certified mail of respondent's claim that it had paid $28,000.00 of the amount sought and was given an opportunity to dispute such payment. Complainant did not dispute such payment. We conclude, therefore, that $28,000.00 of the $38,392.50 has been paid, and that the remaining indebtedness is $10,392.50, which is the amount respondent admits it owes the complainant. Consequently, the issuance of an order in the amount of $10,392.50 without further procedure is appropriate, pursuant to section 47.8(d) of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 47.8(d)).

Complainant, Seneva J. Berry, doing business as Sunny Farms, is an individual whose address is P. O. Box 1, Edison, California 93220. Respondent, Quality King Produce Co., Inc., is a corporation whose address is 8-10 New England Produce Center, Chelsea, Massachusetts 02150. At the time of the transaction involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

The facts alleged in the formal complaint, as modified above, are hereby adopted as findings of fact of this order. On the basis of these facts, we conclude that the actions of respondent are in violation of section 2 of the Act (7 U.S.C. 499b) and have resulted in damages to complainant of $$10,392.50. Accordingly, within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $10,392.50, with interest thereon at the rate of 13 percent per annum from July 1, 1985, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

ORDER REQUIRING PAYMENT OF UNDISPUTED AMOUNT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed on November 12, 1985. Complainant seeks to recover $4,372.41, which amount is alleged to be the remaining balance for mixed produce sold to and accepted by respondent on April 30 and May 7, 1985. Respondent filed an answer to the complaint on February 18, 1986. In this answer, respondent admitted owing complainant $3,100.00 of the $4,372.41 claimed by complainant.

Section 7(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 499g(a)) provides, in part:

> If after the respondent has filed his answer to the complaint, it appears therein that the respondent has admitted liability for a portion of the amount claimed in the complaint as damages, the Secretary . . . may issue an order directing the respondent to pay the complainant the undisputed amount . . . leaving the respondent's liability for the undisputed amount for subsequent determination.

Accordingly, under the authority of the above quoted section, respondent shall pay to complainant, as an undisputed amount, $3,100.00. Payment of this amount shall be made within 30 days from the date of this order with interest thereon at the rate of 13 percent per annum from May 1, 1985, until paid. A failure to pay this amount within 30 days will constitute a violation of section 2 of the Act, 7 U.S.C. § 499b.

Respondent's liability for payment of the disputed amount is left for subsequent determination in the same manner and under the same procedure as if no order for the payment of the undisputed amount had been issued.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

SAHARA PACKING COMPANY v. N. P. DEOUDES, INC. PACA Docket No. 2-6755. Decided April 11, 1986.

Transit conditions—Discrepancy between ambient air temperatures and pulp temperatures.—Good Delivery Standards—Lettuce found abnormally deteriorated—Damages—accepted goods.

Complainant sold and shipped a truckload of lettuce to respondent on a F.O.B. basis. Following acceptance on arrival a prompt Federal inspection in respondent's warehouse showed pulp temperatures substantially lower than ambient air temperatures shown by tape from temperature recorder. Pulp temperatures were found to show that transit was normal and Good Delivery Standards were therefore applicable. Lettuce was found to have been abnormally deteriorated on arrival and complainant to have breached the contract of sale. Damages were allowed based on difference between delivered cost of lettuce and gross proceeds of prompt and proper resale.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks an award of reparation against respondent in the amount of $5,277.50 in connection with the shipment in interstate commerce of a truckload of lettuce.

A copy of the report of investigation made by the Department was served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto denying liability to complainant.

The amount claimed in the formal complaint does not exceed $15,000.00, and the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to this procedure, the verified pleadings of the parties are considered a part of the evidence in the case, as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition, the parties were given an opportunity to file evidence in the form of sworn statements. Complainant filed an opening statement, and respondent filed an answering statement. Complainant filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Sahara Packing Company, is a corporation whose address is P.O. Box 156, Brawley, California.

2. Respondent, N. P. Deoudes, Inc., is a corporation whose address is 270 Fifth Street, N.E., Washington, D. C. At the time of the transaction involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On or about September 16, 1983, complainant sold to respondent, 850 cartons of Sahara brand lettuce at $8.00 per carton, plus precooling and temperature recorder, for a total invoice price of $7,375.00 f.o.b.

4. On September 16, 1983, at approximately 9:30 a.m., complainant shipped the lettuce from loading point in Brawley, California to respondent in Washington, D. C. by truck. The lettuce arrived at respondent's place of business in Washington, D. C. on September 21, at approximately 5:00 a.m., and was unloaded from the truck by respondent. Respondent requested a federal inspection at approximately 6:30 a.m., and at 7:50 a.m. on September 21, 1983, the 850 cartons of lettuce were federally inspected while stacked in respondent's warehouse. Such inspection showed the temperatures in the lettuce to range from 42 to 43°F and stated the condition to be as follows:

> Heads or portion of heads not affected by condition defects are fresh and crisp.
> Wrapper leaves: Decay ranges from 4 to 20 heads in most cartons, none in some, average 30%.
>
> Head leaves: 2 to 4 decayed heads in most cartons, none in some, average 10%.
> Decay is Bacterial Soft Rot in various stages affecting 2 leaves to ½ of head.

5. The Stires temperature tape recovered from the load shows that the tape began at 9:00 a.m on September 16, 1983, and the eight day scale is checked on the tape. The trace begins at approximately the two hour mark on the tape in the 70° range, and falls rapidly to about 47° where it continues until the twelve hour mark. From the twelfth hour to the thirtieth hour the trace reads approximately 48°, and from the thirtieth hour to the forty-fourth hour the trace reads approximately 50°. At the forty-fourth hour the tape drops to about 46°, and rises again to the 50° range at about the fifty-fourth hour from the fifty-fourth hour to the sixtieth hour the trace gradually rises to about 55°. From the sixtieth hour to the one hundred and second hour the trace remains at approximately 55°. From the one hundred and second hour until the trace ends at approximately the one hundred and fourteenth hour the trace reads approximately 57°.

7. Respondent resold the lettuce and realized gross proceeds of $5,491.50. From this amount respondent deducted freight in the amount of $2,635.00, inspection fee $35.00, brokerage $127.50, handling at $.15 per carton or $127.50, and a commission charge of 15%, or $823.73. The net proceeds computed by respondent were $1,742.77. Respondent paid complainant on the basis of $1.50 per carton, plus $.65 cooling, and $22.50 for the temperature recorder, or $1,850.00. In addition respondent paid complainant $.35 per carton, or $297.50, which it recovered from the trucker. Respondent's total payment to complainant was $2,147.50.

8. The informal complainant was filed on June 18, 1984, which was within nine months after the cause of action alleged herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

The dispute between the parties to this proceeding centers around the question as to whether transportation services and conditions were normal. In a f.o.b. sale the warranty of suitable shipping condition is applicable only if transportation is normal. See Veg-A-Mix v. Wholesale Produce Supply, Inc., 37 Agric. Dec. 1296 (1978). In this case there is a perplexing discrepancy between the ambient air temperatures shown by the Stires temperature recorder during transit and the pulp temperature shown by the federal inspection shortly after arrival. The bill of lading shows that the lettuce had a pulp temperature of 36° when it was placed on the truck. The pulp temperatures disclosed by the federal inspection on arrival show a rise during the 4 and ¾ day transit period of 6 to 7° in temperature. However, the Stires temperature recorder tape basically shows a gradual rise in temperature from about 46° to 57° over the same period. The temperature recorder was returned to the Stires Recording Thermometer Company on October 7, 1983, and on July 23, 1984, such company issued a "Calibration Request Response" stating that they had reviewed a copy of the chart and that it was correct within 2°.

There was not sufficient time between the arrival of the truckload of lettuce and the federal inspection for such lettuce to have been cooled down by the temperatures in respondent's cooler. Accordingly, we must accept the pulp temperatures shown by the federal inspection as an accurate reflection of the temperature of the lettuce itself when it came off the truck. Apparently either the ambient air temperatures in the trailer were actually lower than shown by the tape or such air temperature was simply insufficiently high to raise the pulp temperatures of the lettuce more than the 6 or 7° reflected by the federal inspection. We conclude that transportation services and conditions were normal.

The condition of the lettuce as shown by the federal inspection at destination clearly shows that such lettuce was abnormally deteriorated. See Good Delivery Standards for lettuce, 7 CFR § 46.44. We conclude that complainant breached the contract of sale. Respondent accepted the lettuce and is liable to complainant for the full purchase price thereof less damages resulting from complainant's breach.

Sections 2-714 of the Uniform Commercial Code provides in relevant part that the measure of damage for seller's breach in regard to accepted goods is the difference at the time and place of acceptance between the value of the goods accepted and the value they would have had if they had been as warranted. In the absence of other evidence the delivered costs of the lettuce, or $10,010.00, is accepted as the value such lettuce would have had if it had been as warranted. This figure consists of the f.o.b. price of $7,375.00 plus the freight cost of $2,635.00. Respondent appears to have promptly and properly disposed of the lettuce for gross proceeds of $5,491.50. This sum is accepted as the best evidence of the value of the lettuce received by respondent. The difference between these two values, or $4,518.50, represents respondent's damages. In addition, respondent incurred a $35.00 inspection fee, brokerage in the amount of $127.50, a handling fee in the amount $127.50, and also should be allowed the claimed 15% commission, or $823.73. Consequently, respondent's total damages are $5,632.23. However, inspection fees may not be included in damages. Thus, the total compensable damages are $5,597.23. This amount deducted from the total purchase price of $7,375.00 leaves $1,777.77 as the amount which respondent should have paid complainant. Respondent has actually paid complainant in excess of this figure, and consequently the complaint should be dismissed.

This complaint is dismissed.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

PRODUCE DISTRIBUTORS INC., v. MICHAEL BROS. INC. PACA Docket No. 2-6775. Decided April 11, 1986.

Jurisdiction—no timely complaint as to transactions alleged as set-off against complaint—Payment—Allocation by respondent ineffective—Actual payment substantially less than stated allocation—Payment—Allocation by complainant to earliest transactions upheld.

Complainant sought to recover the balance of the purchase price due on two shipments of produce. Respondent raised defenses to complainant's action based on three earlier transactions and it was found that respondent had not filed a timely complaint relative to such transactions. A payment allocation attempted by respondent was found ineffective because the statement accompanying the payment showed an allocation of funds substantially in excess of the amount of the payment. Complainant's allocation of the payment to earlier transactions was therefore justified.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks an award of reparation against respondent in the total amount of $12,779.44 in connection with the shipment in interstate commerce of several lots of perishable produce.

A copy of the report of investigation made by the Department was served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent which defaulted in the filing of an answer. Subsequently the proceeding was reopened after default, and respondent filed an answer within the time allowed denying liability to complainant.

The amount claimed in the formal complaint does not exceed $15,000.00, and the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to this procedure, the verified pleadings of the parties are considered a part of the evidence in the case, as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition, the parties were given an opportunity to file evidence in the form of sworn statements. Complainant filed an opening statement, respondent filed an answering statement, and complianant filed a statement in reply. Respondent also filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Produce Distributors, Inc., is a corporation whose address is 111 Northfield Avenue, West Orange, New Jersey.

2. Respondent, Michael Bros., Inc., is a corporation whose address is 38 Providence Fruit & Produce Building, Harris Avenue, Providence, Rhode Island. At the time of the transactions involved herein respondent was licensed under the Act. I113. On or about August 26, 1983, complainant sold to respondent, and caused to be shipped from the State of California to respondent in West Orange, New Jersey, 1560 containers of grapes for a f.o.b. price of $5,955.44. Complainant invoiced respondent for these grapes on September 1, 1983, by its invoice number 7054.

4. On or about October 19, 1983, complainant sold to respondent, and caused to be shipped from the State of California to respondent in West Orange, New Jersey, 1,008 containers of cantaloupes for a f.o.b. price of $7,028.10. Complainant invoiced respondent for these cantaloupes on October 23, 1983, by its invoice number 7516.

5. On or about October 21, 1983, complainant sold to respondent, and caused to be shipped from the State of California to respondent in West Orange, New Jersey, 1,200 containers of Valencia oranges for a f.o.b. price of $7,410.00. Complainant invoiced respondent for these oranges on October 26, 1983, by its invoice number 7577.

6. On or about November 8, 1983, complainant sold to respondent, and caused to be shipped from the State of Washington to respondent in West Orange, New Jersey, 494 containers of apples for a f.o.b. price of $6,113.50. Complainant invoiced respondent for these apples on November 21, 1983, by its invoice number 7696.

7. On January 27, 1984, respondent paid complainant in full for complainant's invoice number 6909 dated August 26, 1983, covering an August 10, 1983, shipment of melons at a total f.o.b. price of $5,513.50. On January 27, 1984, respondent paid complainant in full for complainant's invoice number 7007 dated August 28, 1983, covering an August 22, 1983, shipment of nectarines and plums at a total f.o.b. price of $16,219.50.

8. The four shipments of produce covered by Findings of Fact 3 through 6 have a total invoice value of $26,507.04. Of February 24, 1984, respondent paid complainant a total of $13,727.60. A statement accompanying the payment check indicated that by such payment invoice 7054 was being paid in the amount of $3,406.54; invoice 7516 in the amount of $7,028.10; invoice 7577 in the amount of $7,410.00; and invoice 7696 in the amount of $6,113.50. The statement also indicated that invoice 6909 had been overpaid in the amount of $360.54, and invoice 7007 had been overpaid in the amount of $9,870.00.

9. On February 27, 1984, complainant wrote to respondent stating that the payment of $13,727.60 was being applied by complainant as follows: $5,955.44 to invoice 7054; $7,028.10 to invoice 7516; and $744.06 to invoice 7577. Complainant informed respondent that there remained due to complainant from respondent the sums of $6,665.94 on invoice 7577, and $6,113.50 on invoice 7696, or a total of $12,779.44.

10. An informal complaint was filed on May 7, 1984, which was within nine months after the causes of action herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

Complainant brings this action to recover the balance of the purchase price due on invoice number 7577 dated October 26, 1983, in the amount of $6,665.94, and the total due on invoice 7696 dated November 21, 1983, in the amount of $6,113.50. Respondent's defenses to complainant's action are raised only in regard to complainant's invoices 6909 dated August 26, 1983, 7007 dated August 28, 1983, and 7054 dated September 1, 1983. Respondent claims that its payment in full on January 27, 1984, of complainant's invoices number 6909 and 7007 was a mistake. Respondent states that the shipments of produce covered by these invoices were in poor condition on arrival, and that at the time the inadvertent full payments were made, a dispute was underway with complainant in regard to such invoices. Respondent also states that there was trouble with the produce covered by complainant's invoice 7054, and that the partial payment in the amount of $3,406.54 shown by respondent's statement which accompanied the $13,727.60 payment check dated February 24, 1984, represented the net returns realized from the resale of the produce covered by such invoice.

Respondent's first notice to this Department of its claims relative to these three invoices was made on June 29, 1984, in a letter which responded to Departmental inquiries which had been prompted by the informal complaint filed by complainant. This letter was filed with the Department more than nine months following the accrual of the causes of action which respondent alleged relative to these three invoices. Respondent's defense herein is, in effect, an attempt to set off, in whole or in part, these three invoices against the balance alleged to be due by complainant on invoices 7577 and 7696. Section 6(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. 499f(a)) provides in relevant part that "[a]ny person complaining of any violation of any provision of Section 2 of this Act by any commission merchant, dealer, or broker may, at any time within nine months after the cause of action accrues, apply to the Secretary by petition . . ." Since the first claim filed by respondent with this Department relative to the three transactions which it wishes to set off against complainant's claim herein, was clearly made more than nine months after the cause of action relative to such transactions accrued, we do not have jurisdiction to adjudicate any allegations relative to such transactions. See North Shore Produce Co., Inc. v. Eastco Produce Distributors, Inc., 40 Agric. Dec. 621 (1981).

It should be noted that the payment in the amount of $13,727.60 made by respondent on February 24, 1984, cannot be deemed as being allocated in the manner in which respondent designated in the statement which accompanied its check, for the simple reason that such statement shows an allocation of a total amount of $23,958.14, whereas the payment amounted to only $13,727.60. In view of this fact complainant was warranted in allocating the payment to its earlier invoices. See Mendelson-Zeller Co. v. Bleier, 34 Agric. Dec. 683 (1975).

We also note that even if there had been on record a timely informal complaint relative to invoices 6909, 7007, and 7054, respondent would still have lost on the merits, due to respondent's failure to submit adequate accountings covering the resale of the produce covered by such invoices.

There remains due and owing to complainant from respondent the total amount of $12,779.44. Respondent's failure to pay complainant such amount is a violation of section 2 of the Act for which reparation should be awarded to complainant with interest.

ORDER

Within thirty days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $12,779.44, with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from December 1, 1983, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $45,634.37 in connection with the consignment to respondent of 14 truckloads of mixed vegetables in interstate commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation prepared by the Department was served upon each of the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto admitting liability for $44,726.21, but denying liability for $908.16.

Although the amount claimed as damages exceeds $15,000.00, the parties waived oral hearing. The shortened procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is, therefore, applicable. Pursuant to such procedure, the report of investigation is considered to be part of the evidence, as is the verified complaint. The answer, since it is not verified, is not considered part of the evidence. The parties were given an opportunity to submit additional evidence in the form of verified statements and to file briefs, but chose not to do so.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, R. F. Donovan Farms, Inc., is a corporation whose address is P.O. Box 1669, Santa Maria, California.

2. Respondent, Corgan & Son Inc., is a corporation whose address is 161-162 New York City Terminal Market, Bronx, New York. At the times of the transactions involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On approximately June 6 and 20, July 3 and 19, August 1, 8, 15, 25, and 31, September 6, 13, 25, and 27, and October 4, 1984, complainant consigned to respondent 14 loads of mixed vegetables.

4. The 14 loads of mixed vegetables were shipped, in interstate commerce, to respondent, who accepted them for handling on consignment for the account of complainant. Respondent prepared and sent to complainant accounts of sale for each load except the one shipped on September 13, 1984. The accounts of sale showed net proceeds, after deductions of freight, commission, and various other expenses, of $44,726.21. Respondent has failed to pay complainant any part of this sum.

5. According to the Market News Service Reports for New York, New York on September 17, 1984, the market price for artichokes, the commodity in the September 13, 1984, shipment to respondent, was $12.00 to $14.00 per flat.

6. Respondent has failed to make any payment to complainant for the September 13, 1984, shipment.

7. A formal complaint was filed on January 30, 1985, which was within nine months from when the causes of action herein accrued.

8. Respondent filed an unsworn answer on April 8, 1985, in which it admitted liability to complainant in the amount of $44,726.21 for 13 of the 14 truckloads of mixed vegetables at issue. Accordingly, an Order Requiring Payment of Undisputed Amount was issued on June 21, 1985, ordering respondent to pay to complainant the undisputed amount owing of $44,726.21.

CONCLUSIONS

In respondent's unsworn answer, it does not deny liability for 13 of the 14 truckloads which it handled on consignment for the account of complainant. Respondent claims that its liability for the September 13, 1984, shipment is less than the $908.16 alleged by complainant, and has enclosed an account of sales which shows gross proceeds of $1,111.50, with deductions of $236.50 for freight, $24.30 for cartage, $1.29 for terminal fees, $133.38 for commission, and $8.60 for handling, leaving net proceeds of $707.43. Complainant bases its claim for $908.16 on the market price for the 86 cartons of artichokes contained in the September 13, 1984, shipment, which the Market News Service Reports for New York, New York show as $12.00 each, for gross sales of $1,032.00. Complainant concedes a 12% commission of $123.84, which would leave net proceeds of $908.16.

Respondent's answer is not verified. Therefore, neither the answer nor the attached account of sales can be given any evidentiary value. We will thus determine the amount owing for the September 13, 1984, shipment by referring to the Market News Service Reports provided by complainant. However, in complainant's calculation of the net proceeds due, it has neglected to deduct freight. In the previous shipment of September 6, 1984, consisting of 278 cartons of artichokes, respondent had deducted $2.70 per carton for freight, to which complainant did not object. Therefore, we will deduct from the proceeds of the September 13, 1984, shipment $2.70 per carton for freight, totalling $232.20, leaving net proceeds of $675.96.

Respondent's liability for all but the September 13, 1984, truckload of artichokes has previously been determined in the June 21, 1985, Order Requiring Payment of Undisputed Amount. Respondent is also liable for the net proceeds of the September 13, 1984, shipment handled on consignment, in the amount of $675.96. Respondent's failure to pay this sum to complainant is in violation of section 2 of the Act, for which reparation should be awarded, with interest.

ORDER

Within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $695.96, with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from October 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant sought an award of reparation in the amount of $1,900.00 in connection with its allegedly erroneous payment to respondent of freight connected with the consignment by respondent to complainant of mixed vegetables in interstate commerce.

Copies of the report of investigation made by the Department were served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent which filed an answer thereto denying liability to complainant. Because the amount claimed as damages is less than $15,000.00 the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 47.20) is applicable. Under this procedure the verified pleadings of the parties are a part of the evidence in the case, as is the Department's Report of Investigation. In addition the parties were given the opportunity to file evidence in the form of verified statements. Complainant filed an opening statement and statement in reply. Respondent filed an answering statement. Neither party filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Strube Celery & Vegetable Company, is a corporation with an address at 108 South Water Market, Chicago, Illinois 60608.

2. Respondent, Triple B Produce Distributors, Inc., is a corporation with an address at P.O. Box 2746 Nogales, Arizona 85621. At the time of the transaction involved in this proceeding respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On May 14, 1984 complainant agreed to accept from respondent a truckload of mixed vegetables consisting of watermelons, peppers, and tomatos, to be handled on consignment for the account of respondent. The truckload of produce arrived at complainant's place of business on May 18, 1984. During the next several days complainant sold the goods at various prices, and on June 21, 1984, provided respondent with an account of sales showing total sales for the commodities involved of $6,455.39, and deducting therefrom charges of $1,155.28, leaving net sales of $5,300.11, which it remitted to respondent. Complainant did not deduct the freight charge of $1,900.00 from the total sales price.

4. Subsequently, the trucker, Paul Yates, demanded that complainant pay it the $1,900.00 for freight. Complainant sought to have the bill shifted to respondent, but when confronted with the threat of a law suit for failure to pay, it paid the trucker the $1,900.00.

5. To date respondent has not repaid complainant the $1,900 for the freight involved in this consignment transaction.

6. A formal complaint was filed in this proceeding on December 12, 1984, which was within nine months of the time the cause of action herein arose.

DISCUSSION

The dispute in this proceeding centers around the question as to whether the shipment of mixed vegetables involved was a sale with pricing after arrival or a consignment transaction. We find, based upon a preponderance of the evidence, that the transaction involved a consignment of goods by respondent to complainant, and that as a result of this determination respondent was liable to pay the freight involved as a necessary expense attached to the consignment.

We are drawn to our conclusion that this was a consignment transaction for several reasons. In the first place, respondent sent complainant a shipping order dated May 14, 1984, which did not contain any prices. Thereafter, after selling the commodities involved, complainant sent respondent an account of sales which carefully set forth the several prices at which the various commodities were sold. Complainant would have no reason to maintain such careful records were this a straight sale transaction. Nor would it have reason to send such an account of sales to respondent. Furthermore, respondent eventually provided an invoice which reflected prices for the three commodities involved which seemed not to reflect any true relationship to normal pricing practices, but rather appeared to be an after the fact endeavor on the part of respondent to manufacture an invoice which would closely approximate the total amount of money transmitted by complianant, without regard to freight charges. Indeed, as suggested by complainant, respondent had to put in an adjustment factor of $21.10 to make its invoice coincide with the amount of money remitted in the account of sales. Complainant denies having received the so-called invoice from respondent in the affidavit of both its Assistant Store Sales Manager, Joe Kulinski, and its owner, Robert W. Strube. Such affidavits, having been properly sworn, must be given great weight.

We are further motivated to reach the conclusion that we have because complainant stated that it was constantly calling respondent to tell it the prices being fetched for the commodities involved. Respondent acknowledged that there were phone calls of this nature, although it characterized them otherwise. When there is a consignment involved it is common for the parties to discuss the prices that are being fetched. Therefore, complainant's version is the more consistent story.

Although there were two transactions between the two parties immediately prior in time to the one in issue here in which complainant was invoiced for the goods, complainant's explanation that while it purchased the goods involved therein it insisted on a consignment with respect to the transaction in issue here because the prior goods were of poor quality is credible under all of the circumstances. Finally, respondent did not send the invoice which closely reflected the total amount shown on the account of sales sent by complainant until after complainant provided the account of sales in early June. That respondent claims to have paid its growers based on the total price received as reflected in the account of sales does not rise to the point under these circumstances of estopping complainant from making a full claim since respondent did not properly pursue that particular line of defense with affidavits and statements by its growers.

In view of the above we find that respondent has violated section 2 of the Act because freight is an expense properly connected to produce transactions. Therefore, it should be ordered to pay complainant $1,900.00 as reparation, with interest at the rate of 13%.

ORDER

Within 30 days from the date of this order respondent shall pay complainant $1,900.00 as reparation with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from July 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $29,033.80 in connection with the sale and shipment of eight trucklots of mixed fruit and vegetables to respondent in the course of interstate commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation prepared by the Department was served upon each of the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto admitting liability for $11,090.60 but denying liability for the remaining $18,943.20.

Although the amount claimed as damages exceeds $15,000.00, the parties waived oral hearing. The shortened procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is, therefore, applicable. Pursuant to such procedure, the report of investigation is considered to be part of the evidence, as is the verified complaint. The answer, since it is not verified, is not considered part of the evidence. The parties were given an opportunity to submit additional evidence in the form of verified statements and to file briefs. Complainant submitted an opening statement, but respondent chose not to submit any additional evidence. Neither party filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Pacific Farm Company, is a corporation whose address is 1047 M Street, Firebaugh, California.

2. Respondent, Corgan & Son Inc., is a corporation whose address is 161-162 N.Y.C. Terminal Market, Bronx, New York. At the times of the transactions involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On approximately April 20, July 13, 18, and 23, August 30, and September 4, and 8, 1984, complainant sold to respondent eight trucklots of mixed fruit and vegetables for f.o.b. prices totalling $29,033.80. The individual transactions are set forth as follows:

Date of Sale	Number of Cartons	Commodity	Contract Price
April 20, 1984	832	lettuce	$3,100.90
July 13, 1984	1092	cantaloupes, Vaughn's	5,264.10
July 18, 1984	540	honeydews, Gold Piece 5's

August 30, 1984	420	cantaloupes, Bottoms Up 18's
		cantaloupes, Bottoms Up 23's	4,026.60
September 4, 1984	1008	cantaloupes, Bottoms Up	4,530.60
September 8, 1984	96	crenshaws, Rosy 4's
	216	crenshaws, Rosy 5's
	54	crenshaws, Rosy 6's
	108	persians, Rosy 5's	2,204.10
September 8, 1984	900	honeydews, PFC	2,610.00
		Total	$29,033.80

4. Complainant shipped the eight trucklots of fruits and vegetables in interstate commerce to respondent, which received and accepted them but has failed to pay any part of the agreed upon contract prices.

5. A formal complaint was filed on December 17, 1984, which was within nine months from when the causes of action herein accrued.

6. Respondent filed an answer on April 11, 1985, in which it admitted liability for $11,090.60 of the amount alleged in the complaint, but denied liability for the remaining $18,943.20. An Order Requiring Payment of Undisputed Amount was, therefore, issued ordering respondent to pay to complainant the undisputed amount of $11,090.60.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent does not deny purchasing, receiving and accepting the eight loads of lettuce at issue. Respondent has submitted an unverified answer which it alleges that some of the loads were abnormally deteriorated upon arrival at its place of business, and has included inspection reports to support these allegations. Having admittedly accepted the eight loads, respondent became liable for the contract prices less any damages resulting from a breach of warranty by complainant. It is the respondent's burden to prove the breach and damages by a preponderance of the evidence. Magic Valley Produce Inc. v. Art Kramer's Produce Buying Service Inc., 39 Agric. Dec. 464 (1980).

We conclude that respondent's defenses to the complaint are lacking in merit. The inspections pertaining all transactions except the September 8, 1984, shipment of crenshaw and persian melons, either show insufficient evidence of deterioration to indicate a breach of warranty, are restricted to a small portion of the load, exhibit excessively high temperatures, indicate the existence of transportation problems, or are dated far too long after shipment to be worthy of significant weight. Further, even if the inspections did reveal one or more breaches of warranty, respondent has provided no evidence of resales and, therefore, has not sustained its burden of showing damages incurred as a result of any breach. David Nava & Sons v. Vega & Sons Produce, 41 Agric. Dec. 991 (1982).

We have already issued an Order Requiring Payment of Undisputed Amount for $11,090.60 of the amount alleged in the complaint. We have determined that respondent is liable for the remaining $18,943.20, and its failure to pay this sum to complainant is a violation of section 2 of the Act, for which reparation should be awarded, with interest.

ORDER

Within 30 days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $18,943.20, with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum from September 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks an award of reparation against respondent in the amount of $16,363.65 in connection with the shipment of 15 trucklots of mixed vegetables which moved in foreign commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation made by the Department was served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto, denying liability to complainant.

Although the amount claimed in the formal complaint exceeds $15,000.00, the parties waived oral hearing, and accordingly, the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to this procedure, the verified pleadings of the parties are considered a part of the evidence in the case, as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition, the parties were given an opportunity to file evidence in the form of sworn statements. Complainant filed an opening statement, respondent filed an answering statement, and complainant filed a statement in reply. Complainant filed a letter, with attachments, which was considered as a brief. Respondent did not file a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Cal-Mex Distributors, Inc., is a corporation whose address is P.O. Box 1717, Chula Vista, California.

2. Respondent, Valley Brokerage, Inc., is a corporation whose address is 335 South Harbor Boulevard, La Habra, California. At the time of the transactions involved herein respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On or about February 13, 1984, under invoice no. 6364, complainant sold to respondent, and shipped to respondent's customer, one truckload of produce containing tomatoes and eggplants. The parties have agreed during the course of this proceeding that the sum of $50.40 is the correct amount remaining due from respondent to complainant in regard to this transaction.

4. On or about February 22, 1984, under invoice no. 6423, complainant sold to respondent 108 lugs of pink tomatoes at 6.00 per lug, plus $.35 per lug for freight. The tomatoes were shipped from Chula Vista, California to respondent in La Habra, California on or about the same date, and on arrival the load was found to contain only 107 lugs, and to be over-ripe. Complainant and respondent agreed on an adjustment based on 107 lugs at $5.50 per lug, plus $.35 per lug for freight. Respondent has paid complainant the total amount of $625.95 based on this adjustment.

5. On or about March 2, 1984, complainant sold to respondent, and shipped to respondent's customers the following produce, and invoiced respondent as follows by its invoice no. 6432: To Coast Citrus Co.: 198 flats of pink tomatoes at $10.50, or a total of $2,079.00; 54 lugs of pink tomatoes at $9.50, or a total of $513.00; and freight at $.35, or $88.20, for a total of $2,680.20; To Albertson Distribution: 75 W/B crates of eggplants at $6.50, or $487.50, plus $.35 for freight, or $26.25, for a total of $513.75; To Valley Fruit & Produce: 162 lugs of pink tomatoes at $9.50, for $1,539.00; 54 lugs of pink tomatoes at $10.50, or $567.00; 9 W/B crates of eggplants at $6.35, or $57.15; and freight in the amount of $.35, or $78.75, for a total of $2,241.90. The grand total shown by the invoice was $5,435.85. The 75 crates of eggplants were incorrectly invoiced at $6.50, and complainant agreed to change the price to $6.40 per crate making respondent's liability for the 75 crates of eggplants $506.25. At the close of the submission of evidence in this proceeding, on April 20, 1985, respondent paid complainant $2,680.20 for the tomatoes shipped to Coast Citrus Co. In addition on July 20, 1984, respondent tendered to complainant, by means of a check which also tendered payment on other invoices, payment in the correct amount of $2,748.15 for the remaining produce sold under invoice no. 6432. However, complainant did not negotiate the check, in part because of respondent's failure to include at that time payment for the tomatoes shipped to Coast Citrus Co. Accordingly, there remains due and owing from respondent to complainant the sum of $2,748.15 on this invoice.

6. On or about March 4, 1984, under invoice no. 6456, complainant sold to respondent, and shipped to respondent's customers, a mixed load of tomatoes, eggplants, and bell peppers, and a lot of tomatoes. After arrival of the produce complainant and respondent agreed to an adjusted price for all of the produce of $4,675.80. Respondent has already paid complainant this amount.

7. On or about March 8, 1984, under invoice no. 6466, complainant sold to respondent, and shipped to respondent's customers, two lots of bell peppers and one lot of eggplants having a total invoice price of $1,726.20. After arrival of the produce complainant and respondent agreed to an adjusted price for all of the produce of $1,438.50. Respondent has already paid complainant this amount.

8. On or about March 13, 1984, under invoice no. 6488, complainant sold to respondent, and shipped to respondent's customers, two lots of tomatoes having a total invoice price of 3,108.60. Respondent received the merchandise covered by this invoice and tendered payment to complainant in the reduced amount of $1,280.40 on July 20, 1984, by check no. 13792. This check was not negotiated by complainant, and the entire amount of $3,108.60 remains due from respondent to complainant.

9. On or about March 7, 1984, under invoice no. 6493, complainant sold to respondent, and shipped to respondent's customers, 84 W/B crates of eggplants at $6.50, plus $.35 for freight, or a total of $575.40. Respondent's customer received the peppers, and respondent has not paid complainant the agreed purchase price.

10. On or about March 12, 1984, under invoice no. 6508, complainant sold to respondent, and shipped to respondent's customers, three lots of produce, one containing cucumbers, one eggplants, and the remaining lot cucumbers and green bell peppers, at a total invoice price of $1,595.40. Complainant invoiced respondent for an incorrect amount of $8.65 for 36 crates of cucumbers rather than the agreed amount of $7.65. Respondent has paid complainant the correct amount of $1,595.40.

11. On or about March 16, 1984, under invoice no. 6509, complainant sold to respondent, and shipped to respondent's customers, three lots of tomatoes, having a total invoice cost of $2,036.10. Respondent's customers received the produce covered by this invoice, and respondent has tendered payment to complainant in the reduced amount of $1,532.10 by its check no. 13792 on July 20, 1984.

This check was not negotiated by complainant, and the entire amount of $2,036.10 is due from respondent to complainant.

12. On or about March 20, 1984, under invoice no. 6536, complainant sold to respondent, and shipped to respondent's customers, three lots of tomatoes, having a total invoice cost of $1,126.80. After arrival of the tomatoes one lot was lowered in price by an agreement between the parties, which brought the total invoice price to $971.70. Respondent has already paid complainant $429.00 of this amount. The remaining amount of $542.70 was tendered to complainant by respondent as a portion of respondent's check no. 13792 issued July 20, 1984. This check was not negotiated by complainant, in part because other items paid by the check were paid in incorrect amounts. There remains due from respondent to complainant the sum of $542.70 on this invoice.

13. On or about March 28, 1984, under invoice no. 6568, complainant sold to respondent, and shipped to respondent's customers, two lots of tomatoes and one lot of tomatillos. The two lots of tomatoes were billed at $3,855.00, and respondent paid complainant that amount. As to the lot of tomatillos the price was not available at time of billing, and rather than pay the freight in the amount of $36.00, respondent secured complainant's agreement to bill the tomatillos separately. During the course of this proceeding complainant rendered the separate billing in the total amount, including freight, of $468.00. This sum is presently due from respondent to complainant.

14. On or about March 5, 1984, under invoice no. 6572, complainant sold to respondent, and shipped to respondent's customers, one lot of eggplants having a total invoice price of $756.00. Respondent has tendered the amount of $756.00 to complainant for this lot of eggplants by respondent's check no. 13792 issued July 20, 1984. This check was not cashed by complainant, in part because other items paid by the check were paid in incorrect amounts. There remains due from respondent to complainant the sum of $756.00 on this invoice.

15. On or about March 29, 1984, under invoice no. 6575, complainant sold to respondent, and shipped to respondent's customers, three lots of tomatoes for a total invoice price of $3,297.90. After arrival of the tomatoes complainant and respondent agreed to an adjusted price of $2,676.90. Respondent has already paid complainant this amount.

16. On or about April 17, 1984, under invoice no. 6664, complainant sold to respondent, and shipped to respondent's customer, one lot of tomatoes having an invoice price of $332.10. Respondent's customer received the produce covered by this invoice, and respondent tendered payment to complainant in the reduced amount of $278.10 on August 8, 1984, by its check no. 13895. This check was not negotiated by complainant, and the entire amount of $332.10 is due from respondent to complainant.

17. On or about March 18, 1984, under invoice no. 6920, complainant sold to respondent, and shipped to respondent's customer, one lot of eggplants having a total invoice price of $407.40. Respondent has tendered complainant the entire amount due under this invoice, but such amount was included as a part of check no. 13895 issued on August 7, 1984, which included payment in an incorrect amount for another invoice. This check was not cashed by complainant, and consequently the entire amount of $407.40 is due from respondent to complainant.

18. All of the produce in each of the transactions involved in this proceeding originated in Mexico, and was imported into California by complainant prior to shipment to respondent or respondent's customers.

19. The formal complaint was filed on September 25, 1984, which was within nine months after the causes of action herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

Complainant brings this action to recover amounts and balances allegedly due in connection with the sale to respondent of 15 trucklots of mixed vegetables imported by complainant from Mexico. The issues in regard to each invoice must be considered separately.

As to complainant's invoice no. 6364, the total adjusted amount due was $4,306.20. Respondent paid complainant $4,255.80 by check no. 13354 dated May 21, 1984. This left the sum of $50.40 due on this invoice. Although respondent tendered this remaining amount to complainant as a part of its check no. 13895 dated August 7, 1984, such check also contained a payment on invoice no. 6920 in less than the amount claimed due by complainant, and consequently complainant refused to cash the check. There remains due from respondent to complainant as to invoice no. 6364 the sum of $50.40.

In regard to complainant's invoice no. 6423, the original amount of the invoice was $685.80 based on a price of $6.00, plus $.35 freight, for 108 lugs. The parties agree that respondent should be liable for only 107 lugs, but respondent claims that its customer rejected the tomatoes due to overripeness and that this was communicated to Bob Villalobos, president of complainant, by Larry C. McSherry, salesman for respondent. Respondent further claims that complainant's president agreed to a price adjustment of $.50 per lug, leaving a balance due of $625.95. Although complainant has denied that any such agreement was made, complainant accepted and cashed a check from respondent containing payment for the 107 lugs of tomatoes. The check had attached to it a stub showing payment for invoice no. 6423 at $625.95. At the bottom of the stub were typed the words "THE INVOICES LISTED ABOVE ARE PAID IN FULL AS PER BOB V. AND LARRY MCSHERRY." We conclude on the basis of all of the evidence that complainant agreed to the adjustment claimed by respondent and that nothing remains due to complainant on this invoice.

In relation to complainant's invoice no. 6432, by the time submission of evidence in this proceeding was completed the parties had come to an agreement on every item except the price for the 75 crates of eggplants. Respondent maintained that the invoice price of $6.50 per crate was not in accord with the agreed price, and respondent's Larry C. McSherry asserted that upon receiving the invoice he telephoned Bob Villalobos and called his attention to the billing error. Mr. McSherry stated that Mr. Villalobos agreed to change the amount from $6.50 to $6.40, and that respondent then changed the invoice and sent it back for approval. Mr. McSherry contends that the invoice was returned with a note signed by Mr. Villalobos stating that it was all right to change the invoice. A copy of the note was attached to Mr. McSherry's statement, and it simply lists a large number of invoices stating that it is okay to make changes on them. The nature of the change is not specified for any of the listed invoice numbers. Mr. Villalobos does not deny sending the note but states that the reference thereon to invoice 6432 is a typographical error and should read 6433. The lack of specificity in the note leads us to believe that it must have been sent by complainant to accompany invoices changed by respondent, and sent to complainant for approval as respondent contends. We conclude that complainant is bound by the note as it stands, and has not shown that it applies to a different invoice. Accordingly, we have found that complainant agreed to change the price on the invoice to $6.40, and respondent is liable only for this amount. As stated in finding of fact 5, respondent's remaining liability on invoice no. 6432 amounts to $2,748.15.

The parties dispute the original terms of sale, prices, and quantities in regard to various portions of the produce sold under invoice no. 6456. However, the quantity actually shipped is agreed upon by both parties. It is not necessary for us to discuss and decide these issues because we find that the record supports the conclusion that the parties, after arrival of the produce, agreed upon a total invoice cost for the produce in the amount $4,675.80. Although complainant disputes this, and claims instead that the agreed amount was $6,332.70, respondent sent complainant a check on July 6, 1984, in the total amount of $12,303.30, which included the amount $4,675.80 for invoice no. 6456, and so stated on the check stub. The stub also included the words typed in all caps: "THE INVOICES LISTED ABOVE ARE PAID IN FULL". We consider complainant's cashing of this check to be adequate evidence of the settlement agreement claimed by respondent.

In regard to complainant's invoice no. 6466, respondent claims that 42 boxes of bell peppers arrived in bad condition and that such peppers were returned to complainant pursuant to agreement between the parties. Respondent also contends that the parties agreed to an adjusted invoice price of $1,438.50. Complainant claims that it never authorized the return of the peppers, never received such peppers, and that there is no inspection report to support the peppers arriving in bad condition. The record shows that respondent sent complainant a check on April 20, 1984, in the total amount of $8,741.30, which included the amount of $1,438.50 for invoice no. 6466, and so stated on the check stub. The stub also included the words typed in all caps: "THE INVOICES LISTED ABOVE ARE PAID IN FULL AS PER BOB V.". We consider complainant's cashing of this check to be adequate evidence of the settlement agreement claimed by respondent.

In regard to complainant's invoice no. 6488, respondent claims that complainant shipped a quantity of tomatoes in excess of what was ordered, and that a portion of the tomatoes was of a quality below that specified when ordered. Respondent states that complainant was contacted by telephone after arrival of the tomatoes and agreed to a portion of the tomatoes being handled on an open basis. Respondent also alleges that complainant agreed that no inspection need be secured. Respondent submitted in evidence a copy of the invoice, heavily marked, alleging that it was sent to complainant and returned with complainant's okay signifying acceptance of the reduced prices noted thereon. Complainant denies all of respondent's allegations. There is no way of concluding with any certainty from the face of the marked up invoice submitted by respondent that complainant approved the price changes noted thereon. Respondent had the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that complainant agreed to the adjustments claimed. We conclude on the basis of all of the evidence that respondent has not met this burden. The entire invoice amount of $3,108.60 in now due from respondent to complainant.

Respondent asserts that the peppers covered by invoice no. 6493 were placed on an open basis with its customer with complainant's consent, after having arrived in poor condition. Respondent states it that agreed with complainant on June 26, to a price of $4.85.

Complainant denies that it ever agreed to the peppers being handled on an open basis or to an adjusted price. Respondent had the burden of proving the alleged change in the original contract terms and the alleged adjusted price. We find that respondent has failed to meet this burden by a preponderance of the evidence, and is liable to complainant for the total amount of $575.40 on this invoice.

In regard to invoice no. 6508, respondent contends that it was incorrectly billed for $8.65 on 36 crates of cucumbers. Complainant denies this contention, and asserts that the invoice amount is correct. However, on June 15, 1984, respondent paid complainant $1,595.45 on invoice no. 6508, which reflected the lower price alleged by respondent to be the original agreed price. The check stub contained the words typed in all caps at the bottom: "THE ABOVE INVOICES ARE PAID IN FULL." Complainant accepted and cashed the check. We conclude that respondent has shown by a preponderance of the evidence that the original price for the 36 crates of cucumbers was $7.65, and that payment in full has been made to complainant on this invoice.

In regard to complainant's invoice no. 6509, respondent claims that a portion of the tomatoes covered by the invoice arrived in poor condition. Respondent asserts that after arrival of the tomatoes it was agreed with complainant's president that these tomatoes would be handled on an open basis, and that subsequently complainant's president agreed to a reduced price for such tomatoes. Respondent states that a copy of the invoice was marked with the reduced price and returned to complainant's president, and that such invoice was subsequently sent back to respondent with the approving signature of complainant's president. The marked up copy of the invoice submitted by respondent reflects what appear to be initials near the bottom, but we are unable to say with any certainty that these are the initials of complainant's president, and Mr. Villalobos has denied the allegations of respondent in this regard. Respondent had the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that complainant agreed to the adjustments claimed . We conclude on the basis of all of the evidence that respondent has not met this burden. The entire invoice price of $2,036.10 is presently due from respondent to complainant.

In regard to complainant's invoice no. 6536, complainant agreed during the course of this proceeding that respondent's contention that only $542.70 remains due is correct. Since respondent's tender of this amount was by means of a check which included other incorrect payment amounts, complainant did not negotiate the check.

The sum of $542.70 remains due and owing from respondent to complainant in regard to this invoice.

As to invoice no. 6568, the parties agreed that the tomatillos originally on such invoice, without a price other than the cost of freight, should be rebilled. Complainant rebilled the tomatillos separately at $468.00, including freight, and respondent has not objected to this amount. We conclude that such amount is now due and owing from respondent to complainant.

The parties are in agreement as to the amount due on invoice no. 6572, and respondent tendered this amount to complainant in its check no. 13792 issued July 20, 1984. However, since this check included other incorrect payment amounts, complainant did not cash the check. The sum of $756.00 remains due and owing from respondent to complainant on this invoice.

As to invoice no. 6575, respondent claims that the tomatoes arrived in poor condition, and that complainant upon being contacted by respondent agreed to an adjusted price for the load of $2,676.90. Complainant denies respondent's allegations. However, respondent sent complainant a check on July 10, 1984, in the total amount of $6,102.90, which included the amount of $2,676.90 for invoice no. 6575, and so stated on the stub. The check stub also included the words typed in all caps at the bottom: "THE INVOICES LISTED ABOVE ARE PAID IN FULL." We consider complainant's cashing of this check to be adequate evidence of the adjustment claimed by respondent.

As to invoice no. 6664, respondent claims that the price shown on the invoice was incorrect. Respondent states that the agreement of complainant was secured by telephone to the reduced price of $278.10, and that the invoice was so marked in return for complainant's approval. Respondent alleges that the invoice was approved by complainant and returned with Bob Villalobos' initials evidencing such approval. Complainant denies these contentions. Respondent has not furnished any substantive evidence showing that the initials on the invoice belong to Bob Villalobos, and we conclude that respondent has failed to prove that the reduced price is the correct amount. There remains due from respondent to complainant the sum of $332.10 on this invoice.

In regard to the last of complainant's invoices, no. 6920, the parties have agreed that the correct amount due is $407.40. Since respondent's tender of this amount was by means of a check which included another incorrect payment amount, complainant did not negotiate the check. The sum of $407.40 remains due from respondent to complainant as to this invoice.

The total amount which we have found to be still due and owing from respondent to complainant is $11,024.85. Respondent's failure to pay complainant such amount is a violation of section 2 of the Act for which reparation should be awarded to complainant with interest.

ORDER

Within thirty days from the date of this order, respondent shall pay to complainant, as reparation, $11,024.85, with interest thereon at the rate of 13 percent per annum from May 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant sought an award of reparation in the amount of $3,539.33 in connection with the sale of a truckload of honeydew melons in interstate commerce.

Copies of the report of investigation made by the Department were served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent which filed an answer thereto denying liability to complainant. Because the amount claimed as damages is less than $15,000.00, the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 47.20) is applicable. Under this procedure the verified pleadings of the parties are part of the evidence in the case, as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition, the parties were given the opportunity to file evidence in the form of verified statements. Complainant filed an opening statement, and respondent filed an answering statement. In addition, complainant filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Clarence W. Robinson is an individual doing business as Robinson Farms, with an address at P.O. Box 1064, Blythe, California 92226.

2. Respondent, Michael Brothers, Inc., is a corporation with an address at Produce Building, 38 Harris Avenue, Providence, Rhode Island 02903. At the time of the transaction involved in this proceeding respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On October 4, 1983, complainant sold to respondent 120 cartons of 5s honeydew melons at $3.25 per carton for a total price of $390.00, 120 cartons of 6s honeydew melons at $3.25 per carton for a total price of $390.00, and 1,140 cartons of 8s honeydew melons at $2.25 per carton for a total price of $2,565.00, plus palletizing at $.25 per carton for a total price of $345.00, and a thermogard thermometer for $22.50, for a total contract price of $3,712.50, f.o.b. Tom Lange Co., Inc., of Springfield, Illinois acted as the broker for the transaction. The honeydew melons were shipped on October 4, 1983, in interstate commerce, and arrived at respondent's place of business on October 11, 1983, where they were inspected by the federal inspection service.

4. The federal inspection referred to in paragraph 3, above, occurred on October 11, 1983. The melons were still on the truck when the inspection was held at 9:15 a.m. The inspection showed in pertinent part as follows:

Condition of Pack:	Tight to fairly tight.
Quality:	Mature, many clean and generally well formed. Grade defects range 2 to 7 melons (25 to 87%) per carton, average 52% caked on dirt, scars, cuts and misshapen.
Grade:	Fails to grade U.S. No. 1, account of grade defects.

5. As a result of the inspection respondent rejected the load of honeydew melons, and notified the broker that it was doing so. Tom Lange Company notified complainant at 11:00 a.m. on October 11, 1983, that respondent had rejected the load. On complainant's instructions the load was consigned to Paramount Produce, Inc., located in Chelsea, Massachusetts, where it was sold, and an account of sales was provided with net proceeds to complainant of $173.17.

6. When the truckload of melons arrived at Paramount's place of business Paramount notified complainant that 266 cartons of melons were not on the truck. Complainant, on October 13, 1983, at 12:38 p.m., sent a telegram to respondent which stated as follows:

> We are not accepting your unjustified rejection of Mar 5422 shipped on 10/4/83 and notified by Tom Lange Company of Salinas, California 9 am 10/12/83. You had taken off 266 cartons of honeydews therefore you did accept the load. We expect full invoice less any proven damages due to breach of contract.

7. A formal complaint was filed in this proceeding on February 28, 1984, which was within nine months of the time of cause of action herein accrued.

DISCUSSION

Although the respondent contends that the contract provided for the delivery of U.S. No. 1 honeydews, and complainant is inconsistent in its statements as to whether there was a U.S. No. 1 or no grade contract, this issue is immaterial because it is superseded by the overriding question as to whether there was a proper rejection of the truckload of melons. We find upon our evaluation of all of the evidence in this proceeding that respondent properly rejected the truckload, and therefore, must prevail.

Complainant contends that respondent accepted the honeydew melons because it partially unloaded the truck by taking 266 cartons of melons off the truck after the inspection occurred and before the melons went to Paramount Produce, Inc., of Chelsea, Massachusetts, on consignment at complainant's instructions. Complainant contends that the partial unloading of the melons constitutes acceptance of the entire truckload. Unfortunately for complainant it has not proved that respondent was responsible for unloading the 266 cartons from the truck. The evidence reflects that the federal inspection occurred on October 11, 1983, at 9:00 a.m. The evidence further reflects, as shown by the broker's memorandum that complainant was notified on October 11, 1983, at 11:00 a.m. that respondent had rejected the truckload because of the grade defects found by the federal inspection. Therefore, we reject complainant's claim that it was not notified until October 12, 1983, because the statement of an ostensibly neutral third party must be given great weight. See Homestead Tomato Packing Co. v. Mims

Produce, Inc., 43 Agric. Dec. ____ (1984); Kern Ridge Growers v. T. J. Power & Co., 48 Agric. Dec. 425 (1981).

The actions of complainant show clearly that it did not contest the rejection of the load by respondent on October 11, 1983. It was at the direction of complainant on that date that the goods were shipped to Paramount for handling on consignment. That being the case it was complainant's responsibility for any unloading which may have occurred while the goods were in transit from respondent's place of business to Paramount's place of business. There is no evidence to reflect that respondent unloaded any of the goods after it rejected the truckload. We are not much impressed by the statement of the truck driver that the goods were fully intact when he took them from respondent's place of business to that of Paramount since the statement is partially self-serving. It is complainant's burden of proof to show that respondent acted improperly after it rejected the goods, and complainant has offered no solid proof to show that it was respondent rather than the truck driver, Paramount or someone else which took off the 266 cartons involved. Neither are we impressed by complainant's telegram to respondent at 12:38 p.m. on October 13, 1983, indicating that it resinded its acceptance of respondent's rejection. It is more likely because of the short distance between Providence, Rhode Island, and Chelsea, Massachusetts that the goods arrived at Paramount's place of business on October 11, 1983, and certainly no later then the morning of October 12, 1983. It appears to us that complainant was late in complaining to respondent as to the loss of 266 cartons, in any event.

In view of the above the complaint must be dismissed.

ORDER

The complaint in this proceeding is dismissed.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

JOHN LIVACICH PRODUCE INC., a/t/a VISTA-WATSONVILLE SALES, v. CARNIVAL FRUIT CO. INC. PACA Docket No. 2-6874. Decided April 14, 1986.

Burden of proof to show breach of warranty and damages—on respondent. Breach of warranty by complainant. Damages proved by respondent. Payment to suppliers by complainant made while aware of condition problems.

Respondent sustained its burden of proving complainant's breach of warranty of suitable shipping condition on the load of strawberries respondent admittedly accepted, and respondent's damages resulting from the breach. As respondent's damages equal the contract price, respondent is without liability. Respondent is not responsible for complainant's payment to its suppliers made while complainant was aware of the condition problems of the strawberries.

DECISION AND ORDER

This is reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award against respondent in the amount of $1,901.50, in connection with the sale and shipment of a trucklot of strawberries to respondent in interstate commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation prepared by the Department was served upon each of the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent, which filed an answer thereto, denying liability.

Since the amount claimed as damages does not exceed $15,000.00, the shortened procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to such procedure, the report of investigation is considered to be part of the evidence, as are the verified complaint and answer. The parties were given an opportunity to submit additional evidence in the form of verified statements and to file briefs. Complainant submitted an opening statement but respondent chose not to submit any additional evidence. Complainant also filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, John Livacich Produce, Inc. a/t/a Vista-Watsonville Sales, is a corporation whose address is P.O. Box 5519, San Bernardino, California.

2. Respondent, Carnival Fruit Co., Inc., is a corporation whose address 475 N.E. 185th St., Miami, Florida. At the time of the transaction involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On approximately May 19, 1984, complainant sold to respondent 380 trays of strawberries at $4.00 per tray plus $.60 per tray for cooling, $74.00 for tectrol, $22.50 for a Ryan recorder, and $.18 per tray for brokerage, for a total f.o.b. contract price of $1,901.50. The broker in this proceeding, through whom both parties communicated, was The Tobi Company, Inc., Miami, Florida, represented by their employee, Gene Meyers.

4. The strawberries were shipped in interstate commerce to respondent, where they arrived on May 23, 1984, and were federally inspected. The inspection found as follows, in relevant part:

VARIOUS CONTAINERS Range 40° To 42°

SHIPPER: Vista Watsonville Sales
STRAWBERRIES—"Vista 112 Dry Pints"

Applicant States 380 flats.

CONDITION: Berries mostly ripe and firm. Calyxes generally fresh and green, few turning brown. Ranges 5 to 20%, average 20% damage by bruising. Decay ranges 17 to 75%, average, 34% Rhizopus Rot and Gray Mold Rot each in various stages.

5. On May 23, 1984, after receiving the results of the inspection, respondent immediately contacted Mr. Meyers, informed him of the results, and asked him to notify complainant that respondent might only be able to return freight costs. Mr. Meyers then contacted complainant and conveyed the information given to him by respondent. On that same date, Mr. Meyers issued an "Adjustment Form", on which he noted the inspection results, respondent's statement that it would try to return freight, and that he had reported respondent's statement to complainant.

6. Respondent has not paid any part of the contract price to complainant.

7. An informal complaint was filed on January 2, 1985, which was within nine months from when the alleged cause of action herein accrued. A formal complaint was filed on April 29, 1985.

CONCLUSIONS

Respondent claims that the load of strawberries it admittedly received and accepted was found by a federal inspection to be in very poor condition. It therefore told the broker to inform complainant that it might not be able to recover on resale anything in excess of its freight expense. Complainant contends that transportation conditions were abnormal. Complainant asserts further that it never received notice of the condition problems until November 1984, when it received a copy of the May 23, 1984, federal inspection. Complainant states that prior to receiving notice, it made full payment to its suppliers, and therefore demands payment of the entire contract price from respondent.

As this was an f.o.b. sale, respondent, having admittedly accepted the strawberries, became obligated to pay complainant the agreed upon contract price, less damages resulting from any breach of warranty by complainant. Respondent has the burden of proving the breach and resulting damages by a preponderance of the evidence. Farm Market Service Inc. v. Albertson's Inc., 42 Agric. Dec. 429 (1983).

The May 23, 1984, inspection (Finding of Fact 4) clearly reveals that the strawberries were in very poor condition when they arrived at the respondent's place of business. Although pulp temperatures were slightly high, this could not have accounted for the 34% rot found by the inspection. We conclude, therefore, that there was a breach of complainant's suitable shipping condition warranty (7 CFR § 46.43(j)). Respondent was thus entitled to recover damages consisting of the difference between the actual value of the strawberries at the time and place of acceptance and the value they would have had if they had been as warranted. Homestead Tomato Packing Co., Inc. v. Austin J. Merkel Co., Inc., 40 Agric. Dec. 1587 (1981). The actual value is usually determined by the results of a prompt and proper resale. Respondent claims that it resold the strawberries but recovered only enough to pay for its freight expense of $1.20 per tray, or $456.00. Considering the extremely high level of decay shown by the federal inspection, we believe that respondent was fortunate to have recovered even $456.00. We thus conclude that the resale was indeed prompt and proper, even in the absence of an account of sales. Farm Market Service, Inc. v. Albertson's Inc. a/t/a Southco Division, 42 Agric. Dec. 429 (1983). For the value of the strawberries if they had been as warranted, we will use the contract price plus freight, which consists of $2,357.50. Respondent's damages are the difference between $2,357.50 and $456.00, or $1,901.50, which is equivalent to the contract price. Therefore, respondent has not incurred any liability with respect to this transaction.

Complainant's claim that it did not receive notice of the condition problems until November 1984, by which time it had already paid its suppliers, does not cause us to alter our conclusion that respondent is without liability. Complainant's claim is flatly contradicted by the broker, who says complainant was informed of the problems on May 23, 1984 (Finding of Fact 5), the date the strawberries arrived and were inspected. Assuming the truth of the broker's statement, which we have no reason to doubt, complainant apparently paid its suppliers while being aware of the condition problems of the strawberries. Respondent cannot be held responsible for this decision.

Accordingly, the complaint must be dismissed.

ORDER

The complaint is hereby dismissed.

Evidence effect of unsown pleading. Good delivery standards for tomatoes. Inspection report as prima facie evidence.

Where respondent provided unsworn answer its claim backed evidentiary value, as a result of which the only evidence which could be considered regarding its claim the tomatoes did not make good delivery was a federal inspection certificate. However, the certificate showed the tomatoes did make good delivery—hence, complainant was entitled to the full purchase price.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant sought an award of reparation in the amount of $7,193.70 in connection with the sale of a truckload of tomatoes in interstate commerce.

Copies of the report of investigation made by the Department were served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent which filed an unsworn answer thereto denying liability to complainant. Because the amount claimed as damages is less then $15,000.00 the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 47.20) is applicable. Under this procedure the verified pleadings of the parties are part of the evidence in the case as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition the parties were given the opportunity to file evidence in the form of verified statements. Complainant filed an opening statement. Complainant also filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant Bianchi & Sons Packing Company, is a corporation doing business at P.O. Box 190, Merced, California 95341.

2. Respondent, G. & J. Produce, Inc., is a corporation with an address at Suite 106, 2520 Airline Drive, Houston, Texas 77009. At the time of the transaction involved in this proceeding respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On June 21, 1984, complainant sold to respondent 1,728 cartons of tomatoes at $4.00 per carton plus $.15 per carton for palletizing, and $22.50 for a Temperature Recorder for a total contract price of $7,193.70, f.o.b. The tomatoes were shipped on that date in interstate commerce, and were received and accepted by respondent on June 24, 1984.

4. A federal inspection was held with respect to the load of tomatoes on June 25, 1984. It showed in pertinent part with respect to condition as follows:

> Average approximately 30% turning or pink. 70% light red or red. Average 2% decay. From 2 to 22% in most samples, many none average 6% damage by bruising including 5% seirous [sic] damage and including 2% very serious damage scattered throughout pack and lot.

The percentage of condition defects was within tolerance for U.S. No. 1 tomatoes at point of destination.

5. A formal complaint was filed in this proceeding on April 22, 1985. An informal complaint was filed on January 24, 1985, which was within nine months of the time the cause of action herein accrued.

DISCUSSION

There is no issue as to whether the truckload of tomatoes was shipped to respondent by complainant, and received and accepted by respondent upon delivery. Respondent filed a one paragraph Answer which was not sworn, and therefore, which has no evidentiary value. Frank W. Prillwitz, Jr. v. Sheehan Produce, 19 Agric. Dec. 1213 (1960); The Garin Co. v. Affiliated Foods, Inc., 43 Agric. Dec. ___ (1984). Respondent provided no other evidence with the exception of a federal inspection certificate reflecting an inspection which occurred on June 25, 1984. That inspection showed 10% condition defects with respect to the truckload of tomatoes, which is within the tolerance for tomatoes at destination. See 7 CFR 51.1861(a)(2). Such being the case we have no alternative other then to conclude that the tomatoes made good delivery, and that complainant is entitled to recover the full purchase price of the truckload. In view of the above we find that respondent has violated section 2 of the Act, and that reparation should be awarded to complainant, with interest thereon in the total amount of $7,193.70.

ORDER

Within thirty days from the date of this order respondent shall pay to complainant $7,193.70, with interest thereon at the rate of 13 percent per annum from August 1, 1984, until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant sought an award of reparation in the amount of $12,731.35, in connection with the sale of a truckload of tomatoes in interstate commerce.

Copies of the report of investigation made by the Department were served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent which filed an answer thereto in which it admitted it owed an additional $9,563.35, leaving for resolution $3,168.00, respondent having paid the additional $9,563.35. Because the amount claimed as damages is less then $15,000.00 the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 47.20)is applicable. Under this procedure the verified pleadings of the parties are part of the evidence in the case as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition the parties were given the opportunity to file evidence in the form of verified statements. Complainant filed an opening statement and respondent filed an answering statement. Although given an opportunity to do so neither party filed a brief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Corky Foods Corporation, is a corporation with an address at 3452 West Boynton Beach Boulevard, Suite 4, Boynton Beach, Florida 33436.

2. Respondent, S & S Produce, Co., Inc., is a corporation with an address at Louisville Produce Terminal, Units 8 and 10, Louisville, Kentucky 40218. At the time of the transaction involved in this proceeding respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On January 19, 1985, complainant sold to respondent 432 25 pound units of 5×6 tomatoes, 1,008 25 pound units of 6×6 tomatoes, and 140 25 pound units of 6×7 tomatoes, f.o.b., with the entire truckload to be billed at market price at a later time. The tomatoes were shipped on that date to respondent, and were received and accepted by respondent on or about January 22, 1985. Pat Adams, Bonita Springs, Florida, acted as the broker with respect to this transaction.

4. Because of a freeze in Florida the market for tomatoes in the middle of January 1985 was very unsettled. As a result the parties agreed through the broker that pricing would be deferred with billing at market price to occur at a later, unspecified date. The Market News for Cincinnati, Ohio for January 23, 1985, showed that the market for tomatoes was unsettled, and provided no prices. The Market News for the Southeastern United States for January 24, 1985, showed the prices that complainant sought to charge respondent, namely $19.00 for 5×6 tomatoes, $17.00 for 6×6 tomatoes, and $15.00 for 6×7 tomatoes. Complainant issued its billing based upon that Market News report. Although the prices for tomatoes were very high on Wednesday, January 23, 1985, they dropped rapidly from that date until the end of the week. During that week other companies charged less then complainant for similar tomatoes, generally charging the price that respondent seeks to pay in this proceeding, namely $16.00 for the 5×6 tomatoes, $14.00 for the 6×6 and $12.00 for the 6×7 tomatoes. There was never a meeting of the minds between the parties as to what was an appropriate price for the tomatoes.

5. Respondent provided an account of sales which show that it fetched on resale much less then the prices it offered to pay complainant for the tomatoes involved in this proceeding.

6. A formal complaint was filed on April 10, 1985, which was within nine months of the time the cause of action herein aroused.

DISCUSSION

The dispute in this proceeding arises because there was a very unsettled market for Florida tomatoes in mid January, 1985 as a result of a freeze in that state. Complainant seeks to derive the highest price it can based upon federal Market News Reports for the Southeastern United States for the period involved. Respondent, on the other hand, seeks to pay a lesser price based upon it understanding as to what was the true market price for tomatoes during more than a one day period of time for Florida tomatoes. It offered in evidence invoices and brokers' memoranda showing prices which other sellers of tomatoes were charging their customers during the week of January 19 through 25, 1985. Respondent acknowledged that it owed complainant all but $3.00 of the price originally billed by complainant, and paid that amount, which came to $22,989.60, including palletizing at $.15 per carton. Respondent claims, and complainant does not contest, that it was granted $1.00 allowance for every carton of tomatoes sold. Therefore, there is left for resolution a differential of $2.00 per carton between the price billed by complainant and the price offered by respondent.

Because there was no meeting of the minds as to the actual price to be paid, we must look to extrinsic evidence to determine what price the tomatoes should have fetched. In this instance the best evidence is the invoices submitted by respondent showing prices charged by other sellers of tomatoes during the pertinent period of time. There being no indication that the billing at market was to be on a specific day, such as the day of arrival, which was January 22, 1985, it would be inappropriate to accept complainant's billing based upon prices quoted in the Market News on January 23, 1985, which appear to be the highest prices quoted for Florida tomatoes during that week.

We find, based upon a preponderance of the evidence, that the prices offered by respondent, and which it eventually paid, more nearly reflects the true market price for Florida tomatoes during the week of January 19 through 25, 1985. Our conclusion in this regard is bolstered by the statement of Pat Adams, of Adams Brokerage, the broker for the transaction involved herein, who said in a letter to the Department of Agriculture dated June 4, 1985:

> Concerning the load of tomatoes I purchased for S & S Produce, Co., in Louisville, Ky. on Jan 19th 1985. The tomatoes was loaded on an open market basis from Corky Foods Corp. with the understanding they would be billed at market price. The market came out on Wednesday with 5×6 $16.00 6×6 $14.00 6×7 $12.00 but this market price didn't hold and by the end of that week you can buy the same tomatoes a lot less.

The same day Corky Foods Came out with $18.00-$16.00-$14.00 this price was way out of market range, I know of no other shipper who was getting that kind of money for tomatoes on such a market.

After (3) three weeks of trying to work out a fair price I was unable too, So S & S Prod. was forced to take other actions,

In view of the statement by the broker as reinforced by broker's memos and other invoices we cannot conclude other than that the price charged by Corky was too high, and that the price offered by respondent was appropriate.

In view of the above the complaint in this proceeding must be dismissed.

ORDER

The complaint in this proceeding is dismissed.

DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499 et seq.). A timely complaint was filed in which complainant seeks a reparation award in the amount of $2,476.70 in connection with a shipment of strawberries in interstate commerce.

A copy of the report of investigation prepared by the Department was served upon each of the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon the respondent which filed an answer thereto (also entitled "complaint") denying liability to the complainant. The amount claimed in the formal complaint being less than $15,000, the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 47.20) is applicable. Pursuant to this procedure, the verified pleadings of the parties are considered a part of the evidence in this case, as is the Department's report of investigation. The parties were given the opportunity to file additional evidence in the form of verified statements as well as briefs. Complainant submitted an opening statement and a brief. Respondent elected not to submit any additional evidence.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Complainant Sunset Strawberry Growers is a partnership composed of Alton H. Allen and John M. Coelho, whose address is 2400 West Main St., Santa Maria, California 93453. At the time of the transaction involved herein, complainant was licensed under the Act.

2. Respondent V. F. Lanasa, Inc., is a corporation whose address is 317 Hull St., Richmond, Virginia 23224. At the time of the transaction involved herein, respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On May 17, 1984, complainant contracted to sell respondent 1,152 trays of strawberries. The contract price was $4.50 per tray, plus .60 per tray cooling, .15 per tray brokerage fee and a $22.50 fee for a Ryan recorder, for a total invoice price of $6,070.50 f.o.b. The strawberries were shipped in interstate commerce from California to Richmond, Virginia, on May 17, 1984, and arrived at respondent's place of business on May 22, 1984.

4. Respondent inspected the strawberries upon arrival and detected heavy decay and gray mold rot. A federal inspection conducted later on May 22 revealed, in pertinent part: "From 5 to 25%, average 17% decay, mainly Gray Mold Rot and Rhizopus Rot in various stages." The inspection also determined the pulp temperature of the strawberries to be between 46° and 48°.

5. Respondent inspected the strawberries and immediately notified the complainant of their condition. The parties, through a broker, Punelli-Lazopoulos, Inc., agreed that the respondent should sell the load and an adjustment to the contract price would be made at a later date. Complainant now states that he would not have agreed to the adjustment had he known the content of the federal inspection.

6. Respondent has paid complainant $3,593.80.

7. A formal complaint was filed on this matter on September 25, 1984, within nine months of the time the cause of action herein accrued.

CONCLUSIONS

This proceeding involves a dispute in which the complainant claims that he fulfilled the terms of his contract with the respondent, and the respondent claims that the subject of the contract, a shipment of strawberries, did not meet contract specifications, and therefore that it has rightfully withheld full payment. It is the complainant's contention that any damage to the strawberries occurred after the risk of loss and responsibility had shifted to the respondent, thereby entitling the complainant to the full contract price of $6,070.50. As the proponent of a breach of contract claim, the complainant generally carries the burden of proof to a preponderance of the evidence. See New York Trade Assoc. v. Sidney Sandler, 32 Agric. Dec. 702, 705 (1973). However, since the respondent accepted the goods, the burden of proving that the complainant failed to tender the goods in suitable shipping condition falls on the respondent. See U.C.C. § 2-607(4); Roy Rucker Produce v. J. P. Miller Wholesale Produce, 33 Agric. Dec. 871, 873 (1974). Based upon our analysis of the evidence submitted, we conclude that the respondent should prevail.

The terms of the contract are not in dispute. The contract called for the purchase by respondent of 1,152 trays of strawberries on an f.o.b. basis, at a price of $4.50 per tray, plus .60 per tray cooling, .15 per tray brokerage and $22.50 for a Ryan recorder, for a total contract price of $6,070.50. The evidence shows that the strawberries were shipped in interstate commerce on May 17, 1984, and arrived at the respondent's place of business on May 22, 1984. The evidence further demonstrates that when the goods arrived at their destination point of Richmond, Virginia, the respondent conducted an inspection of the goods and determined that due to extensive decay and gray mold rot, the goods did not conform to contract specifications. The parties, through the brokerage firm of Punelli-Lazopoulus, Inc., agreed that the respondent should sell the strawberries and that the parties would work out a price adjustment at a later date.

The complainant bases his breach of contract claim on the findings of a federal inspection performed on May 22. The inspection read in part that the average pulp temperature of the strawberries was 46° to 48°F, considerably higher than the 34° to 36° range dictated in the bill of lading. It is the position of the complainant that the agreement to modify the contract price was based on misinformation supplied by the respondent as to the handling of the strawberries and therefore is void. The complainant contends that the pulp temperatures indicated in the federal inspection are proof that the decay and rot occurred after the strawberries were placed in the possession of the trucker, that is, after the risk of damage in transit had shifted to the respondent. The complainant, relying on this evidence, contends that he fulfilled his obligation under the contract in that he delivered the goods to the trucker in suitable shipping condition as per section 46.43(j) of the regulations (7 CFR § 46.43(j)) and the terms of the f.o.b. contract. Noting that, he demands full payment.

Evidence submitted by the respondent on the issue of breach of warranty of suitable shipping condition included the federal inspection report and the temperature reading taken by the Ryan recorder. The inspection showed that the strawberries averaged 17% decay, well in excess of the acceptable delivery standard. Further, the Ryan recorder indicated that the temperature of the truck's cooling unit was maintained at approximately 36° for the duration of the trip, with predictably warmer readings during the loading and unloading stages. The Ryan recorder evidence appears to support the contention that the strawberries were shipped in accordance with the instructions provided by the complainant in the bill of lading. It must be presumed therefore that any damage or decay to the shipment must have existed prior to the tender of the strawberries to the trucker. We are particularly drawn to this conclusion because of the temperatures shown on the Ryan. The high pulp temperatures could easily result from the percentage of decay in the load. In light of the fact that the complainant offered no evidence as to the condition of the strawberries prior to shipment, the evidence submitted by the respondent is sufficiently substantial to conclude that the complainant did not deliver the goods in suitable shipping condition.

Even if the decay occurred during transit respondent would prevail since complainant agreed to modify the contract. When discussions were held complainant was required to ask all pertinent questions regarding the load. Absent misrepresentation or fraud on the part of respondent, any misunderstanding resulting in a modification is not actionable. Walters Produce, Inc. v. Francis Produce Co., 44 Agric. Dec. ____ (1985).

The complainant's failure to deliver the goods in suitable shipping condition constitutes a breach of the contract. See Garin Co. v. Gelman Commission Co., 32 Agric. Dec. 223, 227 (1973). The standard formula for determining damages when the buyer has accepted the goods is the difference at the time and place of acceptance between the value of the goods accepted and the value of goods conforming to the contract. See U.C.C. § 2-714; Freshpict Fruits v. H. R. Bushman & Son, 29 Agric. Dec. 71, 79 (1970). The method for assessing the value of conforming goods is the f.o.b. contract price plus expenses. See Norfolk Banana Distributors, Inc. v. Standard Fruit & Steamship Co., 34 Agri. Dec. 413, 415 (1975). The contract price was $5,184.00 ($4.50 per tray multiplied 1,152 trays), plus $691.20 for cooling costs and $172.80 for brokerage fees, giving a total of $6,048.00 as the value of conforming goods. In determining the value of the goods accepted, the only evidence available is the agreement between the parties that a fair adjustment would be worked out at a future date. From the pleadings, it appears that the complainant had no objection to the assessment of $3.00 per tray as a reasonable price for strawberries in such decayed condition. Using the $3.00 figure, the value of the goods accepted was $3,456. Subtracting the value of the accepted goods from the value of conforming goods results in a difference of $2,592.00, which represents respondent's damages.

The complainant contends and the evidence shows that the respondent remitted $3,593.80 in payment for the strawberries, $2,476.70 less than the original contract price. Due to the breach of contract by the complainant, however, the respondent is responsible only for the difference between the original contract price and the damages resulting from the breach. Since that figure is less than the amount remitted by the respondent to the complainant, the complainant has received all to which he is legally entitled.

ORDER

The complaint is hereby dismissed.

Because respondent unloaded a truckload of oranges it accepted them; therefore, it had the burden to show it suffered damages because of a breach of complainant's suitable shipping condition warranty. DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.) A timely complaint was filed in which complainant sought an award of reparation in the amount of $1,861.00 in connection with the sale of the truckload of naval oranges in interstate commerce.

Copies of the report of investigation made by the Department were served upon the parties. A copy of the formal complaint was served upon respondent which filed an answer in which it denied the allegations of the complaint. Because the amount claimed as damages is less than $15,000 the shortened method of procedure provided in section 47.20 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR 47.20) is applicable. Under this procedure the verified pleadings of the parties are a part of the evidence in the case as is the Department's report of investigation. In addition the parties were given the opportunity to file evidence in the form of verified statements. Neither party did so. However, complainant filed a brief.

FINDINS OF FACT

1. Complainant, Pure Gold, Inc., is a corporation with an address at P.O. Box 40, Redlands, California 92373.

2. Respondent, Victor's Produce Inc., is a corporation with an address at 3701 "D" East Alameda, El Paso, Texas 79905. At the time of the transaction involved in this proceeding respondent was licensed under the Act.

3. On December 28, 1984, complainant sold to respondent 1,100 cartons of naval oranges at $4.50 per carton for a total contract price of $4,950.00, f.o.b. The transaction was brokered by South Central Produce Brokers, San Antonio, Texas. The oranges were shipped on December 28, 1984, and were received and accepted by respondent on or about January 1, 1985.

4. On January 2, 1985, the oranges were subjected to a federal inspection at respondent's place of business. That inspection showed in pertinent part as follows insofar as condition was concerned:

> Mostly firm. In most samples from 8 to 24%, in some none, average 11% damage by skin breakdown, mostly pitted. Average 1% decay.

5. Respondent has paid complainant $3,089.00 of the $4,950.00 contract price, leaving $1,861.00 unpaid.

6. A formal complaint was filed on June 3, 1985, which was within nine months of the time the cause of action herein accrued.

DISCUSSION

Because respondent unloaded the oranges from the truck and took them into its place of business, it accepted the oranges. Theron Hooker Company v. Ben Gatz Co., 30 Agric. Dec. 1109, 1112 (1971); Sunfresh Distributing Company v. Frank Dania Company, 43 Agric. Dec. ____ (1984). As a result it has the burden of proof to show that it suffered damages because of a breach of contract on the part of complainant. Rydell California Potato Co. v. The Kaufman-Brown Potato Company, 16 Agric. Dec. 1055 (1957). Respondent has failed to sustain its burden of proof in this regard.

The sole issue in this case is whether the percentage of condition defects, namely 11% damage by skin breakdown and 1% decay at destination is so great as to lead us to the conclusion that complainant's warranty of suitable shipping condition was breached. Complainant claims that the oranges were sold as U.S. No. 1. Respondent claims that they were sold as U.S. Fancy. It makes no difference which of the two grades of oranges were involved because pursuant to federal regulations (7 CFR § 51.1091) the tolerances for condition defects are the same for both grades. That provision reads as follows:

> Not more than 10 percent, by count, of the oranges in any lot may fail to meet the requirements relating to color. In addition; not more than 10 percent, by count, of the oranges in any lot may fail to meet the remaining requirements of the specified grade, but not more than one-twentieth of this amount, or one-half of 1 percent, shall be allowed for decay at shipping point: Provided, That an additional tolerance of 2½ percent for a total of not more than 3 percent, shall be allowed for decay en route or at destination."

The above tolerances with respect to either U.S. Fancy or U.S. No. 1 oranges are for the shipping point. With respect to decay the tolerance is specifically increased at destination. The federal inspection showed that there was only 1% decay at destination whereas the tolerance allowed as much as 3% decay. The finding of 11% damage by skin breakdown is so close to the 10% tolerance allowed that we cannot conclude that the oranges exceeded the tolerances allowed at destination. This is particularly true because there is generally some latitude given at destination with respect to the tolerances at point of origin set forth in the regulations. See Pope Packing & Sales, Inc. v. Santa Fe Vegetable Growers Cooperative Association, Inc., 38 Agric. Dec. 101, 104-105 (1979); Denice & Filice Packing Co. v. Super Food Services, Inc., 38 Agric. Dec. 744, 746-747 (1979).

In view of the above, we find that respondent has violated section 2 of the Act. It should be ordered to pay complainant $1,861.00, with interest at the rate of 13% per annum.

ORDER

Within thirty days from the date of this order respondent shall pay complainant $1,861.00 with interest thereon from February 1, 1985 at the rate of 13% per annum until paid.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

ORDER REQUIRING PAYMENT OF UNDISPUTED AMOUNT

This is a reparation proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C § 499a et seq.). A timely complaint was filed on November 5, 1985. Complainant seeks to recover $10,776.70, which amount is alleged to be the purchase price for apples sold to and accepted by respondent Empire Produce, Inc., in five transactions brokered by respondent Erich H. Schulz d/b/a Cascade Marketing Co., between December 26, 1984, and March 19, 1985. Respondent Schulz filed an answer to the complaint on March 12, 1986, in which he denied any liability to complaint. Respondent Empire Produce, Inc., filed an answer to the complaint on March 14, 1986. In this answer, respondent Empire admitted owing complainant $6,505.20 of the $10,776.70 claimed by complainant.

Section 7(a) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 499g(a)) provides, in part:

> If after the respondent has filed his answer to the complaint, it appears therein that the respondent has admit> ted liability for a portion of the amount claimed in the complaint as damages, the Secretary . . . may issue an order directing the respondent to pay the complainant the undisputed amount . . . leaving the respondent's liability for the undisputed amount for subsequent determination.

Accordingly, under the authority of the above quoted section, respondent Empire Produce, Inc., shall pay to complainant, as an undisputed amount, $6,505.20. Payment of this amount shall be made within 30 days from the date of this order with interest thereon at the rate of 13 percent per annum from April 1, 1985, until paid. A failure to pay this amount within 30 days will constitute a violation of section 2 of the Act, 7 U.S.C. § 499b.

Respondents' liability for payment of the disputed amount is left for subsequent determination in the same manner and under the same procedure as if no order for the payment of the undisputed amount had been issued.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

ORDER DENYING PETITION FOR RECONSIDERATION

In this proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. § 499a et seq.), a Decision and Order was issued on November 7, 1985, dismissing the complaint. On December 17, 1985, complainant filed a petition for reconsideration of the Decision and Order under 7 CFR § 499g(c)).

Section 7(c) of the Act (7 U.S.C. § 499g(c)) states that any party adversely affected by the entry of a reparation order may appeal such order to a United States District Court within 30 days from the date of such order. Complainant's petition was filed 40 days after the Decision and Order was issued. Further, the petition was not even mailed to the Department until December 11, 1985, according to the postmark on the envelope, or 34 days after issuance of the Decision and Order. The Secretary, is, therefore, without jurisdiction to consider complainant's petition as an administrative agency has no jurisdiction to reconsider a decision after the decision has, in accordance with the applicable statute, become final due to the expiration of the time allowed for filing a petition for review. Lasky v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 235 F.2d 97 (9th Cir. 1956) aff'd per curiam, 352 U.S. 1027 (1956); Southland Produce Co., a/t/a Keystone Produce Co. v. Caamano Brothers Wholesale, 39 Agric. GOLD COAST PACKING, INC., v. H. SCHNELL & COMPANY, INC., and/or LLOYD MYERS CO. INC. PACA Docket No. 2-6414. Decided April 9, 1986.

Decision by Donald A. Campbell, Judicial Officer.

ORDER UPON REHEARING

In this proceeding under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.) an order was issued December 17, 1984, awarding reparation to complainant against H. Schnell & Company, Inc. in the amount of $3,404.00, plus interest, and against respondent Lloyd Myers Co., Inc. in the amount of $7,522.00, plus interest. The award against respondent Lloyd Myers Co., Inc. was to reimburse complainant for the amount of a check, apparently received from A & J Produce Corp. by Lloyd Myers Co. Inc., in its capacity as the broker who negotiated the conveyance of a load of broccoli from complainant to A & J Produce. Respondent Lloyd Myers Co., Inc. petitioned that this matter be reheard (see J. A. Wood Co. v. Manhattan, 25 Agric. Dec. 1493 (1966)) on the ground that the order of December 17, 1984, was in error in making any award against such respondent.

best copy available

On May 15, 1985, we granted rehearing of this matter for the limited purpose of receiving evidence on the question of whether A & J Produce Corp.'s check No. 9829 in the amount of $7,787.20, made out to Lloyd Myers Co., had ever been received and negotiated by respondent Lloyd Myers Co., Inc.

Complainant filed an opening statement with exhibits attached on August 16, 1985, and on August 21, 1985, respondent Lloyd Myers Co., Inc. was given opportunity to file evidence in the form of an answering statement. Although such respondent applied for, and was granted, two extensions of time in which to submit evidence in the form of an answering statement, it failed to submit any such evidence. Both parties filed briefs.

The record as it now stands contains a copy of an invoice issued by Lloyd Myers to A & J Produce Corp. for the rail car load of broccoli in question, requesting the payment of a total of $7,787.50, with a paid stamp over which is written the date 11/19 and the number 9829; a copy of check no. 9829 drawn by Joseph Levantino, secretary of A & J Produce Corp. on that company's account with Marine Midland Bank in Bronx, New York for the amount of $7,787.20 to the order of Lloyd Myers Co. and dated 11/19/82; a copy of an account reconciliation from Marine Midland Bank-New York showing that check no. 9829 in the amount of $7,787.20 was paid by that bank on 11/24/82; and a letter from Joseph Levantino under the letterhead of A & J Produce Corp. stating that check no. 9829 was issued by A & J Produce Corporation in the amount of $7,787.20 to Lloyd Myers on November 19, 1982, in payment for a load of broccoli, and that such check was negotiated by Lloyd Myers. On the basis of all of the evidence submitted in this proceeding it is our conclusion that Lloyd Myers Co., Inc. has been paid the amount of $7,787.20 for the load of broccoli in question which was shipped by complainant. Consequently, our order of December 17, 1984, was correct and is hereby reinstated, except that the reparation awarded therein, with interest, shall be paid within thirty days from the date of this order.

Copies of this order shall be served upon the parties.

The Department also was advised that a discharge in the bankruptcy proceeding would be a release of the claim before the Department.

11 U.S.C. § 362 provides for an automatic stay against continuing an action involving a debt once a party has filed a petition under the Bankruptcy Code. Therefore, in accordance with 11 U.S.C. § 362, this reparation proceeding is hereby continued until the Department receives proper notification that the Chapter 11 proceeding now pending in the United States Bankruptcy Court has been closed, dismissed, or converted to straight bankruptcy, or that the debts have been discharged through confirmation of a Plan of Arrangement.

DEFAULT DECISION AND ORDER

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This proceeding was instituted under the Plant Quarantine Act of August 20, 1912, as amended (7 U.S.C. §§ 151–164a and 167) (Act) by a complaint issued by the Administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, United States Department of Agriculture. The complaint was filed with the Hearing Clerk on November 22, 1985. The complaint alleged that the respondent violated sections 319.56–2(e) and 319.15(a) of the regulations (7 CFR §§ 319.56–2(e) and 319.15(a)).

Copies of the complaint and the Rules of Practice governing proceedings under the Acts were served by the Hearing Clerk, by certified mail, upon respondent on December 2, 1985. On December 27, 1985, respondent was sent, by regular mail, a notice that her answer had not been received by the Hearing Clerk in the allotted time.

Pursuant to section 1.136 of the Rules of Practice (7 CFR § 1.136) applicable to this proceeding, respondent was informed in the complaint and the letter of service that an answer should be filed with the Hearing Clerk within twenty (20) days after service of the complaint, and that failure to deny or otherwise respond to the allegations in the complaint and request an oral hearing would constitute an admission of such allegations and a waiver of such hearing. More than twenty (20) days have elapsed since respondent was served with the complaint in question. Respondent has not filed an answer to date. This Decision and Order, therefore, is issued pursuant to sections 1.136 and 1.139 of the Rules of Practice applicable to this proceeding (7 CFR §§ 1.136 and 1.139).

Accordingly, the material facts alleged in the complaint, which are admitted by respondent's failure to file an answer, are adopted and set forth herein as the findings of fact.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Sonia Hernandez, herein referred to as the respondent, is an individual whose address is 252 South 4th Street, Brooklyn, New York 11211.

2. On or about November 20, 1984, the respondent imported into the United States at Houston, Texas, from Mexico approximately eighteen (18) guava and two (2) pounds of apples, in violation of section 319.56-2(e) of the regulations (7 CFR § 319.56-2(e)) because the guava and apples were not imported under permit, as required.

3. On or about November 20, 1984, the respondent imported into the United States at Houston, Texas, from Mexico approximately twenty (20) nodes of sugarcane in violation of section 319.15(a) of the regulations (7 CFR § 319.15(a)) because the sugarcane was not imported under permit, as required.

CONCLUSION

By reason of the facts in the finding of fact set forth above, respondent has violated the Acts and regulations promulgated thereunder. Therefore, the following Order is issued.

ORDER

Respondent is hereby assessed a civil penalty of five hundred dollars ($500), which shall be paid within thirty (30) days from the date this Order becomes effective. This civil penalty shall be made payable to the "Treasurer of the United States," by certified check or money order, and shall be forwarded to Sherrie Kopka Kennedy, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Office of the General Counsel, Room 2422, South Building, Washington, D. C. 20250-1400.

This Order shall have the same force and effect as if issued after full hearing and shall be final and effective thirty-five (35) days after service of this Decision and Order upon respondent, unless there is an appeal to the Judicial Officer pursuant to section 1.145 of the Rules of Practice applicable to this proceeding (7 CFR § 1.145).
